TORONTO, Feb. 16. —A plan by which Congregationalist, Methodist and Presbyterian congregations may co-operate pending the consummation of organic union has been issued by the "central committee on co-operation," appointed by the three churches. The system of co-operation, it is suggested, is to be applied where at present there is overlapping in existing fields, in districts where no religious work has been done, and in work among foreigners. Local committees on which each of the negotiating churches is represented will have charge of the work and will be responsible for defining the fields. The local committee must also consider the assets and liabilities of the different congregations which propose to unite, as well as all the church property on a field on which co-operation is to be carried out. This property, it is decided, should be the property of the church to which the field is to be assigned. Neighboring congregations must be consulted before any rearrangement of fields is undertaken by the co-operation committee. The plan is signed by Dr. Baird, of the Presbyterian Church, Dr. Crown, of the Methodist Church, and Rev. W. T. Gunn, secretary of the Congregational Union of Canada.

Copyright, 1907, by the MacMillan company.

They did not see us, and we watched them for some time. They were wild dogs. In the rock wall was a horizontal fissure, evidently the lair where their mother had left them and where they should have remained had they been obedient. But the growing life, that in Lop Ear and me had impelled us to venture away from the forest, had driven the puppies out of the cave to frolic. I know how their mother would have punished them had she caught them.

But it was Lop Ear and I who caught them. He looked at me, and then we made a dash for it. The puppies knew no place to run except into the lair, and we headed them off. One rushed between my legs. I squatted and grabbed him. He sank his sharp little teeth into my arm, and I dropped him in the suddenness of the hurt and surprise. The next moment he had scurried inside.

Lop Ear, struggling with the second puppy, scowled at me and intimated by a variety of sounds the different kinds of a fool and a bungler that I was. This made me ashamed and spurred me to valor. I grabbed the remaining puppy by the tail. He got his teeth into me once, and then I got him by the nape of the neck. Lop Ear and I sat down and held the puppies up and looked at them and laughed.

They were snarling and yelping and crying. Lop Ear started suddenly. He thought he had heard something. We looked at each other in fear, realizing the danger of our position. The one thing that made animals raging demons was tampering with their young. And these puppies that made such a racket belonged to the wild dogs. Well we knew them, running in packs, the terror of the grass eating animals. We had watched them following the herds of cattle and bison and dragging down the calves, the aged and the sick. We had been chased by them ourselves more than once. I had seen one of the folk, a woman, run down by them and caught just as she reached the shelter of the woods. Had she not been tired out by the run she might have made it into a tree. She tried and slipped and fell back. They made short work of her.

We did not stare at each other longer than a moment. Keeping tight hold of our prizes, we ran for the woods. Once in the security of a tall tree, we held up the puppies and laughed again. You see, we had to have our laugh out, no matter what happened.

CHAPTER VII.

AND then began one of the hardest tasks I ever attempted. We started to carry the puppies to our cave. Instead of using our hands for climbing, most of the time they were occupied with holding our squirming captives. Once we tried to walk on the ground, but were treed by a miserable hyena, who followed along underneath. He was a wise hyena.

Lop Ear got an idea. He remembered how we tied up bundles of leaves to carry home for beds. Breaking off some tough vines, he tied his puppy's legs together and then, with another piece of vine passed around his neck, slung the puppy on his back. This left him with hands and feet free to climb. He was jubilant and did not wait for me to finish tying my puppy's legs, but started on. There was one difficulty, however. The puppy wouldn't stay slung on Lop Ear's back. It swung around to the side and then on in front. Its teeth were not tied, and the next thing it did was to sink its teeth into Lop Ear's soft and unprotected stomach. He let out a scream, nearly fell and clutched a branch violently with both hands to save himself. The vine around his neck broke, and the puppy, its four legs still tied, dropped to the ground. The hyena proceeded to dine.

Lop Ear was disgusted and angry. He abused the hyena and then went off alone through the trees. I had no reason that I knew for wanting to carry the puppy to the cave except that I wanted to, and I stayed by my task. I made the work a great deal easier by elaborating on Lop Ear's idea. Not only did I tie the puppy's legs, but I thrust a stick through his jaws and tied them together securely.

At last I got the puppy home. I imagine I had more pertinacity than the average folk, or else I should not have succeeded. They laughed at me when they saw me lugging the puppy up to my high little cave, but I did not mind. Success crowned my efforts, and there was the puppy. He was a plaything such as none of the folk possessed. He learned rapidly. When I played with him and he bit me I boxed his ears, and then he did not try again to bite for a long time.

I was quite taken up with him. He was something new, and it was a characteristic of the folk to like new things. When I saw that he refused fruits and vegetables, I caught birds for him and squirrels and young rabbits. (We folk were meat eaters as well as vegetarians, and we were adept at catching small game.) The puppy ate the meat and thrived. As well as I can estimate, I must have had him over a week. And then, coming back to the cave one day with a nestful of young hatched pheasants, I found Lop Ear had killed the puppy and was just beginning to eat him. I sprang for Lop Ear—the cave was small—and we went at it tooth and nail.

And thus, in a fight, ended one of the earliest attempts to domesticate the dog. We pulled hair out in handfuls and scratched and bit and gouged. Then we sulked and made up. After that we ate the puppy. Raw? Yes. We had not yet discovered fire. Our evolution into cooking animals lay in the tight rolled scroll of the future.

Red Eye was an atavism. He was the great discordant element in our horde. He was more primitive than any of us. He did not belong with us, yet we were still so primitive ourselves that we were incapable of a co-operative effort strong enough to kill him or cast him out. Rude as was our social organization, he was, nevertheless, too rude to live in it. He tended always to destroy the horde by his unsocial acts. He was really a reversion to an earlier type, and his place was with the Tree People rather than with us who were in the process of becoming men.

What He Was Showing.

A young man sitting in a subway car with legs crossed and one foot showing a highly polished shoe and silk sock extended so far into the aisle as to make it almost impossible for people to pass was brought to a sense of his disregard for others by three young women who sat opposite. One said, "I wonder if he is showing his foot or his shoe?" The second said loud enough to be heard above the car clatter, "I think he wants to show his clocked socks—watch it." "No," said the third; "he's only showing his bad manners." The foot came down and was lost in the crowd which got off at the next station.—New York Tribune.

A Historic Spot.

Linlithgow palace, on the shore of the beautiful sheet of water of that name in Scotland, is somewhat square and heavy looking and is full of historic interest. Linlithgow was the birthplace of Mary, queen of Scots; in Linlithgow church James IV. of Scotland was forewarned by an apparition of the coming disaster at Flodden Field; in its streets the regent Murray was shot; close by the town Edward I. had two ribs broken by his horse the night before Falkirk, and on its loch a chancellor of the exchequer, bent on economy, issued instructions that the royal swans should be kept down to a dozen.—Argonaut.

If Trinity-St. Andrews win over George St. next Thursday night, a three-cornered tie will exist. Should the Methodists register a victory, the league honors are theirs.

OPEN AIR RINKS ARE SUCCESS

CHILDREN NOT THE ONLY ONES WHO PATRONIZE THEM.

The young folks and not a few of the older ones are taking great enjoyment out of the three municipal rinks which are under the supervision of Commissioner Harry Evans, and, although the rinks are without caretakers, the triple [illegible] have been conducted with less trouble and fewer complaints than last winter, when the best the city fathers could do was to maintain one rink and a caretaker. Boys made a practice of loafing at the rink last winter, and also used a small building in which they misconducted themselves.

With no places available to congregate, the unruly element is absent this season, and the rinks can be said to be a success.

HEAR CHANCELLOR McCRIMMON, GRAND OPERA HOUSE SUNDAY NIGHT

ARTILLERY LOOKED UPON AS DECIDING FACTOR IN THE COMING BATTLE TEST

Constant Thundering of British Guns All Through Long Dark Winter Has Deeper Meaning Than Scattering of Death and Destruction.

BRITISH AND FRENCH CONFIDENT

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

British Headquarters in France, Friday, Feb. 16. — The severe cold of the past month is gradually moderating, and it is easy to sense all along the battle line an unmistakable quickening which tells of the approach of spring and foreshadows the coming to grips of the greatest armies yet assembled in the world war. In anticipation of eventualities, the Germans have removed civilian populations from cities and towns in proximity to their line, but no such precaution has been felt necessary behind the Allied front. British guns, never silent, are beginning to roar more steadily. Tonight, heard from a distance along the Somme, the bombardment might easily be mistaken for the rumbling echoes of a passing summer storm. A chorus of guns rises and falls like great peals of thunder, and there are flashes in the darkened skyline like the play of lightning along the horizon.

The artillery is looked upon as the deciding factor in the coming battle, and the constant thundering of British guns all through the long, dark winter has had a deeper meaning than the casual scattering of death and destruction. It has meant the careful training of officers and men in the modern arts of gunnery from the delicate timing and placing of curtains of fire just in front of advancing infantry to the most skilful co-operation of airplanes and guns on hurling long-distance shells against selected targets far behind the German lines. There is grim realization of the fact that it will be tedious work trying to blast the Germans out of their main lines of defence, but British and French commanders are confident that they will eventually force the fighting into the open. While recognizing the strength of the resistance which the Germans are likely to make, British officers state that their information, obtained in continuous trench raids, shows that recent German concentration is not as formidable as it appears, and that many of the so-called new divisions are merely a rearrangement of divisions.

FIRST GUN IN BIG CAMPAIGN BE THERE

Mr. T. E. Bradburn will be chairman.

SIXTEEN SAILING SHIPS ARE SUNK BY RUSSIANS

FRONTS QUIET

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

PETROGRAD, Feb. 17—(War Office statement):—

Caucasian front: Heavy snow storms are raging. On the Black Sea our vessels destroyed sixteen sailing schooners off the coast of Anatolia.

MAJOR W. F. EATON

Of Hamilton, who has been appointed to the staff of the Assistant Director of Recruiting for Canada.

WHY RECRUITING IN THIS CITY HAS COME TO STANDSTILL

The Pledge of Support Made by Prominent Citizens When 247th Battalion Was Organized Have Not Been Carried Out—Blasted Personal Ambitions Sent Some Sulking to Tents.

If recruiting has been a failure so far as raising men for the 247th Battalion is concerned, it has certainly not been the fault of the officers in charge. No battalion in Canada was ever launched under more favorable auspices so far as this feature was concerned. The Commanding Officer and the next in rank both went to the front in the early months of the war. They saw service in some of the fiercest battles in Flanders. Both were promoted, both wounded, and both were invalided home because they were no longer fit for active duty.

Surely no two better officers could be found for the work of raising another battalion. They are ready not only to supervise the work of recruiting here, but to lead that battalion to Europe, and, if need be, to take it as a unit to the trenches. No reversion in rank would be necessary in their cases, as both have had experience in trench warfare.

◆ ◆ ◆ ◆

The local recruiting officers have resorted to every device to fill the ranks. Nothing in the way of energetic action has been wanting. The name of every eligible man in the district was taken and a personal appeal was made to each by men who had themselves made the sacrifice which they asked of others.

◆ ◆ ◆ ◆

And yet, after six months of effort, there are less than two hundred men in the ranks of the new battalion. The partial failure cannot be charged to the officers in any measure, nor even attributed to indifference on the part of the young men. The trouble lies deeper than that. It is unfortunate, but none the less true, that local jealousies and strife have been at the root of the difficulty.

◆ ◆ ◆ ◆

Fifty-eight prominent residents of Peterborough united in a request to the Minister of Militia for authority to raise a new battalion. Deputations waited upon Sir Sam Hughes with the same purpose in view. Every man who signed the petition, every man who went to Lindsay or Ottawa as a delegate, pledged his support and hearty co-operation. Five hundred recruits as a starter were assured, and these would in all probability have been secured had the promoters of the move for a new battalion remained true to their promises.

◆ ◆ ◆ ◆

The deck of cards had been stacked, and yet the game went against the manipulators. Events did not fall out according to the plans that had been so carefully laid. There is no necessity for referring more explicitly to this unfortunate fiasco. The matter has been an open secret for months.

◆ ◆ ◆ ◆

The men who joined in the petition, seeing their house of cards torn down about their ears, immediately assumed an attitude of cold indifference toward the work of recruiting. In a word, they quit in a body, some of them even giving up office in and active connection with the Patriotic League. When Major Campbell, the recruiting officer, met with a number of business man in the city to discuss ways and means, the attitude of the malcontents was laid bare and their true sentiments unmasked.

◆ ◆ ◆ ◆

Is the part Canada takes in the war to be regulated by a political machine? Are blasted personal ambitions to be permitted to interfere with the safety of the Empire? There is still a chance to raise the 247th Battalion up to full strength before conscription is resorted to. All that is required is co-operation. Let the Fifty-eight who promised so much at the start implement these promises, even at this late date, and half the battle at least will be won. Peterborough will earn the distinguished honor of sending across the sea another battalion raised by voluntary enlistment.

◆ ◆ ◆ ◆

A last grand effort is to be made next week. Every class of citizens should do hteir duty. The man in office should not claim exemption on the plea that his services are invaluable to the public. No laborers can consistently be asked to enlist if well-paid employes in civic or federal offices continue to sit tight in their armchairs. The Fifty-eight should suppress their heartburnings and get into the campaign with their old-time vigor.

PETERBOROUGH REVIEW COMPANY, LTD. INCORPORATED BY LETTERS PATENT

A. H. Stratton, T. F. Matthews, James Kendry Ex-M.P., E. A. Peck Ex-M.L.A. and James Lynch the Shareholders Whose Names Appear in the Articles of Incorporation—New Management Outline Their Program and Political Policy.

Secretary of State Patenaude has issued letters patent incorporating The Peterborough Review Company, Limited. The Review has been for the past six months under new management, but the organization of the company was completed last week, when the articles of incorporation were formally recorded at Ottawa. The leading shareholders are:

A. H. Stratton,
T. F. Matthews,
James Kendry, Ex-M.P.
E. A. Peck, Ex-M.L.A.
James Lynch.

This is the most representative and strongest company which has ever controlled the fortunes of The Review, and this paper, that has made such progress under the present management, has now a brighter prospect for success than ever. Since the present management took hold the circulation has increased by over one thousand, the advertising patronage has been encouraging, and from every source the management has received assurance that The Review is appreciated now more than ever it has been in its history. There is clear sailing ahead.

What We Promise.

The management of The Review are out to make it the leading Conservative organ in Central Ontario. We have the push, the energy, the business and other qualifications required to attain this goal. Our aim is to get The Review into the hands of every Conservative in this district, and we are convinced that the party of the second part will read it for its news value.

It is almost unnecessary to add that The Review will continue to support the Conservative party and that it will yield loyal allegiance to any nominee of that party, either in the Federal or the Provincial field. In regard to the great measures which the Conservative party have carried out under the first leadership of Sir John Macdonald and his successors, and later on by Sir James Whitney in the Province, and the work they have done for the upbuilding of Canada and the preservation of our nation, and our recognition as a portion of the Empire, this paper will be in full accord.

Local Issues Paramount.

The management of The Review recognize that the local field should receive special attention. The paper will always give the welfare and progress of the city and county all possible prominence. What goes on in this district is of vitally more interest to the readers of The Review than what transpires abroad. This does not preclude, however, a daily resume of the general news of the world. Our war despatches will still remain a feature. In the editorial department we will continue to discuss local topics instead of striving to take a part in the consideration of matters beyond the paper's jurisdiction.

The Review will recognize no creed, and sectarian strife will find no place in its columns. The world is too small for anything of the kind, the peace and harmony of the city a matter of too much moment to be disturbed by petty squabbling over issues that lie entirely between men and their Maker. Giving every class, every sect, a fair show, we propose to run a newspaper, not an organ to breed discord in the community. Even a man's political faith should not be used against him or held up as a reproach when he takes a stand on any question that concerns the life of this city or district. The old days when it was considered good policy to judge a man, even in social circles, by his political faith, or to form an estimate of his worth according to the creed which he professes, have passed away with other relics of the period of the cave man, and The Review does not propose to do anything to recall those times.

PTE. RALPHSON OF 93rd BATT. DIES IN ACTION

LT. W. P. EASTWOOD GETS "HIS WINGS" FOR THE AIR SERVICE.

CANADIAN BANDSMEN IN ENGLAND GRADED

Pte. John S. Ralphson, who went overseas with the 93rd Batt., is reported killed in action. Pte. Ralphson was a native of England and had spent some years in Peterborough. He was a member of St. George's Church. It is understood his wife and family returned to England some time after the battalion went overseas.

Lieut. W. P. Eastwood, who left here with the 39th Batt., is now a fully qualified member of the Aviation Corps, and has been given "his wings." His father, Major Eastwood, expects to hear in his next letter that Lieut. Eastwood is in France.

All bandsmen in England have been graded as A2, B and B2. Men who are fit for France but have not had the training are graded A2, and B men are those who are fit for band duty only. B2 men are for duty in England. Every A2 man will take trainng to prepare him for service in France and 12 members of the 6th Batt. (formerly the 39th band) are taking a ten days' course in Red

RETURN OF BAND AND OFFICERS

DEFENDS BAND

Editor Review: Some comment having been made in Peterborough upon the return of the 93rd Batt. band, etc., I might be allowed to give a short history of the battalion which would serve to set at rest much of the comment of those who, with all the best intentions in the world, no doubt, are nevertheless not going to the front themselves.

(1) The handling of 1,000 men from their starting at Peterborough until they reached the firing line was a most difficult and arduous work and reflected the highest credit upon the officers, n.c.o's, band and men of the battalion.

(2) They had all been promised to go to the front as a unit, and were all ready to go to the front, and willing, nay, delighted, but because it said that the casualties amongst the men at the front had been greater than expected, it was necessary that reinforcements be sent over immediately and those best trained went first, and so the battalion had to be broken up.

(3) The band was enlisted for playing purposes, to play while others trained, and it was not trained. It had to practise even while others trained, and when its services were

MILITIA OFFICERS TO REPORT AT ONCE TO COL. D. WALKER

Every Man Receives a Circular Asking If He Has Offered to Enlist for Overseas Service, and If Not, Why Not

Col. Duncan Walker, of the 57th Regiment, acting under orders from Militia Headquarters, has sent to each officer of that regiment still in civilian's attire a circular letter in which the question is asked: "Have you offered to enlist with the overseas service? If not, why not?" Each recipient of the circular is requested to send in an answer at once.

There are a number of members of the 57th Regiment still in private life. These can be called out at any time for home defence, and that this course is contemplated is apparent from the step taken with regard to the officers. The new order will affect numbers of local military men, some of them in prominent public positions.

There are 60,000 men in Canada who belong to the militia but who for various reasons have not offered to go overseas. A number of these are to be called out at once, according to the public statement made by Premier Borden, they to be used for home defence, so as to relieve an equal number of enlisted men for duty at the front. The chances are that in less than a month every Militia man, officers and privates, will be on duty, the issue of the circulars in question being regarded as the preliminary step.

PETERBOROUGH, SATURDAY, FEBRUARY 17, 1917

TOMORROW NIGHT'S MEETING.

CHANCELLOR McCRIMMON of McMaster University, who will be the chief speaker at the recruiting meeting in the Grand Opera House tomorrow night, is recognized as one of the most finished orators in any line in Canada. He is known all over the country and has always been a favorite speaker before Canadian clubs.

Dr. McCrimmon has made a study of the recruiting problem. He can speak with authority on the subject, and needs no apology for his appearance on such a platform. The university and the church with which he is identified have done their share and have sent their quota of men to the front. The address tomorrow night should be a new inspiration for the work in hand, and every resident of Peterborough interested in the subject—and who is not?—is asked to attend.

CONSCRIPTION COMING.

THE GOVERNMENT, it seems, intends to lead up to what will really be conscription by easy stages, although no such harsh term is used in connection with the proposition. The Militia Act is the term spoken in official circles. It is probable that inside of two weeks all the members of the militia at present in mufti will be called out to drill two nights a week. This will mean everybody. Every man must go or be brought by a corporal's guard to do his duty.

Every militia regiment has been depleted by the number of men who have enlisted for overseas service, and the next step will be to bring these up again to at least their former strength. Volunteers will be asked for. If the young men fail to respond, then the Militia Act will be put in force.

The young men of Canada still have a chance to redeem themselves. If they fail again they know what to expect. Before resorting to conscription the Government will exhaust every possible method of persuasion.

The Government also makes another announcement that is likely to meet with general approval. The incomplete battalions now in the country are to be amalgamated. This will do away with so much wasted energy, and will enable the Militia Department to send detachments to Europe when required instead of waiting months for the battalion to be recruited up to strength. What the Empire needs is men, and men must be provided even though some particular district fails to furnish its fair quota.

THE PROMISED PULP MILL.

THERE ARE THOUSANDS of acres of land in Peterborough County and in the Trent Valley that are covered with timber valuable for the manufacture of paper. Why do not some enterprising capitalists get together and build a pulp mill in this vicinity, as Sir Adam Beck suggested in his address in Toronto the other day? The price of paper is abnormally high now, and is likely to remain up long after the war is over. There will always be a ready market for the product of such a mill. The local supply of raw material would last for years, and the completion of the Trent Canal will open up a wider field.

A pulp mill in this district would bring new prosperity to the city and county. The price of land would go up and remunerative work would be found for a small army of men in the mill and in the woods when the war is over. Farmers with timber could employ themselves during the winter months as profitably as in the summer time. The so-called "bad lands" of the north would take on a new value, and the now poverty-pinched residents would find themselves in the possession of new means of earning a comfortable living.

THE OFFICIAL FLOGGING.

THE BOWMANVILLE Statesman says, with commendable wisdom:

> It is hardly fair for the enterprising Daily Review of Peterborough to compare town and city schools with country schools in reference to Entrance examinations. Should not a town or city teacher who has only an Entrance class to teach—usually, too, an experienced male teacher, at a salary of $1000 to $1500—pass 90 per cent. of his candidates as compared with pupils from country schools, taught chiefly by young girls in short skirts with a full range of classes from the abc-darians to the fourth class to teach? The teacher in an urban school who has only one fourth class to teach has a pretty soft berth compared with an average teacher in an ungraded country. Why the urban teacher should receive a salary double or more that of the country teacher, we have never been able to understand. Not that we wouldn't pay the urban teacher $1000; because we would, and if we had our own way, any public school teacher who is not worth $800 to $1200 a year should not be allowed to have charge of a school.

The Review compared the Entrance results of city and country schools, not to reflect in any way on the former, but to make the point that these schools will never reach a proper degree of efficiency until they are consolidated and placed on the same footing as to grading and teaching staffs as the city institutions.

The stand taken by The Statesman justifies the assumption that the editor himself has at some time or other been a school teacher. At any rate, he understands the responsibilities which rest upon the man or woman whose vocation is the training of the young. The character of the future generation depends upon the teacher's efficiency. If there is a profession on earth that calls for the best men and women, it is that of the teachers. They deal with the human mind when it is receptive and when impressions that last throughout life are formed. As the twig is bent so is the tree inclined. The preacher has none of the opportunities for good, none of the chances in moulding character, that the teacher has, and yet, by some process of reasoning not perfectly clear, the pastor is generally paid fifty per cent. more than the other, and is usually provided, besides, with a free residence.

We believe The Statesman is wise according to the wisdom of earth. It must know that many things are strangely out of joint in this world. Children after all are not so well cared for as some domestic pets and other livestock. A man with a valuable horse is vastly more concerned with the qualifications of the trainer to whom he entrusts the animal to be prepared for its life work than he is about those of the teacher who brings up his child. A dog fancier will not whip an erring canine lest he destroy its spirit, while he still adheres to the old maxim of the past ages with reference to sparing the rod and spoiling the child.

Yes, children are still whipped with official sanction, too. A boy breaks the law, and the magistrate turns him over to the tender mercies of the official flogger. That instrument of modern torture, the cat-o'-nine-tails, is used. The victim never forgets, and it goes without saying that he never forgives.

The vagrant and predacious cur escapes, a horse balks on the street and kicks himself out of bondage. The man who would beat that horse as the officially-flogged child is whipped, would be arrested and fined. No magistrate has ever been known to order a policeman to take a fractious horse into a back yard and lash it until ridges appear on its body. The child of today, in spite of all our church-warmed civilization and humanity, often fares worse than the dog or the horse.

The excuse is given that the parents consent to such punishment. Then it is time to look after such parents themselves. If they whipped the boy as the court whips him the same magistrate would very likely fine or send the parents to jail.

Horses and dogs are worth money in the open market. Children are not. Perhaps, after all, that accounts for the difference in the treatment accorded them.

WHY NOT!

MAGISTRATE DUMBLE says he has no authority to order a boy whipped unless the parents or guardians consent. He has no authority, either, to send a juvenile to the gallows. According to his reasoning it would seem that if a magistrate ever decides that hanging is what a boy needs, he can send him to his death provided the parents offer no objection.

LESSONS FROM THE FUEL FAMINE.

PETERBOROUGH has had its lesson from the severe winter and the scarcity and high price of fuel. Now is the time to begin thinking of ways and means to prevent a recurrence of present conditions. The householders of the city are practically at the mercy of the mine owners and the railroads of the United States, while there is an unlimited supply of white coal at the city's door.

Sooner or later electricity must be made the fuel in common use. This will be no more of a revolution than that brought about by the present method of lighting. A local resident who has devoted a great deal of study to this subject and who has gathered statistics from other places where electric heating is used, proposed to try the experiment in his own house this winter. Arrangements for the supply were completed with the Utilities Commission, but the owner found that the cost of installing a single plant would be greater than he cared to undertake. The matter was accordingly dropped.

This electric heating has long since passed the experimental stage. It has resolved itself into a question of ways and means and expense. As in lighting, the extent of the latter depends entirely upon the amount of white coal consumed. With electric heat in his home, the householder every season would not be confronted with the bogey of a steadily climbing price of fuel or threatened with a failure of the supply.

COWARDICE OR WHAT!

AT THE MEETING of the Local Council of Women, Mrs. Mowat asked if a man who refused to enlist voluntarily, but was conscripted, would be of any use if sent to France, the implication being that it was cowardice that kept him out of khaki. Mrs. Setvenson suggested that this dereliction of so many young men was not due to fear so much as to pure selfishness.

There are faint-hearted men and there are selfish men. The latter is not or should not be held responsible for any natural deficiencies under which he may labor. If he lacks courage, it is perhaps no more his fault than if he had had the misfortune to be born into the world with a club foot or some other deformity. Not every man was endowed by his Creator with the qualities required in a soldier, any more than all men are born poets, artists or vocalists. The latter gift may be developed, it is true, but this presupposes original possession to some extent at least.

There is no excuse for the selfish man. He loves his ease, the comforts of his home, and his social privileges above all else. He is not necessarily a coward, and the chances are that if he could be pried loose from his associations he would make as good a soldier as the best of them. His willingness to enjoy all the pleasures of life and the advantages of civilisation while others suffer to preserve them in their integrity is the most lamentable characteraitic displayed by the slacker.

"A decoction of roasted acorns, rye, chicory and what not that goes by the name of coffee"; brews of linden blossoms and raspberry leaves in place of tea, hardly any meat, no cheese, no sausage; beer "all but undrinkable," no fat, ten ounces of potatoes a day, flour that takes hours of waiting in line to procure, no eggs for five weeks, although "it had been hoped to allow one egg per person each two weeks." These are some of the conditions found in a three weeks' stay in Berlin by the correspondent of the Associated Press, and reported from Stockholm under date of January 20, says the New York Sun. There were many complaints from people, who said: "I feel hungry all the time."

Each time he tightens his belt, each time he feels the gnawing at his vitals, the German citizen must be asking himself: "For what am I suffering so? Is it for victory? Of what avail is a victory if we perish awaiting it? Can we not make peace satisfactorily with all our conquests? If we cannot make a reasonable peace with the lands we hold now, what will enable us to make it?"

Anticipating the question the German Government replies: "Starving England will solve everything!"

But if the effort to starve England fails? What answer then, O Hohenzollern?

POPE WILL BACK SPAIN IN WAR

Spain's intervention in the war on the side of the Entente Allies is considered probable. The Pope is still trying to induce Germany to modify its submarine warfare plans and has told the Spanish King that if his effort is unsuccessful he will announce to the world that he approves Spain's entry on the ground of self-defence.

The Kaiser has been warned that if Spain intervenes similar action on the part of all the other European neutrals will follow. It is expected the Pontiff's condemnation of the submarine campaign measures will have a profound effect in South America also.

A despatch from Madrid via Paris says that during a spirited debate on the economic situation today Count Alvaro de Romanones, the Premier, announced in the Chamber of Deputies that the Cabinet was willing to resign if its critics believed another could do better.

Senor Antonio Maura, leader of the Conservatives, said that at the time of the last Cabinet crisis the present Government lacked vigor and cohesion. He also asserted that King Alfonso did not enjoy full liberty of action.

To this Count Romanones replied that the King had complete liberty to act. He added that the Ministers would resign if advisable.

WOMEN AND NEW CANADA

Professor W. P. Kennedy of the Department of History and English of the University of Toronto addressed a meeting of the Canadian Business Women's Club in Lansdowne School, Toronto, on "Women's Citizenship." Professor Kennedy made a strong appeal to the business women of Toronto to stand together and organize for the making of the new Canada. He presented some of the problems which are confronting our cities, and which could only be solved by the women. He believed that out of the war would come women's suffrage. If women did not make Canada after the war, Canada would not be made, and he continued: "Organized effort without the vote is worth nothing. You have as much right to carry the burden of the nation as the men. What are you going to offer the State? We want your ideals. A nation without ideals is not worth anything, it cannot live. Women have hopes and dreams and vision. We want this vision in national life."

The speaker went on to say that the best men were on the women's side. The platform for the new Canada must begin with the fundamental things of a nation; women stood at the base of national life, and on the women were based the things that make or mar a nation. The women must restore the home life of Canada, they must bring back the discipline in the Canadian home life, they must solve the school system—a school system that now "has so many fads." "The national liberty which we enjoy," the speaker continued, "is by accident; it has never been thought out." Then, quoting from Gladstone, he said: "All wars are desperate, except the war for liberty!"

While passing through Berlin he witnessed a number of Landsturm men entraining for the front.

The usual crowds were seeing the old boys off — an anxious, silent crowd. But finally there was one chap who screwed up spirit enough to shout, "Long live Germany!"

"What on?"

THE TEN COMMANDMENTS

(As used in Germany.)

First: The Hohenzollern spake these words and said: I am the Lord thy God; thou shalt have none other gods but me.

Second: Thou shalt make to thyself graven images of my victorious generals, and bow down before them in the market places, and worship them, and make them offerings of gold, silver and iron.

Third: Thou shalt not take the name of the Lord thy God in vain, for this were lesse-majeste.

Fourth: Remember that thou keep holy the Lusitania Day, when I triumphed over my wicked enemies, and cast them and their wives and little ones into the deep.

Fifth: Honor thy father and thy mother, unless I bid thee kill them, when thou shalt do so, that thy days may be long in the land.

Sixth: Thou shalt do all murders that I command thee to do.

Seventh: Thou shalt commit any kind of crime against mine enemies.

Eighth: Thou shalt steal all that is possible from countries that I have invaded, and what thou canst not carry away thou shalt destroy.

Ninth: Thou shalt bear false witness against thy neighbor and shalt continue to bear it, and shalt affirm it with many oaths and outcries of innocence.

And to each and every commandment the obedient German people answers "Amen."

ANECDOTES OF THE FAMOUS

Gen. Robert Nivelle, Gen. Joffre's successor, is the man who followed Petain at Verdun, and who was responsible for the sudden brilliant offensive that resulted, on the 24th of October last, in the recapture from the Germans of Fort Douaumont.

His is a great position, for, as president of the Allied War Board, he is in the main responsible for the entire Anglo-French strategy. All the French armies, wherever operating, are under his supreme control; and his government, in order to mark their sense of the importance of the trust reposed in him, have created him a Marshal of France.

Like so many commanders who have come to the fore during the past year or so, Nivelle is a product of the war. When it began he was just a plain colonel, and his very name even was entirely unknown to the vast majority of his countrymen.

An artillery officer in the beginning, he first attracted the favorable notice of his superiors at the battle of the Aisne. A French corps, the Seventh, had been surprised by the Germans while in the act of crossing the river, and was threatened with destruction, the enemy swooping down upon them in overwhelmingly superior numbers.

Then it was that Captain Nivelle galloped up with his guns and caught them in the act—caught them advancing in mass formation against his "75's" at almost point-blank range. The guns squirted death. The German masses melted away like snow in a furnace. And the Seventh Corps was saved.

This exploit gained him his brigade, and with it he stopped an ugly rush of Huns at the "Hell Gate of Soissons" a few months later. Promotion to the command of a division followed, and from thence onward his rise was rapid.

He went to Verdun at the most critical period of the siege, in April last, and was placed in command of the Third Army Corps; and when Petain was given command later on of a group of armies in the centre, it was to Nivelle that he entrusted the defence of the fortress.

Gen. Nivelle is bordering on sixty, but he does not look his age. Tall, erect, and broad-shouldered, he is a striking figure of a man. His face is oval, eyes dark and piercing, and a slight grey moustache serves to accentuate rather than conceal the firm lines of his mouth.

He graduated as an ordinary cadet at St. Cyr, the French Sandhurst, and afterwards went to Fontainbleau, to train for the artillery.

Gen. Nivelle took part as a major in the Allied expedition against the Boxers, and he has also seen service in Tonquin and in Algeria.

Brig-Gen. Walter Long, son of the Right Hon. Walter Hume Long, has made the supreme sacrifice, says the St. John Telegraph. The young man in question was well known in Canada, as he was stached for several years to the staff of the Duke of Connaught. Gen. Long was a brilliant polo player and as such made a big name for himself throughout Canada. He was born in 1872, served through the South African war, where he won the D.S.O., and was frequently mentioned in despatches, and also won promotion. At the outbreak of hostilities two and a half years ago he went to England and rejoined his old regiment, the Scots Greys. Much sympathy is expressed for his father, who is also well known in Canada.

BEFORE ADAM

By JACK LONDON

He was a monster of cruelty, which is saying a great deal in that day. He beat his wives—not that he ever had more than one wife at a time, but that he was married many times. It was impossible for any woman to live with him, and yet they did live with him, out of compulsion. There was no gainsaying him. No man was strong enough to stand against him.

Often do I have visions of the quiet hour before the twilight. From drinking place and carrot patch and berry swamp the folk are trooping into the open space before the caves. They dare linger no later than this, for the dreadful darkness is approaching, in which the world is given over to the carnage of the hunting animals, while the forerunners of man hide tremblingly in their holes.

There yet remain to us a few minutes before we climb to our caves. We are tired from the play of the day, and the sounds we make are subdued. Even the cubs, still greedy for fun and antics, play with restraint. The wind from the sea has died down, and the shadows are lengthening with the last of the sun's descent. And then suddenly from Red Eye's cave breaks a wild screaming and the sound of blows. He is beating his wife.

At first an awed silence comes upon us. But as the blows and screams continue we break out into an insane gibbering of helpless rage. It is plain that the men resent Red Eye's actions but they are too afraid of him. The blows cease, and a low groaning dies away, while we chatter among ourselves and the sad twilight creeps upon us.

We, to whom most happenings were jokes, never laughed during Red Eye's wife beatings. We knew too well the tragedy of them. On more than one morning, at the base of the cliff, did we find the body of his latest wife. He had tossed her there, after she had died, from his cave mouth. He never buried his dead. The task of carrying away the bodies, that else would have polluted our abiding-place, he left to the horde. We usually flung them into the river below the last drinking place.

Not alone did Red Eye murder his wives, but he also murdered for his wives, in order to get them. When he wanted a new wife and selected the wife of another man, he promptly killed that man. Two of these murders I saw myself. The whole horde knew, but could do nothing. We had not yet developed any government to speak of inside the horde. We had certain customs and visited our wrath upon the unlucky ones who violated those customs. Thus, for example, the individual who defiled a drinking place would be attacked by every onlooker, while one who deliberately gave a false alarm was the recipient of much rough usage at our hands. But Red Eye walked roughshod over all our customs, and we so feared him that we were incapable of the collective action necessary to punish him.

It was during the sixth winter in our cave that Lop Ear and I discovered that we were really growing up. From the first it had been a squeeze to get in through the entrance crevice. This had had its advantages, however. It had prevented the larger folk from taking our cave away from us. And it was a most desirable cave, the highest on the bluff, the safest, and in winter the smallest and warmest.

To show the stage of the mental development of the folk I may state that it would have been a simple thing for some of them to have driven us out and enlarged the crevice opening. But they never thought of it. Lop Ear and I did not think of it either until our increasing size compelled us to make an enlargement. This occurred when summer was well along and we were fat with better forage. We worked at the crevice in spells, when the fancy struck us.

At first we dug the crumbling rocks away with our fingers, until our nails got sore, when I accidentally stumbled upon the idea of using a piece of wood on the rock. This worked well; also it worked woe. One morning early we had scratched out of the wall quite a heap of fragments. I gave the heap a shove over the lip of the entrance. The next moment there came up from below a howl of rage. There was no need to look. We knew the voice only too well. The rubbish had descended upon Red Eye.

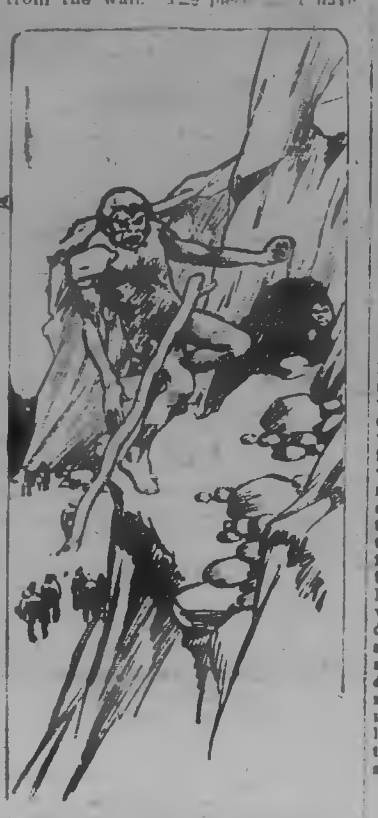
We crouched down in the cave in consternation. A minute later he was at the entrance, peering in at us with his inflamed eyes and raging like a demon. But he was too large. He could not get in to us. Suddenly he went away. This was suspicious. By all we knew of folk nature he should have remained and had out his rage. I crept to the entrance and peeped down. I could see him just beginning to mount the bluff again. In one hand he carried a long stick. Before I could divine his plan he was back at the entrance and savagely jabbing the stick in at us.

His thrusts were prodigious. They could have disemboweled us. We shrank back against the side walls, where we were almost out of range. But by industrious poking he got us now and again—cruel, scraping jabs with the end of the stick that raked off the hide and hair. When we screamed with the hurt he roared his satisfaction and jabbed the harder.

I began to grow angry. I had a temper of my own in those days and pretty considerable courage, too, albeit it was largely the courage of the cornered rat. I caught hold of the stick with my hands, but such was his strength that he jerked me into the crevice. He reached for me with his long arm, and his nails tore my flesh as I leaped back from the clutch and gained the comparative safety of the side wall.

He began poking again and caught me a painful blow on the shoulder. Beyond shivering with fright and yelling when he was hit Lop Ear did nothing. I looked for a stick with which to jab back, but found only the end of a branch an inch through and a foot long. I threw this at Red Eye. It did no damage, though he howled with a sudden increase of rage at my daring to strike back. He began jabbing furiously. I found a fragment of rock and threw it at him, striking him on the chest.

This emboldened me, and, besides, I was now as angry as he and had lost all fear. I ripped a fragment of rock from the wall. The piece must have weighed two or three pounds. With all my strength I slammed it full into Red Eye's face. It nearly finished him. He staggered backward, dropping his stick, and almost fell off the cliff.



He Staggered Backward, Dropping His Stick.

He was a ferocious sight. His face was covered with blood, and he was snarling and gnashing his fangs like a wild boar. He wiped the blood from his eyes, caught sight of me and roared with fury. His stick was gone, so he began ripping out chunks of crumbling rock and throwing them in at me. This supplied me with ammunition. I gave him as good as he sent and better, for he presented a good target, while he caught only glimpses of me as I snuggled against the side wall.

Suddenly he disappeared again. From the lip of the cave I saw him descending. All the horde had gathered outside and in awed silence was looking on. As he descended the more timid ones scurried for their caves. I could see old Marrow Bone tottering along as fast as he could. Red Eye sprang out from the wall and finished the last twenty feet through the air. He landed alongside a mother who was just beginning the ascent. She screamed with fear, and the two-year-old child that was clinging to her released its grip and rolled at Red Eye's feet. Both he and the mother reached for it, and he got it. The next moment the frail little body had whirled through the air and shattered against the wall. The mother ran to it, caught it up in her arms and crouched over it crying.

Red Eye started over to pick up the stick. Old Marrow Bone had tottered into his way. Red Eye's great hand shot out and clutched the old man by the back of the neck. I looked to see his neck broken. His body went limp as he surrendered himself to his fate. Red Eye hesitated a moment, and Marrow Bone, shivering terribly, bowed his head and covered his face with his crossed arms. Then Red Eye slammed him face downward to the ground. Old Marrow Bone did not struggle. He lay there crying with the fear of death. I saw the Hairless One out in the open space beating his chest and bristling, but afraid to come forward. And then in obedience to some whim of his erratic spirit Red Eye let the old man alone and passed on and recovered the stick.

OFFICER AS HIS OWN WAR CORRESPONDENT

Gives a Brilliant Picture of the Trenches

From a Toronto officer in the trenches to his family at home: it is very amazing to read the dear old newspaper and to discover how far, far away from the reality the Toronto press and all you people are. You make a stark, striking thing out of a little casualty—a little death. You fail to recognize the colossal, overpowering daily heroism of the millions who trudge along and face death as they once faced nightfall. How we would love to see a manly, unadorned, fussless appreciation of this diurnal heroism.

Correspondents Overdo It?

The Mackenzies and Percival Gibbses, and Beech Thomases overdo it. We chuckle at it or are disappointed, knowing you won't believe it. But let some whole man come out and live with us for only a few days, and then describe us savagely, in harsh, old words, that would tell you all what is happening to the human soul (for we all will come up, at last, to this new standard). It would save us all in our letters such agonizings of description, when our minds are calloused by the material labors of war. A death is such a little thing compared with the greatness of life, out here. And I've seen some death, just lately, of which I can't speak. If I could only describe how we crawl, scramble, run, and leap through death and chuckle and laugh all the while; if I could describe how we do twenty-four hours a day of labor that would make a piano mover cave in, and do it on a quarter loaf of bread and a pan of stewed tea, and grin in an ecstasy of fellowship in it all! Ah! if I could sing!

The Evening "Stand To"

Here is a scene. The dirty sky! Darkness! The few lone sentries (few are needed by day) begin to yawn and keep their eye on the bend in the trench towards the nearest dug-out. Presently, evening comes, seeming not to know what evil things it is bringing. The word is passed cheerfully from sentry to sentry "Stand to!" The dug-out come to life. The whole line has a stir and buzz to it. Out pop the men from the dug-outs, such clumsy, bundled looking beings. They clamber and flop busily to their proper places, and mount to the fire step, and promptly begin their intent, tireless gazing towards Fritz. You remember, I told you of the shabby, weedy pastures our trenches were amid. Alas, they are no more! Mud, mud, masticated, pounded, kneaded, mud, mud, mud! So they stand, waiting, waiting, watching.

Darkness falls, heavier and heavier. Presently along comes a merry sergeant with a secret, mysterious message. He whispers to all the statues along the trench. Many of them pick their rifles from the parapet and flounder to the dug-outs and disappear, leaving groups all along the trench, queer, silent, powerful little blobs in the darkness. The hours pass. Let us say Mars breathes (in this war) always and speaks frequently. His breathing is a continual mutter of guns and mortars far and near. I have never yet heard absolute silence. When he speaks— But then the letter breaks off.

OJIBWAY SOLDIERS

Indian Heroes Loyal to King and to Great Spirit.

"Ojibwawug Osageawung Kichecogewaw Muyah Kababe Sakeawad Kitchemunetoo" is the Indian for "The Indians are as loyal to their king as they are to the Great Spirit." This is a sentence of a short address delivered to some Indian soldiers in their own language at the Church of the Ascension, in Hamilton, by the Rev. Dr. Renison. The occasion was the confirmation of soldiers only by the bishop of the diocese. Eleven men were confirmed, ten being Indians, and one an American. Seven were Ojibways from Northern Ontario and three were Crees from Hudson Bay, and all are members of the 227th battalion, then encamped at Hamilton. All of them were personally known to Dr. Renison, who for fourteen years worked in the Moosonee diocese, Northern Ontario. There were 40 Indians in that battalion. Chief Davey, who was Dr Renison's former lay reader, intimated to Dr. Renison that there were ten Indians desirous of being confirmed, and he held a confirmation class in Indian for six weeks. The people of the church were very kind to them and they appeared to feel quite at home.

The bishop of Niagara spoke impressively to the Indians, telling them that they were doing what their ancestors did a hundred years ago, when they stood side by side with their white brothers to repel invasion on Queenston Heights. Then Dr. Renison spoke to the soldiers in Indian, telling them that they were only renewing to God the same allegiance they had made to their king, and that by being true to Christ they would be all the better soldiers.

HOUSEHOLD RECIPES

Peel and boil as many parsnips as required, cut in slices, spread each slice with a little butter, and pour over them a teacupful of sauce made by boiling two tablespoonfuls of flour with milk, a little butter, and pepper and salt to taste. Serve hot.

Barley Pudding

Put a breakfastcupful of pearl barley to soak in a pint of milk for one hour, then place in a saucepan, and simmer gently for an hour on the side of the stove, stirring occasionally to prevent burning, then turn into a basin, and when cool mix in thoroughly two whole eggs with a little ground cinnamon and sugar to taste. Pour into a well greased dish and bake for three-quarters of an hour.

Creamed Haddock

Take a fresh haddock and fillet it. Butter a shallow dish, and put in the haddock. Squeeze the juice of half a lemon over it, add one ounce of butter, cut into small pieces, season with pepper and salt, and cover the dish. Bake for twenty minutes. Make a teacupful of white sauce, add to it the liquor in which the fish was cooked. Bring to the boil, pour over the fish, and serve. Garnish with slices of lemon.

Macaroni Balls

Boil two ounces of macaroni till tender, then cut into small pieces. Beat up the yolk of an egg, add an ounce of grated cheese, and salt and pepper to taste. Stir in the macaroni, and put the mixture into a saucepan. Stir well and cook for several minutes till the egg is quite set. Turn out when cold, flour the hands, and shape the mixture into balls. Egg and breadcrumb them and fry in boiling fat.

White Soup

Take six potatoes, three onions, four ounces of crushed tapioca, one pint and a half of milk, two quarts of water, and one ounce of butter. Cut up the potatoes and onions and place in the water, which must be boiling, and boil for three-quarters of an hour. Then rub through a sieve and put back into the pan. Add the butter and salt and pepper to taste. Boil for another half hour, add the milk, and allow to boil once more. Then serve.

ICE CARNIVAL AT LAKEFIELD GROVE SCHOOL

LAKEFIELD, Nov. 17. — An ice carnival was held in the Grove School skating rink on Thursday afternoon at 4 o'clock for the boys of the Lakefield Preparatory School. The weather being favorable, the afternoon seemed to be a very desirable time for a carnival. There were about fifty in costume. The ice was in excellent condition. A refreshment booth was managed by a number of the boys, which proved a financial success, between five and six dollars being realized.

An interesting event of the afternoon was a hockey match between the ladies and the boys, the boys playing with the butt ends of their sticks. The ladies were victorious, the score being 1 to 0.

The remainder of the afternoon was spent in a baseball match and races.

The prize-winners were: 1st prize, Hamilton, Rajah; Tate, cowboy. 2nd, B. Herrin, Aunt Sophia.

Miss Melissa Alford returned from Lindsay on Wednesday, where she has been spending the past month.

APPROPRIATION OF $17,000 FOR THE FIRE DEPARTMENT

Subject to Change When Salaries for Firemen Come Under Consideration

FIRE ESTIMATES

The Fire, Water and Light Committee met last night and considered the estimates for the year. All the members were present and the most careful consideration was given to every item and everything that it was possible to cut off without impairing the efficiency of the department. Many of the supplies that will be done away with when the department is motorized were either cut off or the estimates reduced.

After much debate the amount fixed as the department estimate was $17,000, to which will be added whatever salary increase may be decided on at the next meeting of the committee. Last June the firemen got an increase at the rate of $87.60 per year and the aldermen were all in favor of placing the department on as good a basis as any Ontario city of its size and importance.

Mayor Duffus stated that he would oppose any measure that would tend to impair the greatest efficiency in the fire fighting department.

Ald Worth was of the opinion that the department should have every consideration. A good fire department was the best advertisement that any municipality could have.

In considering the estimates the question of salaries was let stand for the present. For uniform, overcoats, uniform shirts, caps, rubber boots and coats, $150 was lopped off; $75 was taken off the full account and there will be no expenses allowed for the Fire Chiefs' convention at Fort William. The repairs to the building provided for in the estimates were cut off altogether as the City Trust will be asked to see that work is done as soon as possible, as Fire Chief Howard reported the roof leaking and in very bad shape. The committee decided that hardwood floors in the dormitory could be done without this year, as also the smoke helmets.

It was pointed out to the members that $1276.65 was for hose and supplies ordered in December so the estimate for this year was that much higher as the money could not be paid out of the department surplus of 1916.

At the conclusion of the discussion of the estimates as presented, Ald. Stratton suggested that the estimate be made $15,000.

Ald. Duncan thought $16,000 would be right.

Ald. Worth contended that it would not be enough as the $1200 for hose got in 1916 had to be provided for.

Ald. Smith moved that the estimate for the time being be fixed at $17,000. This was seconded by Ald. Worth.

Ald. Stratton moved in amendment that it be fixed at $16000 and Ald. Duncan seconded it.

On a vote being taken the motion carried.

Chairman Dobbin made a strong effort to have the estimates passed as they had been cut down considerably on last year's outlay. The department last year was run short-handed

An Assistant Chief

Mayor Duffus followed up his idea of efficiency in the department, and moved that as Acting-Chief Jamieson does not care to continue the responsibility of the position, that the chairman be authorized to secure applications for the office of assistant fire chief, with the added instruction that the applicant be competent in every way.

This motion carried.

Fireman Johnston requested that he be granted two months' leave of absence for the benefit of his health and this was granted and he will be restored to his position and standing on his return to duty.

Thec ommittee will meet early next week to finally revise the estimates

LITTLE WORRIES IN THE HOME

Almost every woman at the head of a home meets daily many little worries in her household affairs. The care of her little ones, the work about the house, all contribute to these worries. Most of them may be too small to notice an hour afterwards, but they constitute a constant strain that affects the blood and the nerves and make women look prematurely old. The effect of these little worries may be noticed in sick or nervous headaches, fickle appetite, tiredness after slight exertion and the coming of wrinkles which every woman dreads. To those thus afflicted Dr. Williams' Pink Pills offer a speedy cure, a restoration of color to the cheeks, brightness to the eye, a hearty appetite, and a sense of freedom from weariness. Among the many thousands of Canadian women who have found new health and strength through these pills is Mrs. G. Strasser, Acton West, Ont., who says: "I am the mother of three children, and after each birth I became terribly run down; I had weak, thin blood, always felt tired, and unable to do my household work. After the birth of my third child I seemed to be worse, and was very badly run down. I found the greatest benefit from the Pills and soon gained my old-time strength. Indeed after taking them I felt as well as in my girlhood, and could take pleasure in my work. I also used Baby's Own Tablets for my little ones and have found them a splendid medicine for childhood ailments."

Dr. Williams' Pink Pills are sold by all dealers in medicine, or you can procure them by mail at 50 cents a box or six boxes for $2.50 from The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

RAIL SERVICE PROBLEM BAD IN HUN CITIES

CONDITION DESCRIBED BY GERMAN OFFICIALS AS MISERABLE.

WORSE IN AUSTRIA.

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

BERNE, Feb. 17. — (By Associated Press Correspondent.) — Only second in seriousness to the food problem in Germany is that of transportation. The wear and tear of war traffic, with the difficulty of replacing it, has reduced the usually efficient and ample rolling stock to a condition described by German railway officials as miserable. Passenger trains reduced in number to the minimum are desperately cold, overcrowded, frequently late, subject ot frequent minor acidents and mishaps. The movement of troops taking precedence over everything else makes civilian travel difficult and vastly increases the difficulty of transporting food. The severity of winter has added to complications by freezing canals and rivers, even the Rhine, and thus stopping water transportation. The scarcity of horses, motors and other means of short haul transportation have further aggravated the situation, until now cities like Berlin are short of even their scant allotment of potatoes and flour. All this applies with double forre to Austria, especially Hungary.

A Correction in Price.

Inadvertently the price of canned raspberries was given at two cans for 25 cents, in J. R. Bell's ad. on the Pure Food Page of The Review yesterday. Blueberries sell at two cans for 25 cents.

A REDUCTION IN INSURANCE

ON TRANS-ATLANTIC LINERS FROM NEW YORK.

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

NEW YORK, Feb. 17. — With 21 merchant ships arriving here yesterdays, owners and agents are ready to do their part in relieving freight conjestion, and it is predicted that exporters will now have no greater cause for complaint than existed before the declaration of the German submarine blockade.

Insurance rates for trans-Atlantic voyages showed a general reduction to nine and in some cases eight per cent. from the previous figure of ten per cent.

NORTH MONAGHAN COUNCIL HOLD REGULAR MEETING.

The regular monthly session of North Monaghan Council was held on Monday evening at May's school house, Reve Rye and Councillors Henry, Dobbin and Williams being present.

On motion of Messrs. Henry and Dobbin, Mr. Sanderson, the assessor, was given authority to search the title of property on plan No. 40 and other names where necessary in making his returns for the back taxes to the County Clerk, the charges in connection with the same to be paid by the township, and returned against the property.

Fred L. Campbell applied for assistance to erect a wire fence on the quarter line near lot 6, con. 13.

Mr. W. H. Moore, chairman of the City Trust, replied to the Council's communication granting permission as requested to use City Trust property near the Henry Hope Co. factory.

On motion of Messrs. Williams and Henry the communication of Mr. Campbell was received and will be dealt with at the next regular meeting.

By-law 738 was passed, appointing Mr. Felix Brownscombe auditor.

By-law 739 was passed, appointing Mr B. Sanderson assessor for 1917.

Moved by Mr. Henry, seconded by Mr. Williams, that the township treasurer pay to the British Red Cross the sum authorized by By-law 735 for the sum of $912.

TO INTENDING PURCHASERS OF FORD CARS

The quality and improvements in the Ford Car have been gradually increasing from year to year, and today, with its new style radiator, sloping hood, cowl dash, stream line body, crown fenders and artistic design, is considered the most attractive motor car.

Notwithstanding this, by the enormous increased production, most practical factory facilities and large buying ability, the Ford Motor Company has been able to reduce the price from year to year, but today owing to labor conditions, rising price of material, and extreme transportation difficulties, I have been advised that the price may be increased at any time, and my instruction from the Ford Motor Company is not to take orders at the present price for more cars than my stock will take care of.

I have not been able to place in stock as many cars as my contract calls for, for the above reasons and the extreme difficulties in transportation, and only those whose orders can be filled from my stock on hand will participate in the present low price.

I would therefore suggest that all intending purchasers place their orders at once. My salesman will be in the show room at 195 Simcoe St. both day and evening for the purpose of conferring with those who are ready to take advantage of the present price.

INSTRUCTED TO DAMAGE SHIP

SO THAT UNITED STATES COULD NOT PLACE IT IN SERVICE.

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

BOSTON, Feb. 17.—Captain Chas A. Potack, of the North German Lloyd steamship Kronprinzessin Cecilie, testified today at the Federal Court hearing on a petition for sale of the vessel, that he had been ordered by a man connected in an official capacity with the German embassy to disable its machinery. This was done, he said, to prevent the ship's use by the U. S. Government in the event of hostilities with Germany.

FOWLER'S PEBLO GLASSES

HESITATION

DOES NOT PAY

Some people hesitate to have their eyes tested, because they are practically convinced they need glasses, but are afraid of appearances. That kind of hesitancy does not pay. Eyes that need help are surely worth helping. They get worse if the strain goes on, and Dr. Fowler's extremely neat gold mounts and beautifully transparent "PEBLO" Lenses rather add to than detract from the appearance.

no longer required, it applied to go back to Canada, which was quite natural. At the last moment orders came to dismember it and send it hither and thither as privates, etc., but the bandmaster appealed to the colonel and the colonel appealed to me, and I wired the Minister calling attention to the band's enlistment contract and its services, so the orders were cancelled and the band returned to Canada. Many of the band were old soldiers who had long since done their bit and were now over age and unfit; that those of them who were young enough did not wish to begin the life of a soldier all over again is a thing easy to understand, and I cannot see why the band should be made the victim of insinuations after all its good works.

(4) One day orders came to parade the non-coms. and will you believe it, the orders were to strip every one of them of his stripes and reduce his pay, and it was done. I was so enraged at this breach of faith and most unmerited humiliation that I sent several cables and at last the following to the Prime Minister: "Does Canada compel non-coms., forced to revert here, to lose both pay and pension?" The result of all this was that whilst they lost their stripes I am informed that their pay was restored and their pension as well. I was fully resolved to denounce whoever was responsible, in the House of Commons, for this indignity had it not been repaired. But you say, how did this happen? It happened from pressure brought to bear in the Old Country against Canadian-trained non-coms.

(5) Lt.-Col. Johnston on one occasion called my attention to a whole camp full of men, all casualties, of men who had been at the front and having been too seriously wounded, were not fit to go back again, of men who were too old and had got rheumatism, etc., etc. These men were camped in mud, though they had floors in their tents, but in the course of months, having no fires, everything had become so wet that the condition of these men was pitiable and the ex-wounded begged to be sent back to the trenches, where they said they were well treated. I wired this to London and within 12 hours these men were put in huts and had fires to warm and dry them. Some of these men at last got back to Canada, and no doubt they were greeted with criticism.

(6) Now then, let us look at the officers. Having no men to train, the senior officers, to use a general term, were hung up. At the time I speak of there were no less than 2,000 of them in England. There were 23 lieut.-colonels idle in the brigade alone to which I belonged. I cabled and cabled and other members in England did the same, and at last a general board of high military officers toured the country and we all appeared before it to see if it could find anything for us to do. I may say that for myself they said I was too old at once. I offered to revert and become a private and they asked me what difference that made as to age. I then wrote the Major-General in chief command and told him that I was well up in surgical cases for an ameur and begged to be allowed to go as a private in the ambulance corps and to become one of the stretcher-bearers to carry the wounded men off the field, and as a last inducement I offered to go without cost to the country, and my offer is still open, but I was laughed at. I have Gen. Steele's letter in my pocket as I write. Lt.-Col. Johnston was told that he was too old. He was promised the opportunity of getting a glimpse of things at the front, and that was all. Capt. Rollins was begging for employment and was idle for a long time, or nearly so. What he is doing now I do not know. Some of the other officers could have reverted and gone to the front as juniors. If they did not go they must certainly have had very good reason for not doing so: just as good reason as many of those who are staying at home and doing the shouting. In fact when we see what they have already done and that they had been prepared to go to the front—for it was not fear that kept them behind—why should all this comment and irritation be stirred up in town. A glorious battalion seems likely to go down in eclipse all because the Government was unable to carry out its original bargain and because some people who are safely at home are not quite satisfied with the conduct of others. It must be remembered that when conscription comes it will not mean simple conscription of the men who happen to be young enough and fit enough to go. It will be the conscription of all that anybody can give and people who cannot give themselves can give their property.

Pigs For "Wiltshire"

To produce the lean mild-cured side known as "Wiltshire," we require a long, deep, smooth pig, possessing a light head and shoulder, an even back, not too wide, but well covered with flesh, yet not fat. The sides from back of shoulder to ham must be deep and long, the rib short and sprung out boldly and dropping almost at right angles, the underline straight and free from flabbiness, the ham smooth and tapering with the maximum amount of flesh on the outside.

Orders have been issued permitting only 24 men in a band and they must be men of B2 class. The 12th reserves and the 14th have been broken up and the men have been detailed to various duties and all the bands from Toronto have been similarly treated.

Information received later than that published in The Review yesterday concerning Major R. P. Watt, states that he had been ordered from France to England and that he expects to be sent to Canada along with a number of other officers. Major Watt spent a month in the trenches with the 18th Batt., in which many Peterborough men are fighting, and he participated in an engagement on Jan. 17, when the Canadians were called to the attack. In returning to Canada, Major Watt will retain his rank.

Gen. A. W. Currie is in London for a few days.

The Bowmanville Statesman also heard about it, and says:—

Port Hope young men are making a name for themselves, surely! A citizen who was in that town this week tells of the unpatriotic way that our Sergt.-Major Dan M. Douglass was treated by the pushers of a patriotic (?) dance in the pretty hillside town that had the privilege of despatching the boys from Bowmanville on the big adventure, by refusing him the small right to speak as a recruiting officer at said assembly. Sergt.-Major Douglass bought a ticket for the dance, and thinking it would be a golden opportunity to talk to the young men still at home and the most likely ones to be fit if they could "dance all night and go home with the girls in the mornin," he went with that special brand of smile of his to request just a few minutes to talk to the young gentlemen, but was refused the right so to do by the director of ceremonies. What a shame! to treat a brave soldier who has been three times wounded fighting to defend the mothers and sisters from Prussian savagery, by refusing him the right to speak a few words of truth to men who are fit to have a night's good time but not to save their female friends from the indignities such as the Belgian and French women and girls suffered. We repeat: "Shame on yon young men with cold feet — chicken-hearted mortals!" "Breezy" Dan has discovered two kinds of patriotism in our sister town evidently.

THAWING PIPES

In thawing pipes, wrap a cloth round them before pouring on the hot water. Every drop of water is retained and you get quick results.

If new tinware is rubbed over with fresh lard, then thoroughly heated in the oven before it is used, it will be less liable to rust.

Millions of folks bathe internally now instead of loading their system with drugs. "What's an inside bath?" you say. Well, it is guaranteed to perform miracles if you could believe these hot water enthusiasts.

There are vast numbers of men and women who, immediately upon arising in the morning, drink a glass of real hot water with a teaspoonful of limestone phosphate in it. This is a very excellent health measure. It is intended to flush the stomach, liver, kidneys, and the thirty feet of intestines of the previous day's waste, sour bile and indigestible material left over in the body which if not eliminated every day, become food for the millions of bacteria which infest the bowels, the quick result is poisons and toxins which are then absorbed into the blood, causing headache, bilious attacks, foul breath, bad taste, colds, stomach trouble, kidney misery, sleeplessness, impure blood and all sorts of ailments.

People who feel good one day and badly the next, but who simply can not get feeling right are urged to obtain a quarter pound of limestone phosphate at the drug store. This will cost very little but is sufficient to make anyone a real crank on the subject of internal sanitation.

Just as soap and hot water act on the skin, cleansing, sweetening and freshening, so limestone phosphate and hot water act on the stomach, liver, kidneys and bowels. It is vastly more important to bathe on the inside than on the outside, because the skin pores do not absorb impurities into the blood, while the bowel pores do.

SEARCH IS MADE ON COUNT'S SHIP

PASSENGERS VIEWED JAIL AND BREWERY FROM DECK THIS MORNING.

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

HALIFAX, Feb. 17. — The steamship Frederick VIII, with Von Bernstorff aboard lay all night under the glare of the searchlight from patrol boats in a secluded part of the harbor, and this morning, when passengers came on deck, they found their view bounded by a brewery on one side and a jail on the other.

Boats are not allowed to approach close to the ship, nor passengers to land.

Government immigration and customs officials began this morning examining credentials of members of the German party, and it depends on whether everything is found satisfactory with these papers whether the vessel's stay here is long or short.

Y.M.C.A. NOTES.

The Y. M. C. A. meeting Sunday afternoon at 4:15 will be one of unusual interest to young men. Lt. A. E. Britton, who recently returned from the front, will give a description of bomb-throwing and trench warfare, and will relate other interesting experiences.

Mr. John Crane, manager of the Dominion Bank, delivered a very interesting address on Banking and Insurance before the Senior Collegiate Club last evening. He advised the young men not to wait until they had fifty dollars before commencing saving, but to start with a dollar and lay aside something regularly each month.

DANGER IN TOO MUCH PRIZE MONEY TO JACK

Naval Expert Points Several Objections

A British naval expert writes: "For a variety of reasons it is regrettable that the Admiralty cannot see its way clear to distribute prize money as it is available, for not only is it keeping it back from the men and their dependents at a time when it is badly needed, but we are likely to revive old scenes after the war."

Talking to a warrant officer on the subject, he said, "there will be a holy flare up after the war when the prize money comes to be paid; a good many of the 'skates' (the sailorman's modern sobriquet for himself) will paint the town red when they get hold of it," and I fear that is what will happen. Human nature is pretty much the same in all ages, and the reason the modern sailor does not indulge in the carousals of his predecessors is because both opportunity and cause are lacking. In eighteen-hundred-and-war-time we used to keep men confined on board ship for years at a stretch under a brutal discipline and horrible food arrangements. Occasionally a ship would pay off, each member of the crew having his pocket full to overflowing with several years' wages, and sometimes prize money also.

The natural and inevitable result was a reaction of feeling and a "glorious bust," which rarely came to an end till women and wine had exhausted the cash, unless by chance the Press Gang intervened! Twenty-five years ago we kept men on board for weeks at a stretch, then paid money and gave forty-eight hours' "general leave." Off went the men, they knew they wouldn't get on shore for another month, so they made the most of it and let things go. If at the end of the forty-eight hours all the money was not spent, well, they just continued the carouse until it was, and so leave-breaking on a wholesale scale was the result. We went from that to twenty-four hours once a fortnight, then to twelve hours once a week, and then to leave whenever it could be given, and so the old carouses died a natural death with the more sensible treatment.

Now take our men in the North Sea and elsewhere. They are, as far as leave is concerned, suddenly confronted with all the rigors of the past. Do they grumble? Not a bit of it; they simply look forward to the end of the war when—that's just it. The reaction will come just because it's human nature. If on top of that reaction you pile "lashings of prize money," well, you put a red paint pot in men's hands, and the splashes will be vivid.

"What is your definition, Miss Mabel, of a manly man?" he asked.

Miss Mabel looked at him coldly. The clock struck eleven. She hid a yawn behind her hand and said:

"My definition of a manly man, Mr. Skinner, is a chap who doesn't stay on and on and on just because he knows the girl isn't strong enough to throw him out."

SOLDIERS OUTSCORED IN THIRD ROUND BATTLE WITH OSHAWA

247th Ran up Against Tough Proposition and Had a Busy Session Holding Bradley Contingent to Respectable Score of 9 to 5.

BILL BRADLEY'S speedy Oshawans dented the armor of the fast-travelling 247th brigade at Oshawa last night and trimmed them good and plenty to the tune of a 9 to 5 score. The Petes were trailing all along the route, being on the short end of the 4 to 1 count at the end of the first period, and remaining the same distance behind when the second session came to a close with the figures standing 7 to 4 for the Bradley contingent. But it was a great game of the winter pastime, and, while the Soldiers say they would have preferred to have a shorter lead to overcome, they have all kinds of confidence that they can win the round when the return game is played here next Tuesday night.

It seems the fame of Major O'Flynn's warriors had served as an object lesson to the Oshawa team, and they had been lectured and drilled on the style of attack to be carried out against the invaders, so that when hostilities opened, Bob Armstrong found himself the centre of all the fuss. Similarly the other scorers on the team were welcomed, and, following out the pre-arranged program, Oshawa started in to get some scores. Using all devices of legitimate warfare, they carried the attack to the gates of the enemy, and when the first breathing spell arrived they had made a considerable advance.

In the second stage of the battle, the opposing camps broke even at three bits apiece, and in the third and final effort it was two against one for the defenders. The renewal of hostilities here will be worth watching. There will be some fireworks.

Hockey Star Wins the Military Cross

The following honors have been gazetted:

"Military Cross: Clarence Errol Kidd, infantry, led a party across 200 yards of No Man's Land, and, although his knee was severely wrenched in going over, he continued to carry on, and later organized a small party himself and helped to carry in the wounded under heavy fire.

Lieut. Kidd is a Listowel boy who was for a time on the staff of the Imperial Bank at Welland and later at Port Colborne, in which town he shone as a hockey star. He showed the quality of pluck and grit on the ice.

LINDSAY CURLERS WON HERE AND ALSO AT HOME

Lindsay curlers won the Lindsay-Peterborough Cup yesterday, defeating the local rinks not only at Lindsay, but at home. The final result showed them to be winners by 9 shots.

The game from start to finish was most enjoyable; at all stages the friendly sporting spirit that has always existed between Lindsay and Peterborough was in evidence and the heartiest congratulations were extended to the victors by the local club. The scores and rinks were:—

400,000 of All Ranks in British Navy

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

LONDON, Feb. 17.—Four hundred thousand officers and men compose the personnel of the British navy, according to this year's estimates.

FOOTBALL IS VERY ANCIENT

ROMANS ALLOWED CARRYING—ENGLAND'S PROHIBITION.

According to the Encyclopedia Britannica, football is one of the most ancient of games, and the manner of playing it 2,000 years ago was not very much different from the modern sport. In Greece the game was played by a great number of persons divided into two opposing parties. In Rome, not only was the ball kicked, but carrying it was permissible.

"Tradition ascribes the introduction of the game into northern Europe to the Roman legions," says the Britannica. "Regarding the origin of the game in Great Britain, the Roman tradition has been generally accepted, although Irish antiquarians assert that a variety of football has been played in Ireland for over 2,000 years."

Edward II. forbade the playing of football in 1314 in consequence of "the great noise in the city caused by hustling over large balls." Both Henry VI. and Elizabeth enacted laws against football, which, then and under the Stuarts and the Georges, seems to have been violent to the point of brutality.

FIRE CAUSES DAMAGE AT PARISH HALL

FLOOR BURNED, PRIMARY ROOM AND PIANO IN GUILD ROOM ARE DAMAGED.

Fire last night caused considerable damage to the parish hall of All Saints' Church. The blaze started from the furnace under the guild room at the west end of the building and burned the floor, damaged the primary room in the basement and a piano in the guild room. The walls were scorched.

There was no sign of fire when Rev. R. B. Grobb dismissed his confirmation class at 9 o'clock, and it was not until about 11 o'clock that the firemen received an alarm. They acted promptly, and the blaze was confined to the floor of the guild room. The memorial window was not damaged.

Insurance covers the loss. The Sunday school session will be held at the regular hour tomorrow in the church.

SPLENDID RESULTS OF RED CROSS SIX WEEKS' SEWING CAMPAIGN

The results of the Red Cross Society's special sewing campaign should be exceedingly gratifying to all those who are interested in the work. Jan. 3, on the supply table, there were huge piles of uncut material, piles which reached fairly to the ceiling and which, to the incredulous, seemed an almost inexhaustible supply. From day to day and week to week, to the incessant humming of sewing machines, the continual clicking of scissors, and the constant plying of needles, these piles steadily diminished, while the quantity of well-made garments and articles perceptibly increased until by Feb. 13, the last day of the campaign, the supply table was empty and really wonderful consignments of garments, each one labelled "Peterborough Red Cross," had been shipped or were ready for packing. These, turned out from the Red Cross work rooms, were augmented from week to week by the following auxiliaries, which in their own societies made up the materials sent to them from the Red Cross rooms, viz.:

St. Paul's Red Cross Auxiliary.
St. Andrew's Red Cross Auxiliary.
St. Peter's Patriotic Society, T. A. S. rooms.
Murray St. Red Cross Auxiliary.
Trinity Methodist Red Cross Auxiliary.
St. John's C.W.A.
South End Red Cross Auxiliary.
Berean Bible Class of Knox Church.
Otonabe Chapter, I.O.D.E.
Buckhorn Patriotic Society.
Lakehurst Red Cross Auxiliary and Fairmount Red Cross Aux.

The sum total of the shipments, consisting of 99 cases, was valued at $4,500.

But who can estimate in figures the real worth of this work. Surely the cheer, the moral stimulus, the comfort that these things will bring to the hearts of the men overseas, apart even from the additional physical comfort that will assure, would make the extra effort worth while, for who can realise what it means to the lads who are fighting for us, to know that those at home are not only thinking of them, but also working for them.

And yet for practical purposes, figures speak louder than words and sentiment, and it is, in truth, a splendid report that is here presented by the convenor of the packing committee:

From Jan. 3 to Feb. 5 there were shipped

196 dressing gowns, 367 day shirts, 623 pairs pyjamas, 849 pairs socks, 51 bed jackets, 300 sheets, 564 pillow cases, 2689 towels, 888 manytailed bandages; the whole valued at $4,500.

Flora H. Davidson, Convenor.

The cordial thanks of the society is extended to all those who, in answer to the appeal for workers—and there was a splendid response—gave of their time and energy and in any way contributed to the success of the work. The society wishes too, in a very special way, to thank those auxiliaries, societies and persons who so generously contributed not only their work but also provided their own wool and materials and who, by their donations, helped so materially to increase the shipments, viz:

Ashburnham Patriotic League, 18 pairs pyjamas and 18 bed jackets.

Lakehurst Red Cross Auxiliary, 18 pairs pyjamas, 22 pairs socks, one night shirt, 2 1-2 dozen pillow cases, 1 dozen personal property bags, 9 towels and some scrap books.

St. Paul's Red Cross Auxiliary, 150 pairs of socks.

Mrs. A. J. Robertson, 16 pairs of socks.

57th Chapter, I.O.D.E., for 126 pairs of socks to be sent to the Canadian War Contingent Association.

It is also with sincere appreciation that the Red Cross Society acknowledges the invaluable assistance of the following, who, by their help and generosity, made the campaign of work possible, viz.:—

Mr. Tadman, who cut out the grey flannel shirts.

Thompson-Davis & Co., for carrying insurance on the work to the value of $2500.

The Singer Sewing Machine Co., who gave the use of nine machines for six weeks.

In view of the large shipments which have been made from week to week, it is a source of satisfaction to the local society to know that their boxes now go direct to England via St. John, N.B., and that the convenor of the packing committee is regularly notified of the date of shipping and the name of the steamship, as the following letters indicate. One, dated Jan. 13, from the Canadian Red Cross Office, St. John, acknowledging a shipment of 17 cases and stating that these had been forwarded on the S.S. Arracan, contained the following:

"In reference to your shipments: it is quite satisfactory to us for you to ship weekly or monthly, as we are receiving goods by rail every day. Personally, I think it preferable to make the shipments weekly, that is, providing the same is convenient to you. This enables us to keep our Red Cross supplies moving all the time and prevents congestion, which is an important feature at the present time, owing to the scarcity of ocean tonnage."

Another, of Jan. 16, states: "At the present time, owing to the exceptionally heavy traffic and congestion on the different railroads, shipments are taking a longer time to reach us than under ordinary conditions. We have found it more satisfactory to the different branches that instead of acknowledging receipt of goods the day on which they arrive, to advise the arrival and also the forwarding of these goods to London, giving the steamer's name. This does not cause any great delay in the senders receiving acknowledgment of their goods as cases never remain in our warehouse more than three or four days before being forwarded overseas."

A letter dated London, England, from Col. C. A. Hodgetts, Canadian Red Cross Commissioner, overseas, reads in part as follows: "I beg to inform you that I have been advised of the arrival in this country of Red Cross supplies, shipped by you to me, as follows: 13 packages by steamship Telemachus. These will be distributed to the various depots and advanced depots of the society in England and France."

It will no doubt be with general and intense interest that the acknowledgment of the safe arrival of these last consignments will be awaited.

ELIZABETH CRAWFORD READ

Elizabeth Crawford (Bessie) Read died yesterday evening after an illness of about two weeks. At that time she was stricken with an attack of appendicitis and an immediate operation was decided on, and the patient was taken to hospital. After the operation, which was successful, other complications set in and death resulted. The deceased was well known in Peterborough and Keene, where she was born 64 years ago. The late George Read was her father. For the last nine years she had resided at 356 Park St. In all work of a charitable or social nature she was always to the fore, and in church work she was an active worker, being a member of St. Andrew's congregation, as well as that of the Keene Presbyterian Church. It was with feelings of great regret that her many friends heard of her death, and the sympathy of the citizens generally is extended to her brothers, J. C. and W. G. Read of this city, and also to her niece, Miss Kathleen Powel.

The funeral will take place from her late residence to the G.T.R. station on Monday at 1 p.m., when the remains will be taken to Keene for interment. Funeral services at 12.30 will be conducted by Rev. T. H. Mitchell.

HAIG'S FORCES CONTINUE GAINS

BIG DRIVE TO GET RECRUITS FOR 247TH BATTALION NOW ON Extra Effort for One Week to Induce Eligible Men to Enlist.

ANOTHER campaign for recruits for the 247th Batt. was launched last night at the Grand Opera House. It was the most successful meeting that has ever been held here. The house was packed from boxes to the "gods," and the wings of the stage accommodated a few ladies who were not lucky enough to get seats in the body of the house. The enthusiasm that prevailed at all times during the address must have added considerable encouragement to Lt.-Col. Ackerman and his officers, who hope to add 100 recruits to the battalion's strength this week.

The splendid address of Chancellor McCrimmon of McMartin University, which appealed to the heart of every lover of liberty and justice, made a great impression on the audience, judging by the applause that was accorded, as point by point was raised in condemnation of the immorality and treachery of the Huns.

The original and most interesting addresses of Major Harry Hodge and Lieut. Brittain, who have both "played the game" at the front, were received with great applause and they will be afforded ample opportunity to describe their experiences to future Peterborough audiences. They made a hit and the Speakers' Patriotic League did well in selecting them for the evening.

When the chairman, Mr. T. E. Bradburn, called the meeting to order, the house was crowded and on the platform, besides the speakers of the evening, were representatives of the City Council, Board of Education, the Ministerial Association, the Board of Trade, the Y.M.C.A., the Speakers' Patriotic League and other patriotic organizations and manufacturers.

Mr. Bradburn, after congratulating the citizens for their attendance, expressed great pleasure at seeing so many ladies present, with whose co-operation the campaign would certainly be a success. There were plenty of eligible men in Peterborough to raise the battalion to its strength if all joined in the week's effort.

Jam, Rum and Sandbags

Lieut. Brittain, the popular adjutant of the 247th, was introduced. He said he had seen duty at the front with the Princess Pats., and was exceedingly lucky to be with them last night. For over a quarter of a century he had led a soldier's life and while he had addressed many soldiers as a matter of duty, last night was the first time he had ever appeared on a public platform. His address dealt with amusing incidents, in which jam, rum and sandbags played the part. In the first an incident of how he dealt with a soldier who was worried over dividing 28 portions of jam into 42 parts, in the second, how he, a temperance man, was designated the "official taster" of rum on an occasion when the men had complained of their allowance being watered. The men were allowed two tablespoonsful each morning and it was his duty to taste it. The liquor was usually so strong that it made him cough and spit, but on the occasion referred to the men noticed no cough, hence the fault-finding; and the last was getting 20,000 sandbags to the front from "the dump," and how the German snipers had got their range and the men made an astonishing sprint over the located area. This happened at the famous Polagon Woods. Lt. Brittain was cheered to the echo when he concluded.

Miss Florence Scott sang the very

Major Hodge Shell Charmer

When Major Harry Hodge, M.C., landed in town on Saturday, he lost no time in communicating with Lt.-Col. Ackerman, and soon the two officers were talking over incidents in their life at the front, both officers having served in the 2nd Battalion. On one occasion, Major Hodge recalled, a bomb came over and dropped among a party of four officers, including the major, and he alone escaped death, not receiving a scratch. Lt.-Col. Ackerman was an eye-witness. At another time, a shell landed at Major Hodge's dugout and did not explode, and since then he has held the belief that he is a real shell charmer.

The Campbellford officer would like nothing better than a berth in the 247th Battalion along with Col. Ackerman and Major O'Flynn.

FREIGHTER SINKS SUB.

Accepted Battle With U-Boat and Won the Day.

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

NEW YORK, Feb. 19—The French freighter Guyane, which arrived today from Bordeaux, reports that on January 22nd, when one day out, she sank a German U-boat which attempted to cross her bows in order to hold her up. The submarine fired three shots, which all fell short, and the Guyane, having manoeuvred to bring her gun, mounted astern, to the rear, fired two shots. The second shot struck the submarine squarely and she was seen to collapse. After half an hour she disappeared and the Guyane's officers have no doubt she sank.

MANSELL MEMORIAL WINDOW UNVEILED

"In the name of the Father, the Son and the Holy Ghost, this congregation accepts this Mansell Memorial Window. Amen."

Standing with heads bowed as Mr. R. F. Downey, recording steward of the church, recited the above prayer, the congregation of Trinity Church Sunday morning accepted the beautiful memorial window, The Good Shepherd, presented to the church by Messrs. Charles and Dow Mansell, in memory of their late father and mother, Rev. T. J. and Mrs. Mansell.

In his address to the congregation, Mr. Downey said a telegram had been received on Saturday from Mr. C. A. Mansell, regretting that the sons and their uncle would be unable to be present at the service of unveiling the window. Some months ago Mr. C. A. Mansell wrote the board of the church offering to present a memorial window in memory of their beloved father and mother. The board gratefully accepted the offer. "Now we see it in it's place," said Mr. Downey, "and as recording steward of this church I accept this window on behalf of the officials, members and adherents of the congregation. The late Mr. and Mrs. Mansell do not require a memorial window to remind this congregation of their noble and useful lives. Their memory will ever live in the hearts of this people. Mr. Mansell was a prince among men, Mr. Mansell was a Christian gentleman; Mr. Mansell was indeed a good shepherd of this people. We are told by the poet:

Lives of great men all remind us,
We can make our lives sublime;
And departing leave behind us
Footprints in the sands of time.

The window was unveiled by little Miss Margaret Wolstenholm, daughter of Mr and Mrs. J. H. Wolstenholm, Bolivar Street.

The pastor, Rev. J. P. Wilson, B.A. presided over the service, assisted by Rev. R. G. Peever, B.D., who gave an address, basing his remarks on two Scriptural passages, viz., "And David said to Solomon, My Son as for me, it was in my mind to build an house unto the name of the Lord my God," and "And they compel one Simon a Cyrenian who passed by coming out of the country, the father of Alexander and Rufus, to bear his cross."

Mr. Peever, after expressing his appreciation of the invitation of Rev. Mr. Wilson to take part in the service, told of the incidents surrounding the two texts, and from the first text brought out a parallel between the desire of David and the late Mr. Mansell to build a church. In dealing with the act of Simon in bearing Christ's Cross, Mr. Peever said that Christ always rewarded kindness shown to him. In the case of Simon, Christ touched the hearts of his sons and the preacher's fervent wish was that the sons of the late Mr. Mansell would be brought into the church of God.

In a short address, Rev. J. P. Wilson said each of the three windows in the church had been presented by the sons of fathers and mothers who had worshipped in the church and it was a splendid tribute to the people who had been cradled in the congregation. Mr. Wilson referred to each window and spoke of the significance attached to each one.

The choir of 32 voices sang The Good Shepherd and Miss Taylor took the solo parts in the anthem, Shepherd of Souls.

LIEUT. WM. R. ELLIOT WINS FIELD DECORATION

D.S.O. for Work With Attacking Party on Somme.

Another Peterborough boy has been awarded decoration for service in the field. Lieut. Wm. R. Elliot, son of Mr. Wm Elliot, 309 Reid St., and nephew of Mr. T. C. Elliot, has been recommended by Sir Douglas Haig for the D.S.O. for his work in the Somme fighting. Lieut. Elliot went out with his company, which, with another company, was given a special duty, and in the attack his fellow-officers were shot down. Lieut. Elliot jumped into the breach, the duty was performed, and he brought the men back to their lines.

Lieut. Elliot, who has seen much fighting, has never been wounded. He is now in England undergoing an operation. He enlisted at Lindsay.

Lt.-Col. Ackerman and his officers will devote their efforts this week to recruiting, entirely. There will be a daily parade for the men at nine o'clock and after that assignments will be made so that every section of the city will be alive to the fact that a real recruiting campaign is on.

In this great effort for men, it is the intention of the officers to accept enlistments for any branch of the service a man desires to enter. His intention will be marked clearly on his attestation paper.

Several new members have been added to the Five Hundred Club and every evening the different sectors will be visited. No one will have a chance to say that they were not asked.

The six men who enlisted with the 247th Batt. on Saturday are: Ptes. Jas. E. Finnie, Peterborough; Jas. Little, Havelock; Chas. A. Parsels, Havelock. John Evans, Buckhorn; Ralph Wasson, Warsaw; Wm. A. Brooks, Harwood.

The band will parade every evening this week and enliven the work of the recruiters.

WILSON WROTE OPINION ON RAIDS BY "BABY KILLERS"

Suggested to Kaiser That They be Stopped.

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

NEW YORK, Feb. 19. - - An Associated Press correspondent now in Geneva, but formerly in Berlin, wires that the cessation of German Zeppelin raids on London was not due to chance, but because they were found unprofitable. Military opinion in Germany holds that Zeppelins are much less valuable in warfare than in scouting. The correspondent says President Wilson early in the war sent Emperor William and the German government a private, unofficial message, stating that airship raids upon populous cities were disliked by American people and contributed in large measure to stirring up anti-German feeling in the United States, and suggested their discontinuance. The message did not fall entirely on deaf ears, but the military party prevailed, and the raids continued until the efficiency of London's air defences compelled their cessation. One more raid was made in November over the English Midlands, resulting in the loss of two airships.

PETERBOROUGH, MONDAY, FEBRUARY 19, 1917

CAPT. BURNHAM'S LETTER.

FAIR AND MERITED criticism may stir up comment and irritation in a community, but such feeling is as nothing compared to that which is always aroused when an imperfect defence of the parties criticized is volunteered.

Capt. Burnham claims the honor—or responsibility—for bringing the 93rd Band back to Canada. It was his appeal to the Minister of Militia rather than the one made by Secretary Joseph Wearing of the Patriotic League, that finally induced the minister to order the return. Capt. Burnham said that when their services as musicians were no longer required orders were issued to break up the band and send the members hither and thither as privates, etc. The bandmaster protested, and Capt. Burnham got the ear of Gen. Hughes.

The captain says the band enlisted as such and not as soldiers. They did not wish to take up the life of a soldier. No one doubts that statement for a moment. There are several hundred young men in Peterborough who are of the same mind.

It is evident from Capt. Burnham's statement that work of some kind could have been found for the band in Europe, in fact was offered them, but that the members were not disposed to accept it. That is exactly the impression that has prevailed in this city ever since the return of the organization was ordered. The majority of people will fail to see how the captain's version of the affair helps his case any.

With regard to the officers, Capt. Burnham says that the non-coms. were paraded and deprived of their stripes, their pay being reduced as was their rank. Again the captain got busy with his protest, and, while he could not save the men their stripes, he did succeed in having the rate of compensation maintained.

With regard to this point, it is a well-known fact that every non-commissioned officer promoted in training is obliged by the regulations of the British army to revert before he goes into actual service. It is only on the field that permanent promotion can be secured. This was the reason for the order which so agitated Capt. Burnham, and it is not fair to attribute it to British prejudice against Canadian non-coms.

Two thousand idle officers in England, considerably more than a battalion, was not an encouraging situation when considered in connection with recruiting here. Of course, some of these officers were too old to revert, no matter how willing they may have been to do so. There can be no criticism of all such. The young men, however, lack such an excuse.

One great trouble in connection with the war has been the tendency on the part of some Canadian officers—mere military tyros, many of them, as compared with the seasoned veterans in the British service—to dictate in the conduct of operations and to object to regulations that have been in force for years. The commander-in-chief of the British army was, and is, a Britisher, not a Canadian, and the War Council of the Empire has the final word in strategy. Officers who win their stripes in training camps are never classed with those who work upward while under actual fire.

Capt. Burnham challenges the right of any man not in the service, whether or not he is too old, to criticize the one who is. On behalf of the man in mufti beyond the military age, it must be said that he does not draw a salary from the State. He does not put the Government to the expense of paying his fare on a trip across the Atlantic, maintaining him for several months in England, and then seeing him safe home again. It would be easy to raise a thousand recruits in the city on the same terms.

Of course, the man who would rather return than accept the conditions of service at the front has his reasons for so deciding. The slacker also has his excuses for dodging his duty.

NOT ONE IN SIGHT.

WHY DOES NOT the soldier who returns from Europe with his uniform unimpaired by service and unscented by enemy powder, appear at a Sunday night recruiting meeting and there make his explanations as to his presence in Canada, instead of offering such explanations on the street corner or through the newspapers? The public platform would appear to be the logical place for presenting such statements, and the audience would hardly fail to betray something more than ordinary interest.

A SIX WEEK'S CAMPAIGN.

FOR SIX WEEKS the mere men of the city have debated and wrangled over ways and means having to do with politics and the war. For the same length of time the members of the local branch of the Red Cross said nothing for publication, but worked with unflagging energy preparing comforts for the soldiers. The result of their labors is evidenced in the shipments of goods now ready for Europe. The men achieved little to the purpose; the women accomplished what they set out to perform.

A woman is left alone in life with a family of small children and no means. In some way or other she manages to keep the family together, clothes and educates them at a sacrifice which only Heaven and herself understand. A man bereft of his helpmeet under such conditions would in nine cases out of ten fall by the wayside, discouraged and defeated. The State would be called in to help him carry his burden, or he would shift the responsibility by turning his offspring over to the tender mercies of a step-mother.

And yet it is still possible to occasionally find a benighted male who says woman lacks the executive ability required for the intelligent exercise of the franchise!

THE MAYOR'S NEW MOVE.

IT IS LIKE MAYOR DUFFUS to launch something original in the interest of the city. His latest move is to have a social gathering of citizens to discuss a program for a better Peterborough. Every guest will be asked to make a suggestion for civic improvement. The older heads will be consulted Thursday night, and on the following Tuesday the younger generation will be given a chance at a similar function to air their views. No better place could be devised for getting the sentiments of the community and organizing concerted action.

At the civic banquet which was tendered Mr. Dan O'Connell on the eve of his departure for Toronto, there was a better understanding developed among the various classes and professions of the city. Men were knit more closely together in a common purpose. It has often been suggested since that such pleasing functions be made a feature of the social life of the city during the winter months. Mayor Duffus appears to have some such commendable purpose in view.

A COMBINE AGAINST RECRUITING.

JOHN SMITH has one son of military age, while his next-door neighbor, J. Brown, has six. Smith refuses to consent to his boy enlisting, and persuades him against it so long as the Brown boys do not get into khaki. Mr. Brown concludes that his boys are under no more obligation to enlist than is the young fellow next door. The result is that all seven remain in private life. The two families practically form a combine against the State in its search for recruits.

The French-Canadians of Quebec plead as an excuse for not enlisting that the native-born Canadians of the English-speaking race are not doing their part, but that the majority of the recruits raised in the provinces outside of Quebec are British-born subjects. The native-born Canadian in Ontario attempts to salve his conscience with the excuse that he cannot be expected to do more than the young men of a different race in another province. Here we have another combine, the members of which are provinces instead of families.

If the Government decided to raise recruits by resorting to an equable draft, the chances are that the step would arouse less opposition than most people anticipate. The Browns and the Smiths would go without a murmur. The French-Canadians and the natives of Ontario would be left without a single excuse and would accept the situation willingly. Place a burden on any body of young men and there is certain to be trouble if it is unfairly distributed. Make each bear his fair share and the result is unanimity of effort and an end to murmuring.

FARMERS SPEAK OUT.

THE EXECUTIVE COMMITTEE of the West Peterborough Board of Agriculture, at their meeting here on Saturday, passed two important resolutions. One of these goes to the Minister of Agriculture at Ottawa protesting against the proposal to allow the manufacture and importation of oleomargarine. The other embodies a request that the money paid for licenses by auto owners be turned over to the various municipalities instead of going into the treasury of the province.

Both resolutions are along the right lines. Any person who desires a substitute for butter can manufacture oleomargarine at home. To permit its importation or its general manufacture would precipitate in Canada the trouble against which the government of the United States is now in arms. The dairy business in Canada, so carefully built up, would suffer. It would require a small army of food inspectors to protect the public from impositons.

The auto owners who take out licenses in this city operate their cars in the immediate community. The fees they pay should be devoted to keeping up the roads on which the cars run. The only way in which this can be done is to follow out the suggestion of the executive of the local board of agriculture and turn the fees over to the municipalities.

RECRUITING SPEECHES LAST NIGHT.

AT EVERY RECRUITING meeting it is the speeches made by the returned men who have seen actual service that produce the greatest effect, and the immense gathering at the Grand Opera House last night was no exception. Lieut. Brittain, the six-foot-two adjutant of the 247th Battalion—and every inch a warrior—made his maiden address on a public platform. Those who heard him will unite in regret that he did not take up the work months ago. His remarks were a true message from the trenches, and every word he uttered was replete with human interest.

Major Hodge was another speaker who scored, both by reason of his record and what he said. Each of these speakers spoke highly of the military career of Col. Ackerman, and one of the best points made by Major Hodge was that the 247th Battalion was fortunate in having at its head such a commanding officer, and Major Flynn, the next in rank, men qualified to lead the battalion to Europe and take them to the fighting line as a unit.

When Chairman Bradburn introduced each of these warrior-orators he was careful to emphasize the fact that not only had they been overseas, but had seen actual service while there. This was all that was required to assure the returned men a warm reception from the audience.

Chancellor McCrimmon is one of those rare individuals who, finding his native language brick, proceeds with almost wizard-like art to convert it into marble. His address last night was fully up to what was expected of a man of his reputation. Every sentence was finished and polished to a turn and teemed with patriotism and lessons in good citizenship. Even if it failed directly to get a recruit, it will not prove a wasted effort. The fires of loyalty were fanned into a new flame by the gifted professor, and those who heard him will be all the better men and women and British subjects for the experience.

THE HIGH COST OF LIVING

A British Board of Trade report shows that since the beginning of the war the cost of living has increased in Canada to a lesser extent than in any of the other belligerent countries. In Britain, France, Germany, Austria, where abnormal conditions, imposed by the war, exist, the increase in the price of necessaries of life has been in some cases four times as great as in Canada. In Denmark, Holland, Sweden and Norway, countries not at war, the increase in the cost of living has been as great as in Canada. In the United States, whose economic and geographic conditions are almost identical with Canada's, the growth of the cost of living, notwithstanding peace conditions, has more than kept pace with the upward tendency of food prices in Canada.

The truth seems to be that notwithstanding world conditions over which the statesmen of no one country can possibly exercise control, Canada has fared and is faring better in respect to food prices than most other nations. Yet cheap-jack politicians continue to shriek that the Borden Government should be turned out of office because the cost of living in Canada is high.

WHAT THE CROWD GAZED AT

The loop philosopher looked out of the office window and raised his hand at the crowd. "Rubbernecks," he said, cynically.

"Maybe somebody's been killed," whispered his stenographer.

"No, my dear," the loop philosopher replied; "more probably a man is selling a combination can-opener, hair-restorer and window-washer."

"Why, I never heard of such a thing!" gasped the stenographer.

"Never mind if you did or didn't," said the loop philosopher. "Gaze upon that crowd and learn human nature. Idleness is the curse of Peterborough. No concentratoin, no mental poise. There you see it—an aimless, gaping throng."

"Maybe somebody's been arrested," murmured the stenographer.

The loop philosopher shook his head.

"Children!" he continued, "all of them. Alert only to the fugitive incidents of life. They dash past the city's wonders, the railway depots, the Public Library, surviving beauties of nature, and stop to rubber at a couple of men quarreling or at a horse taking a nap on the street car tracks."

"I'm just dying to know what is the matter," complained the stenographer.

"On the other hand, we might call that gaping throng an oasis in the desert of industry," he continued.

"Maybe Adjutant McElhiney is making a recruiting speech," said the stenographer. "I heard him once, and he talks like a whirlwind. I'll go out and see."

"You can't penetrate that mob," cautioned the loop philosopher. "You'll get your little feet crushed and your hat stepped on. The city is a wild place." The philosopher hesitated a moment.

"I'll go and see for you."

With which words he was gone. Raising her eyes, the stenographer meditated upon a panel of pure sky which hung between two office buildings and wondered how far away spring was. Half an hour passed. She sighed and shifted her weight.

At length the loop philosopher came out of the mob. His collar was awry, his derby dented, his vest torn open, his watch gone.

"He did it!" exclaimed the philosopher, grimly. The stenographer gasped. "Bandit!"

"No," cried the great advocate of reason, his eyes shining. "A man was changing a tire on an automobile."

POLITICAL SNAPSHOTS

If certain Liberal newspapers and politicians conspired to discourage recruiting they could not have devised a better plan than the one they have adopted of magnifying little grievances and manufacturing big ones against the administration of our military affairs.

When you hear stories of petty graft or of petty complaints against the administration of our military affairs remember that nearly all the stories of a similar sort you formerly heard have proven untrue. Ascertain the facts first and get excited afterwards if the facts justify the excitement.

The House having adjourned, it would seem a good time to renew the scandal campaign. It does not thrive when Parliament is in session and the facts are available.

Why should the town of Kitchener be treated differently from the town of Kenora? If you addressed a letter to "Rat Portage" it would go to Kenora, although the name was changed ten years ago.

Several really good Conservatives are assisting several really good Liberals to organize a campaign for "National Government," a movement which the really good Liberals hope will have the effect of producing a war-time election under conditions which will enable them to disclaim responsibility.

Parliament had no sooner adjourned than the junior Liberal organ in Toronto repeated charges against the Government's action with respect to the Ross rifle that had just been proven untrue by the records laid on the table of the House.

Wit and Wisdom

The door opened suddenly and a lady rushed in. "Oh, doctor," she cried, "the baby has swallowed some ink, and now he's looking blue. What shall I do?"

"Give him a dose of blotter," said the doctor. "This is certainly an absorbing case."

Mrs. Moggs — And is this chair really an antique piece of furniture?

Mrs. Bloggs — Antique madam? There is no doubt about that. Why, it was so worm-eaten when I bought it that I had to have a new back and a new seat and three new legs made for it."

There had been a great deal of illness about the district, and the overworked physician had scarcely slept for a week. He was absolutely tired out when he called upon an Irish patient suffering from lung trouble. Sitting down in a chair beside the sick man, he bent his ear to his patient's chest to hear the respiration, calling upon Pat to count.

The doctor was so fatigued that when the patient had counted up to ten he went to sleep, with his ear on the sick man's chest. Awaking, he heard Pat still counting: "Tin thousand an' sivinty-six, tin thousand an' sivinty-sivin."

SHRINES TO BE ERECTED FOR PRAYERS

TO REMEMBER HE THAT SERVES AND HAS SERVED.

MONTREAL, Feb. 17.—Montrealers and visitors to the city this coming summer will have a number of opportunites to be able to pay their respects and say a passing prayer for those that have given their lives for their country or are still fighting for us overseas.

These prayers can be said at the war shrines that are to be erected at the different vegetable garden blocks on the City Land that has been turned over to the Khaki League by the corporation of Montreal for returned soldiers and the families of those still over or last, but by no means least, to the widows of those that have given their all for Canada.

The war shrines originated in England, being an adaptation of something on the same line in France and there is hardly a parish church over there that has not one in front of it at the present time. They not only bear the emblem of hope and religion together with the names of those that have gone from the parish to serve their country, but also have a special memorial for those that have fallen.

Here they will be adapted to local conditions and the Khaki League idea is to have them bearing the names of those that have come from the district wherein the shine is placed but also make them emblematical of the different battles our men have taken part in.

One of Montreal's leading architects is now working on the designs and it is hoped to have them all in place by the anniversary of the battle of Ypres when they will be properly dedicated and be a constant reminder of "He that serves and has served."

Shoddy society is made up of the social dregs thrown up by the waves of commercial convulsions.

He returned to the wall and began to climb up. Lop Ear, who was shivering and peeping alongside of me, scrambled back into the cave. It was plain that Red Eye was bent upon murder. I was desperate and angry and fairly cool. Running back and forth along the neighboring ledge, I gathered a heap of rocks at the cave entrance. Red Eye was now several yards beneath me, concealed for the moment by an outjut of the cliff. As he climbed his head came into view, and I banged a rock down. It missed, striking the wall and shattering, but the flying dust and grit filled his eyes, and he drew back out of view.

A chuckling and chattering arose from the horde that played the part of audience. At last there was one of the folk who dared to face Red Eye. As their approval and acclamation arose on the air, Red Eye snarled down at them, and on the instant they were subdued to silence. Encouraged by this evidence of his power, he thrust his head into view, and by scowling and snarling and gnashing his fangs tried to intimidate me. He scowled horribly, contracting the scalp strongly over the brows and bringing the hair down from the top of the head until each hair stood apart and pointed straight forward.

The sight chilled me, but I mastered my fear, and, with a stone poised in my hand, threatened him back. He still tried to advance. I drove the stone down at him and made a sheer miss. The next shot was a success. The stone struck him on the neck. He slipped back out of sight, but as he disappeared I could see him clutching for a grip on the wall with one hand, and with the other clutching at his throat. The stick fell clattering to the ground.

I could not see him any more, though I could hear him choking and strangling and coughing. The audience kept a deathlike silence. I crouched on the lip of the entrance and waited. The strangling and coughing died down, and I could hear him now and again clearing his throat. A little later he began to climb down. He went very quietly, pausing every moment or so to stretch his neck or to feel it with his hand.

At the sight of him descending, the whole horde, with wild screams and yells, stampeded for the woods. Old Marrow Bone, hobbling and tottering, followed behind. Red Eye took no notice of the flight. When he reached the ground he skirted the base of the bluff and climbed up and into his own cave. He did not look around once.

I stared at Lop Ear, and he stared back. We understood each other. Immediately, and with great caution and quietness, we began climbing up the cliff. When we reached the top we looked back. The abiding place was deserted, Red Eye remained in his cave, and the horde had disappeared in the depths of the forest.

We turned and ran. We dashed across the open spaces and down the slopes unmindful of possible snakes in the grass, until we reached the woods. Up into the trees we went, and on and on, swinging our arboreal flight until we had put miles between us and the caves. And then, and not until then, in the security of a great fork, we paused, looked at each other, and began to laugh. We held on to each other, arms and legs, our eyes streaming tears, our sides aching, and laughed and laughed and laughed.

I was not much interested in it. an anyway I was doing very well by myself.

After eating our fill of berries, with two nestfuls of partly hatched quail eggs for dessert, Lop Ear and I wandered circumspectly into the woods toward the river. Here was where stood my old home tree, out of which I had been thrown by the Chatterer. It was still occupied. There had been increase in the family. Clinging tight to my mother was a little baby; also there was a girl, partly grown, who cautiously regarded us from one of the lower branches. She was evidently my sister, or half sister, rather.

My mother recognized me, but she warned me away when I started to climb into the tree. Lop Ear, who was more cautious by far than I, beat a retreat, nor could I persuade him to return. Later in the day, however, my sister came down to the ground, and there and in neighboring trees we romped and played all afternoon. And then came trouble. She was my sister, but that did not prevent her from treating me abominably, for she had inherited all the viciousness of the Chatterer. She turned upon me suddenly in a petty rage and scratched me, tore my hair and sank her sharp little teeth deep into my forearm. I lost my temper. I did not injure her, but it was undoubtedly the soundest spanking she had received up to that time.

How she yelled and squalled! The Chatterer, who had been away all day and who was only then returning, heard the noise and rushed for the spot. My mother also rushed, but he got there first. Lop Ear and I did not wait his coming. We were off and away, and the Chatterer gave us the chase of our lives through the trees.

After the chase was over and Lop Ear and I had had out our laugh we discovered that twilight was falling. Here was night with all its terrors upon us, and to return to the caves was out of the question. Red Eye made that impossible. We took refuge in a tree that stood apart from other trees, and high up in a fork we passed the night. It was a miserable night. For the first few hours it rained heavily, then it turned cold, and a chill wind blew upon us. Soaked through, with shivering bodies and chattering teeth, we huddled in each other's arms. We missed the snug, dry cave that so quickly warmed with the heat of our bodies.

Morning found us wretched and resolved. We would not spend another such night. Remembering the tree shelters of our elders, we set to work to make one for ourselves. We built the framework of a rough nest and on higher forks overhead even got in several ridge poles for the roof. Then the sun came out, and under its benign influence we forgot the hardships of the night and went off in search of breakfast. After that, to show the inconsequentiality of life in those days, we fell to playing. It must have taken us all of a month, working intermittently, to make our tree house, and then when it was completed we never used it again.

But I run ahead of my story. When we fell to playing, after breakfast, on the second day away from the caves, Lop Ear led me a chase through the trees and down to the river. We came out upon it where a large slough entered from the blueberry swamp. The mouth of this slough was wide, while the slough itself was practically without a current. In the dead water, just inside its mouth, lay a tangled mass of tree trunks. Some of these, what of the wear and tear of freshets and of being stranded long summers on sand bars, were seasoned and dry and without branches. They floated high in the water, and bobbed up and down or rolled over when we put our weight upon them.

Here and there between the trunks were water cracks, and through them we could see schools of small fish, like minnows, darting back and forth. Lop Ear and I became fishermen at once. Lying flat on the logs, keeping perfectly quiet, waiting till the minnows came close, we would make swift passes with our hands. Our prizes we ate on the spot, wriggling and moist. We did not notice the lack of salt.

The mouth of the slough became our favorite playground. Here we spent many hours each day, catching fish and playing on the logs, and here, one day, we learned our first lessons in navigation. The log on which Lop Ear was lying got adrift. He was curled up on his side, asleep. A light fan of air slowly drifted the log away from the shore, and when I noticed his predicament the distance was already too great for him to leap.

At first the episode seemed merely funny to me. But when one of the vagrant impulses of fear, common in that age of perpetual insecurity, moved within me I was struck with my own loneliness. I was made suddenly aware of Lop Ear's remoteness out there on that alien element a few feet away. I called loudly to him a warning cry. He awoke frightened, and shifted his weight rashly on the log. It turned over, sousing him under. Three times again it soused him under as he tried to climb out upon it. Then he succeeded, crouching upon it and chattering with fear.

I could do nothing, nor could he. Swimming was something of which we knew nothing. We were already too far removed from the lower life forms to have the instincts for swimming, and we had not yet become sufficiently manlike to undertake it as the working out of a problem. I roamed disconsolately up and down the bank, keeping as close to him in his involuntary travels as I could, while he wailed and cried till it was a wonder that he did not bring down upon us every hunting animal within a mile.

The hours passed. The sun climbed overhead and began its descent to the west. The light wind died down and left Lop Ear on his log floating around a hundred feet away. And then somehow, I know not how, Lop Ear made the great discovery. He began paddling with his hands. At first his progress was slow and erratic. Then he strengthened out and began laboriously to paddle nearer and nearer. I could not understand. I sat down and watched and waited until he gained the shore.

But he had learned something, which was more than I had done. Later in the afternoon he deliberately launched out from shore on the log. Still later he persuaded me to join him, and I, too, learned the trick of paddling. For the next several days we could not tear ourselves away from the slough. So absorbed were we in our new game that we almost neglected to eat. We even roosted in a nearby tree at night. And we forgot that Red Eye existed.

We were always trying new logs, and we learned that the smaller the log the faster we could make it go. Also, we learned that the smaller the log the more liable it was to roll over and give us a ducking. Still another thing about small logs we learned. One day we paddled our individual logs alongside each other. And then, quite by accident, in the course of play, we discovered that when each, with one hand and foot, held on to the other's log, the logs were steadied and did not turn over. Lying side by side in this position, our outside hands and feet were left free for paddling. Our final discovery was that this arrangement enabled us to use still smaller logs and thereby gain greater speed. And there our discoveries ended. We had invented the most primitive catamaran, and we did not have sense enough to know it. It never entered our heads to lash the logs together with tough vines or stringy roots. We were content to hold the logs together with our hands and feet.

CHAPTER VIII.

AFTER we had had out our laugh Lop Ear and I curved back in our flight and got breakfast in the blueberry swamp. It was the same swamp to which I had made my first journeys in the world years before, accompanied by my mother. I had seen little of her in the intervening time. Usually when she visited the horde at the caves I was away in the forest. I had once or twice caught glimpses of the Chatterer in the open space and had had the pleasure of making faces at him and angering him from the mouth of my cave. Beyond such amenities I had left my family severely alone.

Every fool knows how to attend to other people's business.

WAR AND SHIPBUILDING

Trade Has Been Revived in Canada on Large Scale

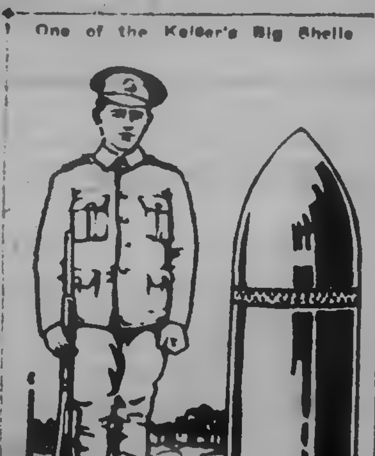
Hon J D Hazen, Minister of Marine and Fisheries, gave some interesting figures in connection with ship-building in the Dominion on foreign account. He said: "In order to provide for a large employment and pave the way for permanent and increased ship-building after the war, permission has been granted for the export of ships to be constructed as follows: Messrs. J. Coughlan & Sons, Vancouver, three large steel cargo vessels, with carrying capacity of more than 8,000 tons, at $1,200,000 each; the Wallace Shipyards, Ltd., of Vancouver, four large steel cargo vessels; the Western Dry Dock & Shipbuilding Co., Ltd., of Port Arthur, three full canal size steel cargo vessels; Thor Iron Works, Ltd., Toronto, two full canal size steel cargo vessels; Polson Iron Works, Ltd., Toronto, two steel cargo vessels, 3,000 tons capacity, and two more of 4,250 tons; Canadian Vickers, Ltd., of Montreal, two steel cargo vessels of 7,000 tons; and the Nova Scotia Steel & Coal Co., Ltd., of New Glasgow, N.S., three steel cargo vessels. One of the conditions on which permits were given to construct these vessels was that during the war they should not engage in any enemy trade, and another was that no demand should be made on Great Britain for materials, machinery or labor to build them."

LADY HOCKEY STAR

Albertine Lapensee of Cornwall Regarded as Marvel

When the Cornwall ladies' hockey team played once in Ottawa Albertina Lapensee, the Miracle Maid of hockey, scored five goals for the club. In the same week against the Westerns, of Montreal, she notched two goals, and as Cornwall defeated the Montreal team 2 to 1, it can be truthfully said that Miss Lapensee won the game single-handed. Ottawans say that Miss Lapensee is vehicled like a stage celebrity. She was to have a manager and to receive a percentage of the gate receipts on every appearance. The Amateur Hockey Union of Canada waives jurisdiction over feminine hockeyists, else Miss Lapensee would probably have been classed with the athletes who make up the N.H.A., according to Ottawa scribes. In earlier years there were a few rough spots noticeable in the playing repertoire of the Cornwall girl. But the rough spots were altogether missing; she skated and handled herself like a seasoned professional.

One of the Keiser's Big Shells



This drawing shows the relative sizes of an average sized British soldier and a big 15-inch German shell which fell near Verdun and failed to explode. The shell was just five feet high and weighed well over a ton.

Savory Omelette

A delightful delicacy is made as follows: Switch 2 eggs, add ½ cupful of milk, 2 or 3 thin slices of onion, and a few sprigs of parsley, finely mixed together. Flavor with pepper and salt. Heat frying-pan, and when hot put in small lump of butter, then pour in the omelette, and fry gently until it gets a light brown. Then turn, and brown lightly on other side.

Home Made Soap

Melt eight pounds of clarified fat in a large pan, put two quarts of water in an old saucepan, add two pounds of caustic soda, and place over a gentle heat until the soda has dissolved. Pour into the fat, stir for half an hour, pour into a tin previously rinsed in cold water, and leave for twenty-four hours. Cut the soap into conveniently sized pieces before it has quite set.

Before putting furs away beat and air them thoroughly, then put them in a thick paper bag, tie it up tightly, and wrap it in several newspapers. Put the bundle in a tin box and drop a few naptha balls in the corners.

BEADED LACE

Beaded lace, scintillating and glistening under the evening illumination, is one of the latest novelties in the confection of elaborate evening gowns. Some of the newest models are almost covered with it. In one Paris evening gown this lace, frosted with crystal and pearl beads, adorns the dress in three tiers, making a new original effect that is very unusual and effective. Corsage, overskirt and foundation skirt flounce are made of this crystal lace. The gown is sleeveless and decollete. The lace, very wide, and of open mesh, is closely embroidered with these sparkling beads so that hardly a bit of its groundwork is visible. The foundation dress is of white mousseline de soie. The lace overcorsage hangs away loosely from the figure, but the more fitted lining can be discerned underneath. The overtunic is very full, and falls over the lower ruffle at the back in a train. The loose outer corsage is caught by beaded ornaments at the side, holding it together.

Cleaning a Copper Saucepan

Scour the pan thoroughly with a rough cloth and silver sand. Wash in plenty of water, and repeat the scouring until all the black has been removed. Clean with bathbrick and polish off in the usual way.

Four Great Sauces.

A Frenchman has declared that 'man has created the culinary art! he does not eat like an animal—he breakfasts, dines and sups."

The French are particularly eloquent on the subject of sauces. Among their famous chefs are recognized four great sauces: Spanish, Veloute, Bechamel and German. The Spanish and Veloute were known as far back as the seventeenth century. In the eighteenth they were modified by the masters of cookery, particularly by Careme, who was called "the Raphael of the Kitchen."

The Spanish sauce is composed of juices extracted from a mixture of ham, veal, chicken and pheasant. Veloute is similar, but is not colored. Bechamel is Veloute to which cream has been added, and the German sauce is Veloute plus the yolks of eggs.—Harper's Weekly.

Remember 'Em?

How modest one of those old-fashioned scandalous rainy day skirts would look nowadays!—Washington Post.

SOUP AS A RATION

French Fond of it But Tommy Prefers Solid Food.

The Frenchman's fondness for soup is proverbial. It is strongly in evidence among the soldiers at the front, who subsist largely on soup or on stews, which amount to practically the same thing.

English military experts are inclined to think that this is a serious mistake. They believe that such sameness of diet leads to staleness among even the healthiest of men, and that the French would fight better if they ate more substantial food such as the roast beef and mutton chops of which the English are so fond.

But although the English believe their soldiers are better fed than the French, they have to admit that they owe the present excellence of their military cuisine to a Frenchman. While England was fighting in Crimea sixty years ago Alexis Soyer, the celebrated chef, went there and, with nothing but the regular rations to work upon, soon revolutionized the army's methods of cooking.

He found the camp cooks at Scutari and in other parts tying the joints intended for boiling so tightly that the exterior was cooked while the inside remained raw. He found cooking going on in huge copper caldrons so dark that it was not possible to see whether the tinning was intact—whether the water was not contaminated with verdigris.

He found them marking their rations, "lest they should be confounded in the kettle," by attaching to them pieces of red cloth, a string of buttons, knives, forks, scissors, pairs of snuffers. He found them throwing away the fat from the coppers, three inches thick, for they did not know that they were thus destroying "a little sea" of excellent soup. He found them sometimes cooking with smoke, dust and steam intermixed instead of fire, and yet consumed "a fabulous quantity of unnecessary fuel."

Executive Committee of Board of Agriculture Adopt Resolution Against Oleomargarine---Auto License Fees for Municipalities.

Farmers of Peterborough County are jealous for the fame of the dairy business that has been so carefully built up in this community. They are also of the opinion that the money collected from auto owners for license fees should be turned over to the various municipalities to form a fund for the construction and maintenance of the highways.

It was decided to hold the annual meeting June 13 at place to be decided upon later. CANADIAN AIRMAN WHO STUCK LIKE A MAN

Desperate Battle of Wounded Lieutenant in Mid-air with Fokker---Fought to the Death

How Flight-Lieutenant Clarence Rogers, son of Mr. Elias Rogers, of Toronto, met his death is told in a letter written to Mr. Alfred Rogers by Sergt. H. Taylor, who was the lieutenant's observer, and became a prisoner in Germany. The heroism of the lieutenant, who fought with a Fokker machine three thousand feet in the air, and continued to fight even when wounded is well told, and the heroism of the observer deserves full meed of praise. Sergt. Taylor said:

"On June 15th, about 4 o'clock, we were flying over Loos, proceeding north, when we sighted a Fokker about two or three miles over the other side, coming towards us. At this time the Fokker was about three thousand feet below us, we being at 8,000 feet. Mr. Rogers immediately turned towards the other machine and dived. However, when we met her she was still too far below to get in a proper shot. We then went down in a steep spiral at the same time the Fokker climbed, but always kept behind us. At last she got a position behind our tail and you yourself will know what that means. Mr. Rogers tried various methods of securing a position for getting a decent shot in, such as tail sliding sharp, banking, etc., but never with any success.

Still Held Clutch

"I could see by now that he was wounded, apparently in the back. He was also shot in the legs, but he stuck to it like the man we all knew him to be. About this time a bullet striking the spring group put the rear gun out of action. About the next thing I knew was that I had been hit in the arm, that the engine was stopped and machine commencing to side-slip to the right. I then looked at Mr. Rogers and saw him leaning against the right hand side of the nacelle with the clutch still clutched in his hands and shot through the head. I imagine we were then about three thousand feet.

Perilous Descent

"I then climbed over, sat on his seat and took control. I first put down the nose to get out of the side-slip and turned towards our lines. However, as the engine was stopped I could only depend upon the glide, and as it happened we were not quite high enough to get over. We landed in the trenches only 100 yards from our own (so I was told by a German officer). The machine struck a trench, and as I was landing too steeply was a bit of a smash. I can remember very little that happened after that, for I was thrown out of the machine and stunned. I was taken into a trench and there I enquired after Mr. Rogers and was told he was dead."

RALPH CONNOR ON THE WAR

"Abandon all parties that refuse to put the war first; the war first party is the only one for Canada." "Ralph Conner" Major Gordon said in an address. Describing the Somme front, he was impressed, he said, with the imposing array of British guns, which formerly hidden in hedges and cellars, were now brought out into the open without fear and lined the hilltops, firing night and day absolutely dominating the situation. In the air too it was evident that the British were supreme on the Somme.

The speaker said he had seen German prisoners brought in, one British corporal, with his rifle over his shoulder, herding a crowd of Germans. The Somme bombardments had destroyed the morale of the Germans in the trenches. "We know we can beat them and they know we can beat them," said "Ralph Connor."

COLONEL GORRELL'S END

Discovery After a Chemist's Statement —Former Canadian Officer

Colonel C. W. F. Gorrell, at one time officer commanding the Canadian Red Cross Hospital at Cliveden, Taplow, was found dead at his apartments, 21[illegible] Portsdown Road, Maida Vale. Colonel Gorrell resigned the command of the Canadian Hospital months previously and was understood to have returned to Canada. He returned to Portsdown Road to luncheon and complained of a severe headache. Later a chemist called at the house and told the landlady that a day or two previously Colonel Gorrell, who was a doctor, had purchased a very large quantity of Prussic acid. The landlady went to Colonel Gorrell's room and found him seated in a chair, dead. His feet were in the grate and his clothes had been [illegible]

NATION IN REALITY

Consider Constitutional Changes After the War.

By what Canada has done and is doing in the great war, it is admitted by leading British statesmen that she is entitled not only to nationhood in name but in reality. This statement was made by John Boyd before the members of the Caledonian Society, Montreal, in an address on "The Fiftieth Anniversary of Confederation." He declared that it was very fitting that Sir Robert Borden, as Premier, should go to England to sit in conference with the Ministers of the Mother Country. He referred to the great and glorious deeds of the Canadians in France, but gave credit to the "Fathers of Confederation" for the Canada of to-day. He traced the early history and political movements which led up to Confederation, and in conclusion declared:

"As to the future, it has been frankly admitted by leading British statesmen that what Canada has done and is doing in the great world struggle entitles it to be regarded as a nation not only in name but in reality. It is even stated that as a result of the war there must be some change in the constitutional relations of the Dominion and the other great overseas possessions of the Empire to the Mother Country, and various plans have been suggested in that connection.

"The efforts of some are apparently directed towards Centralization, while others see in the combination of local autonomy, with co-operation for common interests and purposes, the best possible solution to the problem. The winning of the war must be the first consideration, but when this momentous question comes to be considered, as it likely will be after the war is won, all Canadians will undoubtedly be found in agreement with the declaration of Sir Charles Tupper that Canada must ever retain the complete, entire and independent management of her own affairs."

He Didn't Forget.

Attorney Ephraim Lipschuts recently had a client who was to come up for a hearing before Magastrate Gallagher.

"What is your name?" asked Mr. Lipschuts of his client, when the latter came to him with the case.

"James P O'Brode," was the reply.

"What is your middle name?"

"Patrick."

"Well, now, when Magistrate Gallagher asks you your name, say 'James Patrick O'Brode,' and don't forget the Patrick."

"Sure I won't," promised the client.

When O'Brode was arraigned and Magistrate Gallagher asked the first question, "What is your name?" the prisoner said in stentorian tones, "James Patrick O'Brode, and don't forget the Patrick."

He was discharged.—Philadelphia Press.

AUTO ASSOCIATION PLANS FOR COMING SEASON

Live Organization in Which Membership Is Worth While.

Following the annual meeting of the association on Jan 30, at which there was an unusually large attendance, an active campaign has been inugurated by the membership committee. During the past week the committee has been at work and has secured for the coming year practically all of last year's members, as well as a considerable number of new members. There were 92 members last year and at least twice the number is anticipated for 1917, judging from the interest already manifested.

The membership fee for 1917 is $3, $2 of which goes to the Ontario Motor League, and $1 is retained locally for running expenses. The Ontar Motor League retains only one of the two dollars sent it; the other dollar being turned over to the periodical The Canadian Motorist, which is mailed monthly to each member. Each local member is provided with a full membership card in the Ontario Motor League, as well as a certificate of membership in the local association. Any motor owner who is interested in becoming a member may obtain a certificate from any of the following men, who are on the membership committee: R. S. Cotton, C. R. Banks, B. W. Manning, R. J. Munro, R. G. Sturgeon, Robert Dobson, Andrew Brown, or Wm. Lytle, as well as from the president, G. A. Gillespie, the vice-president, R. H. Turner, J. J. Duffus, E. W. Borbridge, P. P. Westbye, or the secretary, C. E. Canfield.

During the past two years the local association has issued automobile registration plates as the agent of the Provincial Government, but this year this work will be handled by Mr. Wm. H. Lytle, who is appointed directly by the department of Public Highways of Ontario, and who has the hearty endorsement of every member of the Automobile Association.

Clear the Cobwebs

After two years of practical inactivity on the part of the local association, it is believed by the members that a certain amount of wholesome recreation is not inconsistent with a whole-hearted support of the various activities designed to help win the war. We can work harder and give more if we keep our brains clear of cobwebs with fresh air and sunshine. Among the activities planned for the coming summer will be a general outing for the returned soldiers and their families. Individual car owners have in the past tried to give trips of this kind to our returned soldiers, and the individual interest will be kept up during the coming year; but in addition to this, a general field day and outing for all men returned from the front, together with their families, will be planned as soon as the season permits.

In past years motor trips have been carried out for those living in the various homes and institutions for the unfortunate in the city. It is planned to continue these.

A live entertainment committee, of which F. L. Roy is chairman, has in mind a series of members' runs, with basket lunch accompaniment, at intervals during the summer, which will be announced later.

The good roads committee, the chairman of which is G. Walter Green, will do all in its power to spread the interest in the new "Country Roads System" which has been inaugurated by the Provincial authorities during the past year. This system is a good thing for all concerned, and as it does not add to, but actually decreases the financial burden on the county organization, the co-operation of the County Council is justifiably hoped for. It may be that the funds of the association will be used in a small way for local road improvement if the co-operation of the surrounding country road officials can be obtained, but with the small membership fees this year, the amount available for this work will not be large. It is designed, however, to use the funds of the association as consistently as possible for the substantial benefit of the membership and general good of motoring rather than for entertainment. The entertainments and members' runs will be planned as far as possible so as to be self-supporting.

All automobile owners who are in sympathy with the aims of the association are cordially invited to become members and thus, through their public spirit, help along the good work.

WIN THE RACE WITH TIME

At a certain age there are almost sure to be constitutional changes, and one in particular is the gradual weakening of the eyesight. Imperceptible at first, except to scientific test, yet the change is there, and if, at this time, the eyes are given the assistance they need, they are kept strong longer than if left in use without the aid of glasses till a later period. GERMAN LINES PENETRATED TO DEPTH OF THOUSAND YARDS ON FRONT OF MILE AND HALF

Eight Hundred Prisoners Taken and All Counter Attacks Repulsed---Turks Forced Back and Captures Made on the Tigris.

LONDON, Feb. 18.—Last night's official statement says:

British troops yesterday captured German positions on both sides of the Ancre for a distance of about one and a half miles, and penetrated the enemy's lines about one thousand yards. We are in close range with Petit Miramount, north-east of Grandcourt. Two hundred and sixty-eight prisoners, including five officers, have pased through the collecting stations. We also captured a positon south of Neuve Chapelle, taking a number of prisoners. A large number of Germans were killed, many duguts and machine guns were destroyed, and all counter-attacks repulsed. We blew up two mines with good results west of La Bassee.

LONDON (Later)—Prisoners in Saturday's attack now number 800. German counter-attacks on Sunday morning failed to reach the British lines.

PARIS, Feb. 18.— Today's statement says: We invaded a German trench on the left bank of the River Moselle last night and destroyed Teuton sheds and works. The rest of the front was comparatively quiet.

LONDON, Feb. 18.— An official report says: On Thursday we forced back the Turks on the Tigris to a depth of 1200 yards on a frontage of 1,000 yards. Some hours later we secured an objective on a front of 850 yards. We captured 89 officers and 1,906 other ranks and 2,500 rifles. We made a further advance of 1200 yards on Friday.

beautiful solo "Land of Hope and Glory" with good effect, and was much applauded.

Major Hodge, M.C.

Major Harry Hodge of Campbellford, one of the famous Iron Second Batt. in which so many Peterborough boys were attached, was next introduced. He has won the Military Cross and is anxious to get back to duty again, despite his injuries. He first told of his delight of meeting in Peterborough a few of his comrades who were with the first contingent, and mentioned Col. Ackerman, Lt. Barney Quinn, and expresed regret at not seeing Major O'Flynn, who was on his honeymoon. He was proud of these men. They had all been wounded and were all anxious to get back again. He was not pleased to see so many men between 18 and 30 who were not in khaki. He had been in a place on Saturday evening where there were 100 men, and 90 per cent of them eligible. They should all join the colors, particularly under such offices as Lt.-Col. Ackerman and Major O'Flynn. Peterborough had done well, but not one-tenth what it should do.

Major Hodge paid tribute to Heber Rogers, now a prisoner of war, who with the speaker held the foe back during the retreat at St. Julien. Sergt. Gardiner of Oshawa was also mentioned in this connection. Many men expressed a desire to get into the machine gun section. This can be done only by enlisting in the infantry and then the O.C. approves of the transfer to the machine gun section, or to any other department of the service desired. He was going back on May 1 and would be glad to have a few Peterborough men with him in his machine gun section.

Girls Should Force Men to Go

Some men are kept from enlisting by the women folks. In England it was a disgrace for a girl to be seen walking with a man in civilian clothes. He appealed to the ladies to let the men go. There would be plenty of them come back. It would be better for a woman to go out west and marry a Doukhobor than marry a man who was afraid to don the King's uniform. Such men could not protect their own homes. The men at the front get plenty to eat - more than they get at home - fresh meat every day. Referring to the sanitary arrangements, he said they were improved now so that "crumbs" were a thing of the past.

Get Busy and Do It

In conclusion, he dwelt on the positions which were now capably filled by women, and appealed to the citizens to see that women take the places here now filled by eligible men. To those who were buying autos, he remarked: "Lend your money to England and buy your auto at a later date." Appeals were made for Red Cross, and everyone can help, from the child to the old man. Get busy and do it.

Chancellor McCrimmon

Chancellor McCrimmon, of McMaster University, Toronto, launched his appeal by stating that he would sooner have the Military Cross than the position he now occupied. It was a duty to fight for the liberty and independence of mankind. We all have our duty to do in this fight which the Empire and Canada are engaged in. He did not come to Peterborough to tell the citizens their duty, but to endeavor to place before them the necessities of the time at a different angle of vision. He was extremely proud of the city when he walked down the street. Lord Nelson's famous expression had been localized. Peterborough expects every man to do his duty. This was a grand and awful time. The life and liberty of the Empire were at stake and this was an epoch in the history of mankind. From time immemorial the road to liberty had been impeded by military oppression and Germany was endeavoring to force on the democratic world the hated autocracy of the Kaiser. Canada was obligated to see the Empire successful in this great conflict and he sometimes thought that the people forgot that the foe was no uncommon one, that she had the second navy of the world and at the opening of the war had the largest army of the world, all prepared to carry out the Kaiser's desire of world domination and the destruction of the freedom which characterized the British people. Prussia had put Germany in her pocket and the Kaiser was taking the place of Napoleon. Not only in Europe would he dominate, but in the councils of all the world's nations. The British fleet had stopped all world domination ideas in the past. It had bottled up the Kaiser's fleet now and the United States were now recognizing the power of Britain's fleet.

The Chancellor's son, who is on a patrol boat in the Irish Sea, remarked when he heard that a cousin had joined the U.S. navy, "There is no safer place in the world than in the U.S. navy."

Immorality of Germany

The foreign policy of Germany from the time of its inception was an immoral one. They idealized a military god, and the outrages committed on Belgian women, the Armenians and the sinking of the Lusitania were cited as instances. The Kaiser had said that there was no right or wrong in international affairs.

He appealed to every Irish, Scotch and English descendant to answer the call for aid. The manhood and womanhood of Canada should co-operate. There were worse things than death. Would the women have a fine time under the Kaiser, who says woman's place is in the kitchen and to bring up children?

He concluded by praising the officers and men who wanted to go back after doing their turn at the front. The last hundred thousand may win the battle. Ponder over the cry for help and do your duty. If Germany gains the day your liberty is gone. The Belgians have lost a country but gained a soul.

Lt.-Col. Ackerman closed the meeting by an appeal for members for the Five Hundred Club, and the co-operation of the citizens in this week's campaign.

The 247th band rendered several selections during the evening and ended the proceedings with the National Anthem.

WIDOW PLEADS FOR RETURN OF HER SON

NIAGARA FALLS, Ont., Feb. 19. A widow, very poor, of Stamford, recently wrote to King George telling him that she was ill and neded her son, who is with the Canadian forces on the Somme. She implored His Majesty to send the boy home to her. A letter has been received from the King's secretary asking that the matter be investigated, and if the facts are as stated the soldier will be sent back to his mother.

The Turning Point

MUSICAL COMEDY DRAMA AT GRAND TOMORROW NIGHT.

"The Turning Point," which will be presented at the Grand Opera House Tuesday night under the auspices of the Peter Robinson Chapter, I. O. D. E., promises much. Local talent will have a large share in the caste, and as practices and rehearsals have been very successful, the stage presentation will be of a high standard. The Grand Opera House should have a capacity audience, as the bulk of the proceeds will pass to the coffers of the Peter Robinson Chapter and will be devoted to the splendid work carried on in behalf of Peterborough soldiers at the fighting front. A synopsis of the plot reveals an interesting story. The opening scenes are laid in the foothills of Virginia and an unscrupulous promoter from the Great White Way upsets the quietude and peace of the Breckenridge Plantation when he tries to get possession of a coal mine. Developments follow quickly, and the Turning Point is reached when Brent Breckenridge, the hero of the story falls in love with Aline Anderson, and, acting on her advice, goes forth into the world to make his fortune and return again to win his bride. Ferguson in the meantime carries on his plot, and when things seem to be coming his way, Dave reappears, defeats the schemer, and all ends well. There is plenty of comedy running through the story, there is a large chorus of Southern belles, and altogether the presentation makes a delightful entertainment.

The play was presented in Oshawa some time ago, and the opera house was crowded.

County Council

The County Council will hold a special meeting on Tuesday, Feb. 27. Matters in connection with the insurance on the Court House will be the chief subject of discussion.

OBITUARY

WILLIAM E. TRAILL

Mr. Wm. E. Traill died at his home in Meskanaw on Sunday, Jan. 14, aged 72 years. Another name is stricken from the ever lessening roll of settlers, and a solitary woman in the sunlight of life, and a lonely home, are left to attest how sadly they will miss him. There is no language at our command by which we can fittingly portray the sincerity of this man's Christian character. In short, he was not only a Christian, but he was an honorable gentleman, in the highest sense that term implies. He commanded the respect of all sects and classes of people, as the attendance at the funeral fully verified.

He was a devoted husband and a kind and indulgent father; to his sister, a tender brother; and to his friends, the soul of fellowship. Besides a devoted wife, he leaves seven daughters and two sons to mourn.

The funeral and committal services were held on Tuesday, Jan. 16, Rev. James Taylor officiating.

The pallbearers were William Downie, Thos. McKay, Sr., Thos. McKay, Jr., Harold Morrow, Charle Taylor and James Flett. The interment took place in the Church of England Cemetery, on the Traill farm, the deceased having expressed a wish to be buried in the cemetery which he had given to the church when he donated the church site farm at Meskanaw.

Sons of the deceased are Lieut. W. M. Traill, of the 243rd Batt., of Prince Albert, formerly for years assessor of the City of Prince Albert; and Walter Traill, of Big River. Daughter are Mrs. F. J. Bigg, Swift Current, Sask.; Mrs. Wm. Drever, Hardisty, Alberta; Mrs. J. A. McCloy, Crescent Hill, Sask.; Mrs. Harold Morrow, Ethelton, Sask.; Miss Mary Train, of Brantford General Hospital, Brantford, Ont.; and Misses Harriet and Annie Traill, both at the family home at Meskanaw. Miss Traill of Brantford was at home when his death occurred.

Two sisters of the deceased, Miss Kate Traill and Mrs. Clinton Atwood, reside at Lakefield, Ont., and a brother, Walter J. S., at Grand Forks, B.C.

Brothers-in-law of the deceased are Mr. Justice McKay of Regina, Thos. McKay and Wm. McKay of Prince Albert. Mrs. Laurence Clarke of Prince Albert is a sister-in-law.

The late Mr. Traill had a very interesting career during the course of which he made hosts of friends in all parts of western Canada. He was born near Peterborough, Ont. and he came west to Fort Ellice, now Foxwarren, Man., in 1864, where he became a clerk in the Hudson's Bay Company's service under Chief Factor Wm. McKay. Later he married the chief factor's eldest daughter, Harriet McKay, who survives him. During the service for the company, Mr. Traill was stationed at places scattered all over the north-west and was a chief factor for many years. He retired about 20 years ago from the company's service and came to a farm near Prince Albert. Later he moved to Meskanaw.

Mr. Trail was extremely well known on account of his contributions to various magazines and newspapers. He had absorbing stories to tell of life in western Canada in the days of the buffalo and coming of a literary family he put many of his reminiscences into story form. His mother was one of the Strickland family, a sister of Mrs. Moodie, and was the authoress of The Backwoods of Canada. His aunt, Agnes Strickland, wrote a history of the Queens of England. Mrs. Moodie wrote several stories of Canada.

FISKE O'HARA

IN NEW PLAY HERE NEXT MONDAY, FEB. 26.

Whenever Fiske O'Hara is announced in a new play, local theatregoers know there is no necessity of having the play censored before they witness it, for Mr. O'Hara has gained a reputation for producing only clean and wholesome plays, which have endeared him to local audiences, and he is always sure of a royal welcome from his many admirers. This year he is presenting a new comedy from the pens of Anna Nichols and Adelaide Matthews entieled "His Heart's Desire," and advance reports state that it is the best play the young star has ever had. Mr. O'Hara plays the part of Sir Larry O'Neil, a dashing young Irishman of delightful personality and splendid physique, just the style of part O'Hara is so admirably fitted for. His rich tenor voice is at its best this season, and he has five new songs which he renders during the course of the performance.

SAXONS CHUMMY WITH CANADIAN GUARDSMEN

Prisoners Anxious Not to be Mistaken For Prussians--Ready to Surrender.

A letter from Lance-Corporal G. M. Waring, of the Canadian Grenadier Guards Overseas Battalion, gives a good idea of the thankfulness with which the Germans get taken prisoners. According to the letter they seemed to be all ready for surrender, with their haversacks packed. Extracts from the letter are as follows.

German Red Cross Men Good

"I am writing this in front of a cheery fire. We are four of us, in an old cellar. The balance came out of the trenches after going over the parapet again. I was left in our trench with two other signallers and two stretcher bearers to help to guide out wounded and prisoners, and it wasn't a nice job at all, as the shelling was terrifying, and the prisoners were blue with fear. They were a good lot though, all Saxons, and called us all 'Kamerada.' I had quite a talk in French with a Fritz Corporal of the 146th Battalion, Saxons. He said they were not against the British. They were very chummy with us, giving us brandy, cigars, and rye bread, and their Red Cross men did wonderful work with our wounded. There were three of their Red Cross men and they worked on our men out in shell holes under terrific shell fire, doing fine work.

They Had Had Enough

"It was rather comical—yours truly leading out a party of Fritzies, holding on to an old bomb which I'd never had to use, anyway, and fifteen Fritzies following behind, meek as lambs more anxious to get out than we were. In the trench all I had to do to take a party anywhere was to just turn around, say 'come on Fritz' and walk ahead. No means of defence was required. A young Red Cross lad (not more than 16) pointed to his hat badge and said 'Saxon nein Prussian,' and was very emphatic on 'not Prussian' part. He pointed to us all—prisoners and captors—and said 'All Saxons and Kamerads.' The poor Fritzies were demoralized with fear at their own shell fire. It must be awful for them, as some prisoners have said that our shelling is worse than any they have been under in our trenches. It was comical to see the pleased smiles on their faces when some of us said 'You go to England, nice place for Fritz.' They all seemed to have been waiting capture as they had haversacks on and all carried little sacks full of rye bread and cigars."

Bombs Used By British Airmen

The bombs used with such effect by British naval and military airmen during the war are of the Marten Hale type, as shown in the above photograph. The bomb on the left weighs 20 pounds, and carries 8 pounds of high-explosive known as trinitrotoluol. That on the right weighs 10 pounds, and carries 4 pounds of the same explosive, besides 350 steel shrapnel balls, each ½-inch in diameter.

FANS DOPE OUT WIN FOR SOLDIERS OVER OSHAWA

Record Crowd Will See To-morrow Night's Game.

Figuring from the score by periods of the game in Oshawa last Friday night, local fans have it all doped out for a win by the 247th team here tomorrow night. Some of the dopesters go so far as to say that the Petes will get those four goals back in the first period. All of which is nice to hear, but the locals will have no easy argument. Oshawa may turn out to be just as good on the larger ice. What then?

Referee Bernhardt will handle the game, which will be called at 8.15 sharp. The probabilities are for a record crowd.

The T. R. and A. A. team of the O.H.A. senior series have a chance to tie the Dentals for the chmapionship of their group owing to the default of the 227th Battalion of Hamilton. The decisive game will be played at the Toronto Arena tonight. If the T. R. and A. A. win they will play right back again on Wednesday night. If Dentals win they will become district champions and proceed into the semi-finals with Preston in home-and-home games.

The winners of this series will play off with the Riversides, champions of Group No. 1 for the senior title. These games will likely be played Wednesday and Saturday Feb. 28 and March 3 respectively.

This week's card of decisive games has been arranged by the O.H.A. as follows:—

MONDAY, FEB. 19

Senior—Dentals at T. R. and A.A., Toronto Arena.

Intermediate—Owen Sound at Kitchener.

TUESDAY, FEB. 20.

WEDNESDAY, FEB. 21

DARCY OF AUSTRALIA TELLS HOW TO FIGHT

Australian Blacksmith Who Got Only Three Dollars For His First Bout -- Aggressiveness Wins.

In 1895 on a farm in the hamlet of West Maitland, near Sydney, Australia, James Leslie Darcy was born, the second in a family of five boys and four girls. Twenty one years later the young man—a perfect specimen of physical manhood—was the most discussed fighter in the world. "I was born in the same house in which my mother and father and sisters still live. America surpassed my fondest expectations. I had a wonderful time. But I cannot resist the lure of the open country in which I was reared. West Maitland will always be my home," he declared.

"Neither father nor mother is big in stature. My brothers and sisters, too, are all of average height and weight. It would seem that I got a little more than my share of physical advantages. I was a big healthy baby and a strong lad, so it really wasn't my laboring in a blacksmith shop that gave me strength. I went to the elementary school in West Maitland and after that to high school and during my spare time worked in the fields for my father. I like farming.

"It is a custom in the rural districts of Australia for every boy of moderate means to learn a trade. I was strong and my father had a friend who was a blacksmith, so I hired out as an apprentice in a shop in my native town. It was fatiguing labor, swinging a heavy sledge from early morning until late at night, and the future didn't attract an ambitious boy. So I made up my mind not to stay too long at such labor.

His First Fight

"After a year or two at 'smithing' I got a job with a company engaged in the railroad construction business and toiled with a gang of laborers. This was just as hard as blacksmithing, but I dreamed of some day becoming president of a railroad. It was about this time I fought my first fight, for which I received $3. In our crew was a 'navvy,' who thought he could pick up some easy money by whipping his fellow-laborers. I always had a reputation of being able to box and so was selected to meet him. We pitched a ring alongside the tracks we were laying, used oil to illuminate the scene and a man at the ringside beat an old tin pan at the start and finish of the rounds. It was a mighty tough battle. I forget just how many rounds we fought, but I recall it took every ounce of my strength to win. Finally I managed to stop the navvy, and then my career in the ring began. I was heralded about the camp and the nearby towns as a promising boxer and obtained offers to appear in amateur tournaments.

"Realization that I might become famous came to me first when old 'Mick' Hawkins of West Maitland, who knew the boxing game from beginning to end and had trained many pugilists, told me one day that I could become champion of Australia. That, coming from Hawkins, made me get down to work. I put aside everything else and started to train, to observe the other boxers at work. I dreamed fighting, lived fighting, ate fighting, so to speak. Hawkins really made me. I owe everything to him. That compliment from him justified an ambition in me that was irresistible.

Out-Thinks Rivals

"My experience in the tournament bouts in Australia helped me considerably. It was during the first series of matches, in which I defeated my five opponents, that I discovered that by out-thinking my rival I could out-fight him. I therefore resolved that while I was tearing into him with both hands I would try to picture to myself his state of mind. After some experience I discovered that the harder I fought the easier it was to reach my opponent. The fact that I kept tearing after him, hammering, hammering, hammering as I hammered the rod hot iron at the forge, impressed him with the idea that I was the greatest fighter he had ever met. Of course, I adopt different tactics against different opponents. I make my game fit theirs. But I have always made it a point to be the aggressor. I have never 'stalled.' By minimizing your rival's chances of hitting through hitting all the time, you get an advantage that counts heavily in your favor as the battle progresses."

CURLING

The skips selected to represent Peterborough in the games tonight in the final contests for the Niell-Sheppard Cup and the Fitzgerald-Bottum Shield are:

With Orillia:— Lang, Waddell, Campbell and Kay.

With Bobcaygeon—S. Ray, W. G. Ferguson and Sturgeon.

Peterborough is eight down with Orillia and 9 up with Bobcaygeon.

WINNIPEG HOCKEYISTS

Stars Played Clean and Fast at Pacific Coast

Si Griffis, former Kenora puck chasing star, and later captain of the Vancouver Millionaires, had nothing but words of praise for the former Winnipeg amateurs who went with Portland. "The Winnipeg boys play a nice game," he said, "but they are a little strange to the pro. article. Dunderdale, Murray, Johnson and Tobin, along with 'Smoky' Harris, furnished the fighting spirit and those 'Peggers just play a steady game, always in the way and sure goal-getters. They never get penalized very much because they attend strictly to the business on hand."

Don't worry over a mistake that can be corrected, but go to work and correct it.

MAXIM BUILT THE FIRST PLANE TO LEAVE EARTH

Many Discoveries by Late Sir Hiram Maxim.

"I plead guilty to being a chronic inventor. I commenced when I was very young, and have kept it up ever since," writes Sir Hiram Maxim in the story of his life. His first invention was an automatic mouse trap, which he made when he was a boy, and he has gone on inventing ever since. He discovered a new form of coal gas, brought about improvements in connection with fire engines, and when the British War Office was anxious to know why a certain powder made in Germany was slow burning, while English powder of exactly identical composition was quick burning, and all the great scientists failed to offer a solution, Sir Hiram took the matter in hand, found the answer in one evening's investigation, and saved the country buying the German secret at a cost of $175,000.

Another remarkable but little known achievement on the part of Sir Hiram was his solving of the problem of the incandescent electric light, an invention alone which made the carbon filament possible.

This was in the days before he turned his attention to automatic guns. The origin of the Maxim gun was related in an article which Sir Hiram contributed to "Tit-bits." He says that when the Kaiser first saw it he exclaimed, "That's the gun! There is no other."

Talking of the cost of his early experiments, Sir Hiram relates how one day, when his little gun was on exhibition at Hatton Garden, an imposing looking gentleman called, looked at it, took out his watch, expressed his doubt at its being able to fire 600 rounds a minute, and said he wanted to see the 600 rounds go off. "I said," says Sir Hiram, "I will furnish the gun if you will furnish the cartridges." He was very indignant, and he left suddenly. Later on he said that I had insulted him."

Lord Wolseley was one of the first to recognise the enormous possibilities of the Maxim gun.

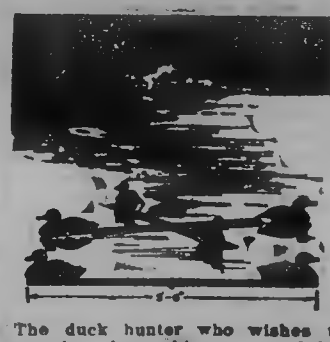
Referring to his later invention, Sir Hiram, who was the first man to make an aeroplane that actually lifted from the ground, says that his failure in the air was due to his ambition. He made his experimental machine too large, and at a time when the petrol motor had not been developed sufficiently.

He fitted it with the lightest engines and boilers that had ever been designed, and he made it rise from the rails on which it ran. One of his passengers was the late King Edward, when he was Prince of Wales. "The machine," says Sir Hiram, describing the flight on that occasion, "bounded forward with great rapidity. Admiral Commerell became frightened and said, 'Slow up,' but the Prince retorted, 'Let her go for all she's worth.' And I did. The Admiral was greatly frightened when he found we were going at railway speed, with the woods only two hundred feet away, but the strong ropes and the rotating windlasses very soon brought us to a state of rest."

One of the most interesting confessions in Sir Hiram's book relates how, being something of an amateur boxer in his early days, he had visions of becoming a prizefighter.

Unless a woman is looking for trouble she has no business to look sympathetically at a married man when his wife is present.

Duck Decoys Mounted



The duck hunter who wishes to economize by making some of his equipment will be interested in the folding frame for duck decoys, shown in the illustration. It is made of two strips, ¾ inches by 2 inches by 3 feet 6 inches, of soft wood, and fitted with a bolt at the middle, so that it may be folded, for convenience in carrying. The decoys are cut from a sheet of tinned metal, and are painted to resemble the game.—Popular Mechanics.

Magnate's Little Joke

During the short reign of the Big Four Lacrosse League in Eastern Canada, Chas. Querrie, manager of the Tecumsehs, was negotiating for the purchase of some players from R. J. Fleming, of the Torontos. "I'll give you Eddie Longfellow for a song," said Mr. Fleming. "Sorry I can't sing," said Mr. Querrie. Longfellow remained with the Torontos and was one of the best fielders in the league for several seasons. Thereafter on meeting the Tecumseh magnate "R. J." usually addressed him as follows: "You can't sing, eh! You're a fine lacrosse manager."

Canadian Boxer's Feat

It may be news to boxing fans that a Canadian boxer divided the honor with Battling Nelson for scoring two of the shortest knockout records. Billy Weeks from Western Canada was the man, and he gained his fame by walloping a boxer by the name of Rome Hagen at Wilkeson, Washington, December 13, 1915, by just taking two seconds to put over the sleeper. Weeks won the Canadian middleweight title by knocking out a fellow named Dewar in 19 seconds.

There is many a nifty stickhandler who does not like going in on the nets.

POINTED PARAGRAPHS.

When a busy man has leisure he always does some other kind of work.

Some people spend a lot of time in explaining things they know nothing about.

By careful observation you will notice that wealth brings happiness—as often as poverty.

Perhaps the reason a woman's work is never done is because she employs a domestic to do it.

The little boy was evidently a firm believer in the old adage, "Of two evils, choose the lesser." Turning a corner at full speed, he collided with the minister.

"Where are you running to, my little man?" asked the minister, when he had regained his breath.

"Home!" panted the boy. "Ma's going to spank me."

"What!" gasped the astonished minister. "Are you so eager to have your mother spank you that you run home so fast?"

"No," shouted the boy over his shoulder as he resumed his homeward flight, "but if I don't get there before pa gets home he'll do it!"

Cheap Tea Not Economical!

Many people complain about the poor flavor of the cheap tea they are using, but are trying to put up with it because they think they are saving money.

While Red Rose Tea may cost a few cents more, or even 10 cents more per pound, than common tea three teaspoonsful of Red Rose Tea are equal to five teaspoonsful of common tea.

Less Red Rose Tea is required in the tea pot, because this master blend of Indian-Ceylon teas consists largely of the famous hill grown teas of Assam, India.

These Assam teas excel in vigor, richness and strength. Their leaves yield more liquor and a fuller flavored liquor. Blended with Ceylons they make the ideal tea for flavor and economy.

Try a sealed package of Red Rose Tea and keep count of the extra number of cups it yields in comparison with cheap teas. You will find that Red Rose is worth every cent asked for it—and that it costs no more to use this delightful tea.

SERGT. DAVIS IN FRANCE AMONG THE TALL TIMBER

Doing His Bit on the Long End of an Axe.

"Since enlisting for this expedition I have had no regrets for my action other than the quite natural ones of leaving those nearest and dearest to me, but to whom, I have full confidence, I will be reunited by the grace of God when our work here is completed," writes Sergt. J. R. Davis, who is overseas with the Forestry Corps, in a letter to Mr. and Mrs. E. Kellar, 115 James street.

Sergt. Davis tells of the trip to the point of embarkation, the voyage across the ocean, and of his movements in England. He says: I had the opportunity of seeing the British Parliament in session, and listened with deep interest to the opening speech of the new Premier. I visited Westminster Abbey and St. Paul's Cathedral, with all their great and mighty dead of the past and the present. Both edifices are awe-inspiring, and the decay of the abbey bears evidence of its great ag. I had a look into the Tower, that prison of the past with its gruesome instruments of torture and vengeance still in evidence. Six days is too short a time in which to see such a large city as London; to get over it all would require a good six weeks; but I was well satisfied and had the worth of my money. I like all of England, so far as I have seen it, and am sure it is a beautiful place in the spring and summer, and hope to see more of it at some future date.

Now I am in France, among the timber, and as that is my natural element I am as happy as can be expected, being so far from home. The timber here compares favorably as to size and height with that of Ontario, but hard wood is rather scarce. The ground is smooth and free of undergrowth, which makes the work easy. The weather is ideal, with a little snow, and does not get as cold as at home.

Give my respects to Frank Farrin, Mr. Knox, Mr. Garrough, and also ask Mr. John New to send me his address if you see him, and I'll write to him.

I had the good luck to be in Paris for a few hours, something few soldiers enjoy. The city is good to look at, and more up-to-date in appearance than London, only the language is the great difficulty when it comes to getting around. By the time I am home I hope to be a fluent scholar in French or else have the Frenchmen here speaking English.

CUPID'S GARDEN FINE SUCCESS

BUSINESS GIRLS' CLUB HAD MANY VISITORS.

"Cupid's Garden" is past and gone and everyone regrets that it was not a permanent fixture instead of a few hours' delightful entertainment by the young ladies comprising the Business Girls' Club. The event took place at the Simcoe St. recruiting rooms on Saturday afternoon and the transformation worked out by the skill of the managing committee was wonderful. The centre of the room was changed into a beautiful garden tea room in which the prevailing color was pink, with a light green background. Inside were laid tables with unique decorations of pink hearts and silvered wishbones, cupids, birds, etc. The walls were similarly trimmed with pink hearts and the floral decorations were wonderful creations of plants with pink hearts for blossoms. The members who attended to the wants of their many friends were dressed in white costumes with pink hearts and strap trimmings. It was a charming effect and the pleasing surprise was evident in the passing remarks of the visitors.

From three until nine o'clock the ladies served tea and they were kept busy waiting on the people.

An original form of amusement was the tulip bed where two young ladies sold paper flowers at 10c each, to which were attached prizes. The suspense with which one waited to find what his luck would bring was great. Individual cakes of soap and small heart-shaped diamonds were favorite draws.

The club is to be congratulated on the success of their tea and the satisfaction that was given to one and all gives rise to the hope that this will not be the last of them.

The proceeds netted considerably over $100 and will be used for patriotic purposes.

Music was furnished all afternoon and evening by an Edison disc grafonola kindly loaned for the occasion by the J. M. Greene Music Co.

AUSTRIA ASKED TO DEFINE STAND

WOULD THROW SLACKERS IN THE OTONABEE RIVER

Pte. Bailey Says They Should be in France.

Mrs. H. W. Naish, 336 Mark St., whose son Pte. Charlie Naish, met death on the battle fields of France, has received the following letter from Pte. J. J. Bailey:

Dear Mrs. Naish: I am writing you these few lines hoping you are all in the best of health as it leaves me at present. Pleased to say I am getting along fine with my job. Dear Mrs. Naish, you know I didn't like to tell you anything about Charles because I know how you feel it, but I had been trying my best for you. The battalion Charlie was in has just come out of the trenches for a rest, and it was the first chance I had, so I went to see if I could get any more information. I saw some of the boys that were with Charlie at that time. I asked them if they could tell me anything about him and also about his belongings, and all they could tell me was that when he was hit be was carried to the dressing station, but he passed away before they got him there.

Dear Mrs. Naish, if you don't mind me telling you, a piece of shrapnel hit him on the neck. Charlie was a company bomber at the time. One good thing is, he was buried in a proper way. He was very much liked by the boys and they miss him very much. He never grumbled at anything all the time. Charlie was a real good soldier. You will receive his pay and book, etc., any time now. You see it has to be sent to the Canadian Registry Office and they will send it on to you, so please let me know if you get it before long; if you don't, I will make enquiries if possible. I wish I could give you more information than this. I can't do enough for you to relieve your sorrows, as I know how you feel. Please excuse me for telling of his passing away, as I thought it right you should know.

We are having some cold weather here now and a little snow. I guess you are having lots of it there now.

Leave has been held back for a while, and the number of men going on leave has been reduced so that it makes it longer for my turn to come. Well one good thing I have mine to come. Dad and Lewis are expecting to leave for England soon.

I don't think very much of the 93rd band. Fancy, still in Peterborough! Oh! it's a shame! THIS is the place where they ought to be—OUT HERE! They won't help to put this war to an end there. The boys in the trenches at the present time can do with all the music they can get to help them to carry their packs and march, give them plenty of encouragement and cheer them up. Nothing nicer than a band out here for their long, weary marches. Lots of the bands out here do stretcher-bearing in the trenches and play their instruments when they come out; their service is good, but it's not in Peterborough or anywhere else but France. There can't be many more left in Peterborough now and what are left and are able-bodied and of age and won't enlist, I'd throw them in the Otonabee River. My opinion of them isn't much. its too bad about those boys you told me about.

When I was at the Canadian base I was working in the dining hall and I met Teddy Payne. I shook hands with him and we had quite a little talk together.

Fancy the cereal mills being burned down. I was reading a Canadian paper the other day and I saw the picture of the place burning. It will put a lot of people out of work.

Well I guess I must come to a close. Give my best respects to Mr. Naish and love to all

Pte. J. J. Bailey.

DOUGLAS SISTERS FACE CHARGES OF MURDER

W. L. Buck and F. W. Doan, who were summoned to serve on the grand jury of the spring sittings of the Supreme Court at the City Council Chamber this afternoon, failed to answer to their names. W. H. Clements and Wm. Davidson, two petit jurors, were called to complete the jury. W. J. Porter, ex-warden of the county, was chosen foreman.

Mr. Justice Sutherland of Toronto is the presiding judge: Mr. G. N. Shaver, K.C., Toronto, is Crown prosecutor, assisted by County Crown Attorney Hatton. Mr. Dan O'Connell, Toronto, is defending Annie and Alice Douglas, who will be tried on serious charges growing out of the death of Annie Douglas' child.

Mrs. McElhiney, police matron, sat with Alice Douglas, the sister not being in the court room.

Inspector Miller, who carried out the investigations in Asphodel township and made the arrests, was present in court.

After outlining to the jurors their duties, the judge reviewed the incidents surounding the birth and death and burial of Annie Douglas' child, and of the assistance given to Annie Douglas by her sister Alice.

The Charges

Annie Douglas is charged with having murdered her child. Alice Douglas is charged with having murdered the child of Annie Douglas and also of having disposed of the dead body of a child with intent to conceal birth.

Honor Well Won

In his sermon at Broadway Tabernacle, Toronto, Sunday evening, the Rev. W. R. Young said, in discussing social conditions in the city: "I take no side in politics when I say that no more fitting honor has been conferred by His Majesty than the gift of knighthood to Sir William Hearst, who rose to the temperance issue in the face of a strongly entrenched liquor interest, and announced his purpose to carry through the Legislature the Ontario Temperance Act, even if it meant his defeat at the next election if he did so."

MILITARY AGE MAY BE RAISED

MEN OF 50 TO BE TAKEN INTO THE SERVICE.

LONDON, Feb. 20. —The Times understands that it has been decided to revise the exemption certificates of all men under 31 years of age, and says there ar also reasons to believe matters will not be allowed to rest at this stage. The revision of the exemptions of men of 30 are not expected to supply the number necessary for the first of the military requirements at the moment—namely, men physically fit for the fighting line. Unless these are forthcoming from the large number of young unskilled men still in the industries or other civil employment, it may be necessary to raise the military age from 41 to 50.

WOMEN DO DUTY AT THE FRONT

NEW MOVE DECIDED UPON BY THE MILITARY AUTHORITIES.

LONDON, Feb. 20.—According to The Express, the military authorities are developing a scheme under which women will be substituted for men in a number of non combatant positions in the army, both in Great Britain and France, such as cooking, canteen work, storekeeping and clerical work, thereby releasing thousands of men. The Express says that already 30,000 women are employed in army work as cooks, waitresses, motor drivers and similar occupations.

DR. GRENFELL'S WORK

Once more the Grenfell Week has come. For the next six days either of our local papers will receive the annual offerings of the people of Peterborough for the work of the Deep Sea Mission. This is one interest in which we stand united. Dr. Grenfell and his workers are not supported by any single denomination. The doctor has given his life for the fisherfolks on the Labrador Coast. No mission has ever presented a greater responsibility or been more fruitful in results. The healing of the bodies of thousands has opened the way for spiritual healing among this lonely people in the northern wilds. So great have been the results that all over our land the people welcome the coming of Grenfell Week.

There was a time when the people of Peterborough attempted to do their share by arranging a festive evening. Later the conviction came upon us that the cause was worthy of another kind of benevolence. The newspapers of our city were glad to contribute space and to receive the gifts of the people. The success of this plan has made it a permanent arrangement.

This is the week—Feb. 18 to 25. If you leave your offering early it will render a double service for its acknowledgment will keep the enterprise before the people.

This is a time of many offerings, but surely it is no person's plan to drop such an interest as this, because of the multiplied calls of war time. No, these are not days of changed giving, but of increased giving. We have put our hand to the plough and will not turn back. In days to come when the clouds that now hang so low have lifted we will be glad that we did not neglect the self-sacrificing workers of the Deep Sea Mission.

Send your gifts today to The Review or Examiner. They will be acknowledged by Mrs. James Wood, the secretary-treasurer. This appeal has the unanimous endorsement of the Peterborough Ministerial Association.

BRITISH ATTACK TO WEST OF MESSINES

Berlin Reports Advances Were Repulsed and Some Prisoners Taken.

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

Austrians Dig Under Snow to Reach Italian Trenches

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

ROME, Feb. 20. — Last night the enemy entered through galleries dug under snow one of our trenches near Casere Zebio Pastorile, says today's war office statement. After heavy hand-to-hand fighting the enemy was repulsed with considerable loss, leaving some prisoners in our hands.

Yesterday we again shelled the railway station of Tarvis.

On the remainder of the front there were artillery duels, especially east of Gorizia.

REV. T. H. MITCHELL IS CALLED TO TORONTO

Popular Minister of St. Andrew's Unanimously Invited to Old St. Andrew's--- One of the Strongest Congregations in Capital City.

Rev. T. H. Mitchell, minister in charge of St. Andrew's Church, has been called to the pastorate of Old St. Andrew's Church, Toronto, the second Presbyterian church in point of influence and income in that city. The call was unanimously decided upon at a meeting of the congregation last night. Mr. Mitchell has not yet received official notice of the invitation, but there is hardly a doubt that he will accept it.

Mr. Mitchell came to St. Andrew's over a year ago to take the place of Rev. (Capt.) Jas. Rollins, who became quartermaster of the 93rd Battalion. He had resigned a charge in London, and intended to retire to his farm near Markham to rest, but was finally induced to come to Peterborough. His services both as preacher and pastor have been highly successful and satisfactory from the first, and he is generally conceded to be one of the leading ministers of the Presbyterian Church anywhere in Canada.

The St. Andrew's congregation, however, never hoped to be able to retain him permanently. It was his wish to retire at the beginning of this year, but he was induced to continue. The end of the war would mean his departure from this city.

The call to Toronto, as did the one to Peterborough, comes to him without solicitation. First, the assistant pastor of the Toronto church waited upon him. A delegation was sent from Toronto on two separate Sundays to hear him preach in St. Andrew's, and the report of the visitors to their own congregation was unanimous in his favor. Mr. Mitchell preached at the preparatory communion service in Toronto a little over a week ago, and that settled the matter. The meeting last night was the result.

Much as they will regret to lose him, the congregation of St. Andrew's cannot in reason ask Mr. Mitchell to decline the call. The opportunity now offered him is one that seldom comes to a minister more than once in a lifetme. The church is not only one of the best in Toronto, but Prof. Law of Knox College is assistant pastor, and will relieve Mr. Mitchell of a great part of the work. The latter will be expected to preach at only one service every Sunday. He will be able to spend a few days of each week at his farm at Markham, and the partial rest and change is sure to be beneficial. Three months' vacation each summer is also promised.

Capt. Rollins has sent back word that he will not return to Peterborough until the war is over. He intends to revert in rank so as to get to the trenches. Another minister will probably be called to fill the pulpit until Capt. Rollins returns, when Mr. Mitchell leaves.

Today's Globe, speaking of Mr. Mitchell, says: He is a native of Stouffville, Ont. He is a graduate of the Universities of Toronto and Winnipeg, and took a post-graduate course at Harvard. He is about fifty years of age, and has a reputation as a thoughtful preacher.

The pastorate of Old St. Andrew's has been vacant since the death of Rev. Dr. Harper Gray in August last. Rev. Prof. Law, who was associated with the pulpit during Dr. Gray's ministry and in the interim, will continue his old relations with the church under the pastorate of Mr. Mitchell.

PETERBOROUGH, TUESDAY, FEBRUARY 20, 1917

THE SLACKER'S LAST CHANCE.

HON. W. D. McPHERSON, speaking at a recruiting meeting in Toronto Sunday night, said that the necessity for such gatherings would soon pass away, and he left the inference to be drawn by the young men in the audience. Mr. McPherson certainly did not mean to convey the impression that the war will soon be over. What he evidently meant was that conscription will soon be in force, and that the policy of moral suasion will be abandoned.

When you come to think of it, does it not strike you that moral suasion has in the matter of defence been worked threadbare? It has been, if not altogether given up, at least stronger buttressed by legislative enactment in other matters. Moral suasion was insufficient to cope with the drink evil. The teachings of the Church are backed up by the State. Moral suasion alone does not prevent murder or theft any more than it can gently induce a man to serve as a juror, pay his poll tax, or any other form of taxes, or to turn out to put in his statute labor.

Yet, in spite of the lessons gleaned from all these experiences, the Government has leaned on moral suasion as on a broken reed to educate men to a realization and the discharge of the most supreme duty of citizenship, the defence of home and country; the vindication of civilization and human liberty. If moral suasion failed to teach the people their lesser duties, how can it be expected to work a miracle when it comes to a matter compared to which all other sacrifices are as nothing?

STREET RAILWAY EXTENSION.

WHETHER THE Hydro-Electric Commission extend the street railway system now or the work is deferred until the utility is taken over by the city makes no difference so far as the public finances are concerned. If the work is done by the Commission, the cost will be added to the purchase price.

A correspondent in a local paper raises the timely point that Lakefield is entitled to a better connection by railway with the city, and that the local service should be extended to the former place. The Review discussed this issue some time ago, when it was pointed out that the Grand Trunk Company had expressed a willingness to lease their Lakefield branch to the city at a fair rental. The road could be electrified and run in connection with the civic system. This would afford an excellent start in the network of radial roads which it is proposed to run through the county.

THE FARMER-SOLDIER.

THERE ARE HUNDREDS of farms in Ontario upon which there is not more than one man of working age. One need not go outside the boudaries of Peterborough County for proof that the condition is general. In isolated cases this may not be the situation, but that it exists in nearly every county in the Province is a fact universally admitted by those who are in a position to know.

The cry has already gone out that owing to the scarcity of laborers there is a danger that the arable land in the Province will not be properly seeded during the coming spring, and a food shortage next winter threatens. City people are asked to lend the farmers all possible aid, both in seed-time and harvest. The same appeal was sent out last year, only to meet with an indifferent response. What brighter prospects are there that the result will be any more satisfactory this season?

There are duties now discharged by men which women are not only able but willing to undertake; but these duties are to be found in the cities rather than in the county. Nature never designed women for the heavy outdoor work on a farm. Every framer is entitled to sufficient help to work his land properly if he is to answer his country's call for more foodstuffs. The fighting forces must be fed or the cause will collapse. Foodstuffs are just as essential as munitions. The farmer who is working from daylight to dark at all seasons, exposed to all kinds of weather, is certainly doing as much for his country as the man who is working easy hours in a munitions factory at fancy wages. There is work in the latter places which women can do with vastly greater service to the nation than they could render trying to drive a team of heavy horses on a farm.

The National Service census recently completed has revealed rural as well as urban labor conditions. That knowledge can be utilized to strike a balance of conditions. Farm labor should be fairly distributed, and recruits for the army taken as far as possible from the cities, where the vacancies caused by enlistment can be filled by women.

SIMON, THE CONSCRIPT.

SIMON, THE CYRENIAN, was in Jerusalem on that day which has become the central point from which time, forward and backward, is reckoned. He saw the historical procession of death on its way to Calvary, the throng of jeering Roman soldiers, the hooting mob, two malefactors, probably calm by reason of indifference to their fate, and the Central Figure, crowned with thorns, arrayed in a mock robe of purple, bleeding from the cruel scourge, exhausted almost unto death, and saddened by the inconstancy of the false-hearted throng that but the day before hailed Him as their King. He was staggering along under the weight of His cross, and His executioners were growing impatient at the slow pace of the procession to the mount of death.

Glancing about them for someone to lend a hand, the soldiers noted the countryman, who was probably gazing, with compassion in his countenance, upon the Sufferer. "And him they compelled to bear the cross," which was too heavy for the other.

We all like to believe that the honest countryman performed his task willingly, out of the kindness of his heart. His name will always live in sacred history. But the veneration in which he is held by the disciples of Him Whom he served would have been all the deeper if he had volunteered the service the Roman soldiers compelled him to perform.

A duty done willingly is done twice. The young Canadian who does not enlist until he is conscripted may make a faithful and devoted national defender, but the honor so freely lavished upon a volunteer will never be his.

NOT SO "DARNED" HARD.

THE TORONTO STAR says editorially:

> Lt.-Col. Pratt, M.P.P. (of the 133rd Norfolk Battalion), offererd to revert to the rank of lieutenant to get to the front. "But they tell me," he writes, "that if a colonel reverts it will be a reflection on many senior officers who have returned to Canada."
>
> "But," concludes Col. Pratt, "this is an awful war, and the darnedest war to get to you ever saw." He is keeping at it, and declares he still has hopes that he will get into it.

It is an awful war, all right, but the fact remains that so far as the private is concerned, it is not so hard, darned or otherwise, to get into the thick of it.

MIND VERSUS BODY.

REV. T. H. MITCHELL, in his address to the Men's Class at St. Andrew's Church Sunday afternoon, stated that the educational system of Ontario is probably one of the best in the world. He raised the point, however, that too much of the forcing process is employed, and that the mind of the child is trained while his physical development is neglected.

There are educational faddists who would add more frills to the school system. They still insist upon the penny banks. No one will deny that the teaching of thrift is essential, any more than they will dispute the wisdom of teaching a child to say his morning and evening prayers. The teacher has his duties to perform, and so has the parent. The latter should not attempt to throw the entire burden of the training of the child upon the other.

There are various ways in which thrift can be taught a child, just as there are at least two avenues by which Toronto may be reached from this city, both lines of communication offering equal inducements as to cost, convenience and the time necessary to devote to the journey. Two citizens intent on visiting the capital city might wrangle for hours as to which line of railway to patronize. However bootless the discussion might be, it would not indicate any disposition to question the desirability of going to Toronto.

It is just possible that a newspaper, in its midirected zeal in the advocacy of a narrow fad, may exalt the child's mental development above his physical growth, and prize the tree that grows in the school yard more than the lusty boy who plays in its shade. With such a paper the greatest exhibition of juvenile depravity is for that boy to shin up such a tree and play in its branches. It would at once make such wantonness the subject of the combined authority of the teacher and the school board.

If anything in the way of a fad is to be added to the curriculum of the school, let it be something that will have a tendency in the direction of physical development. After all, there are darker juvenile crimes than climbing a municipal tree or spending five cents at a candy counter. The tree is not injured, but the boy is developed. The piece of money is not removed for all time from circulation, as it would be if the child had cast it into the river or buried it in a place where it would never be found again. The fact that there is $350,000 in the school banks earning the princely income of three per cent. does not prove that there is that much more visible wealth in Canada, but simply that it exists in one particular department of the financial arrangements. A man with $100 in one pocket or drawer in his safe is not richer by that amount than if he kept the money in some other receptacle.

THAT OVERT ACT.

THE OVERT ACT on the part of Germany for which President Wilson waited with a patience worthy a better justification appears to have been thrust upon him. An American vessel has been sunk and there is no question as to the nationality of the crew. All but one man—and he was a negro from Jamaica—were New Englanders, and nearly every man's family could trace their lineage back to the days of the Revolution. And yet President Wilson, while he may not have abandoned watching, continues to wait.

It may not be apparent to Mr. Wilson that Germany is really at war with his nation. The Kaiser has accepted the defi implied when Ambassador Bernstorff was given his passports. Germany is treating American shipping in every respect the same as she is that of the Entente Powers.

So long as the Germans continue to give the crews of the torpedoed vessels even the slim chance to escape in open boats, the Allies can claim no grievance under international law. Submarine warfare is something that has not been regulated by that code. The fact that these vessels, loaded with cargoes of immense value, are sent to the bottom is not an evidence of frightfulness, nor is it fair to describe such destruction as piracy. Germany would gladly make prizes of the vessels instead of sinking them, but it is one of her misfortunes that she has no means of bringing them into port.

If the United States still insists that its relations with Germany have not been strained to the breaking point, Germany evidently does not take that view of the situation. All that is lacking for a sure-enough combat is for the Americans to take a hand in their own defence.

In the meantime their docks are being piled up with freight intended for the European market. Does Mr. Wilson propose to continue to wait inert himself and leave the entire burden of the defence of his commerce and traffic on the seas to the British fleet?

COMPENSATION ACT CHANGES SUGGESTED BY BOTH SIDES

Although no mention was made in the speech in the Ontario House to the Workmen's Compensation Act, it is fully expected that some changes will be made, which experience of the workings of the act has shown necessary. It will be recalled that the brief as presented by the workers' representatives asked that the act be amended to increase the amount of compensation to 62 2-3 per cent., the present rate of 55 per cent. being found inadequate in case of injury, in many cases the compensation being swallowed up in the necessary medical attention.

For an effective act first aid should also be supplied for the injured, with proper medical attendance and treatment thereafter, the entire cost of same to be charged to the industry affected. Nothing less than these changes, it is claimed, would make for an equitable compensation, facts and figures being adduced to prove this contention with cases cited, some of these being gained from Ottawa.

The counter proposals have been submitted by the Canadian Manufacturers' Association, in the form of a brief, with proposals that there shall be an absolute waiting period of fourteen days after an accident, before any compensation is paid, and that the employer shall have the right to provide said medical attention for a period not to exceed thirty days or a total outlay of more than $50, the attention to be given to be satisfactory to the compensation board.

On this line the building trades contractors advocate in regard to first aid and medical treatment that the employees contribute one cent a day from their wages to a fund for the purpose of receiving in return medical attention as long as necessary, any shortage in this fund to be made up by the employers.

The unfairness of the manufacturers' proposal in the fourteen day interval is obvious from the statistics of the workings of the act last year, when 9,828 accidents were dealt with by the board, and with the absolute waiting period of fourten days a sum of $143,000 paid out last year to those whose injury did not extend to that period would have been withheld from the sufferers, this rule applying to the majority of all injured workers.

Premier Hearst has commented on the diversity of opinion between the two forces concerned, but at the same time the case for labor is backed up by actual experience whilst the changes suggested for the employers are in the direction of experiment with the worker to be the subject for same.

PREFER SKATING IN THE OPEN

"The weather's warming up," announced the cautious boarder to the table at dinner. "Let's go to Jackson Park and skate."

"Why not go to the rink and rub elbows with the upper set?" asked the boarder who worked in a drug store.

"Not enough fresh air," said the cautious boarder. "Besides, there is no great reason why I should get interested in the upper set," he added with a glance at the pretty teacher.

"But the music," continued the drug store man.

"Well, the wind sighing through the trees suits me," said the cautious boarder. "Besides, my realty commissions have been slow the last few weeks and if I start going with the exclusive set I'll be ruined financially."

"I don't understand," said the drug salesman.

"I'll explain," said the cautious one. "Going to the rink is one of the most expensive outings I could take. First item, car fare, 10 cents; second, 25 cents to get in; third, 35 cents for skates, then $10 for skates and shoes fastened together and all your own. Then 50 cents' advance rent on a locker to keep your shoes and skates in, and every time you lose the key to said locker, 25 cents more.

"Next you require a particular kind of hat to skate in, then a skating sweater, later appropriate and practical trousers, then gloves, which three items total $44.66— not including the cost of entertainment if you should meet some of your rich customers there.

"Park skating is the only skating. You don't have to pay carfare when you go to the park, not a cent. A two-mile walk will put new life into you. Then all you need is a good thick pair of trousers and yarn gloves, preferably red, a thingumbob to tie around your ears and there you are!

"You take a whirl down the course for a mile or so and you come back all warmed up and panting. Down one side and up the other, under the bridges, past the bath house you glide and no one interferes with your progress. The moon comes out, the scenery becomes romantic and your mood sentimental. You drink in barrels of good fresh air, rout the bacteria, and what does it cost you. Not a cent. I'm strong for it."

"You've got it all figured out, haven't you?" said the drug man. "Sounds to me as if you're saving for a home. Well, I won't block the choice of the party. What do the rest of you say?"

"I'm in favor of going to the park, too," said the pretty teacher.

"You win," said the drug clerk to the cautious boarder.

A DAILY NOVELETTE

I.

On May 4 the daily papers of Pibblestown published the news that one Watts E. Worth had discovered a $2,000 pearl while eating a dozen on the half shell at Googer's oyster house. On May 6 the inhabitants of the town read that Spoofby Nearby hadbitten into a $3,500 pearl in the left hand corner of an oyster stew brewed from oysters purchased at Tutt's oystery.

II.

By May 11 while report of pearl finders continued to fill the news, the streets of Pibblestown were covered four inches deep with oyster shells. The street paving department waslaid up with brain fever from inability to cope with the situation. Work was suspended while the people of Pibblestown feverishly consumed oysters in a mad hunt for pearls. All the oyster houses opened annexes, and 40,000 oysters an hour were sold. By May 19 the shells on the streets were a foot deep, completely tying up all traffic, including the trolley service.

III.

The mayor of Pibblestown, in addressing the citizens, remarked: "I said before my election that I would pave the streets of Pibblestown in a manner unequalled in the whole state and at a less cost than such work was ever accomplished before. And I have kept my pledge! For, I invented those pearl finding stories out of my fertile brain, and our oyster shell roads are today the talk of the world. We are receiving congratulatory telegrams from automobile manufacturers every hour. I seen my duty and I done it! Selah!"

And they all clapped their hands and feet in applause.

BEFORE ADAM

By JACK LONDON

Copyright, 1907, by the MacMillan company.

It was not until we got over our first enthusiasm for navigation and had begun to return to our tree shelter to sleep at night, that we found the Swift One. I saw her first, gathering young acorns from the branches of a large oak near our tree. She was very timid. At first, she kept very still; but when she saw that she was discovered she dropped to the ground and dashed wildly away. We caught occasional glimpses of her from day to day, and came to look for her when we traveled back and forth between our tree and the mouth of the slough.

And then, one day, she did not run away. She waited our coming, and made soft peace sounds. We could not get very near, however. When we seemed to approach too close, she darted suddenly away and from a safe distance uttered the soft sounds again. This continued for some days. It took a long while to get acquainted with her, but finally it was accomplished and she joined us sometimes in our play.

I liked her from the first. She was of most pleasing appearance. She was very mild. Her eyes were the mildest I had ever seen. In this she was quite unlike the rest of the girls and women of the folk, who were born viragos. She never made harsh, angry cries, and it seemed to be her nature to flee away from trouble rather than to remain and fight.

The mildness I have mentioned seemed to emanate from her whole being. Her bodily as well as facial appearance was the cause of this. Her eyes were larger than most of her kind, and they were not so deep set, while the lashes were longer and more regular. Nor was her nose so thick and squat. It had quite a bridge, and the nostrils opened downward. Her incisors were not large, nor was her upper lip long and down hanging nor her lower lip protruding. She was not very hairy, except on the outsides of arms and legs and across the shoulders, and while she was thin hipped her calves were not twisted and gnarly.

I have often wondered, looking back upon her from the twentieth century through the medium of my dreams, and it has always occurred to me that possibly she may have been related to the Fire People. Her father, or mother, might well have come from that higher stock. While such things were not common, still they did occur, and I have seen proof of them with my own eyes, even to the extent of members of the horde turning renegade and going to live with the Tree People.

All of which is neither here nor there. The Swift One was radically different from any of the females of the horde, and I had a liking for her from the first. Her mildness and gentleness attracted me. She was never rough, and she never fought. She always ran away, and right here may be noted the significance of the name of her. She was a better climber than Lop Ear or I. When we played tag we could never catch her except by accident, while she could catch us at will. She was remarkably swift in all her movements and she had a genius for judging distances that was equaled only by her daring. Excessively timid in all other matters, she was without fear when it came to climbing or running through the trees, and Lop Ear and I were awkward and lumbering and cowardly in comparison.

She was an orphan. We never saw her with any one, and there was no telling how long she had lived alone in the world. She must have learned early in her helpless childhood that safety lay only in flight. She was very wise and very discreet. It became a sort of game with Lop Ear and me to try to find where she lived. It was certain that she had a tree shelter somewhere, and not very far away, but trail her as we would, we could never find it. She was willing enough to join with us at play in the daytime, but the secret of her abiding place she guarded jealously.

It must be remembered that the description I have just given of the Swift One is not the description that would have been given by Big Tooth, my other self of my dreams, my prehistoric ancestor. It is by the medium of my dreams that I, the modern man, look through the eyes of Big Tooth and see.

And so it is with much that I narrate of the events of that faroff time. There is a duality about my impressions that is too confusing to inflict upon my readers. I shall merely pause here in my narrative to indicate this duality, this perplexing mixing of personality. It is I, the modern, who look back across the centuries and weigh and analyze the emotions and motives of Big Tooth, my other self. He did not bother to weigh and analyze. He was simplicity itself. He just lived events, without ever pondering why he lived them in his particular and often erratic way.

As I, my real self, grew older, I entered more and more into the substance of my dreams. One may dream and even in the midst of the dream be aware that he is dreaming, and if the dream be bad, comfort himself with the thought that it is only a dream. This is a common experience with all of us. And so it was that I, the modern, often entered into my dreaming, and in the consequent strange dual personality was both actor and spectator. And right often have I, the modern, been perturbed and vexed by the foolishness, illogic, obtuseness and general all round stupendous stupidity of myself, the primitive.

And one thing more, before I end this digression. Have you ever dreamed that you dreamed? Dogs dream, horses dream, all animals dream. In Big Tooth's day the half men dreamed, and when the dreams were bad they howled in their sleep. Now I, the modern, have lain down with Big Tooth and dreamed his dreams.

This is getting almost beyond the grip of the intellect, I know, but I do know that I have done this thing. And let me tell you that the flying and crawling dreams of Big Tooth were as vivid to him as the falling through space dream is to you.

For Big Tooth also had an other self, and when he slept that other self dreamed back into the past, back to the winged reptiles and the clash and the onset of dragons and beyond that to the scurrying, rodent-like life of the tiny mammals and, far remoter still, to the shore slime of the primeval sea. I cannot, I dare not, say more. It is all too vague and complicated and awful. I can only hint of those vast and terrific vistas through which I have peered hazily at the progression of life, not upward from the ape to man, but upward from the worm.

And now to return to my tale. I, Big Tooth, knew not the Swift One as a creature of finer facial and bodily symmetry, with long lashed eyes and a bridge to her nose and down opening nostrils that made toward beauty. I knew her only as the mild eyed young female who made soft sounds and did not fight. I liked to play with her—I knew not why—to seek food in her company and to go bird nesting with her. And I must confess she taught me things about tree climbing. She was very wise, very strong, and no clinging skirts impeded her movements.

CHAPTER IX.

It was about this time that a slight defection arose on the part of Lop Ear. He got into the habit of wandering off in the direction of the tree where my mother lived. He had taken a liking to my vicious sister, and the Chatterer had come to tolerate him. Also, there were several other young people, progeny of the monogamic couples that lived in the neighborhood, and Lop Ear played with these young people.

I could never get the Swift One to join with them. Whenever I visited them she dropped behind and disappeared. I remember once making a strong effort to persuade her. But she cast backward, anxious glances, then retreated, calling to me from a tree. So it was that I did not make a practice of accompanying Lop Ear when he went to visit his new friends. The Swift One and I were good comrades; but, try as I would, I could never find her tree shelter. Undoubtedly, had nothing happened, we would have soon mated, for our liking was mutual. But the something did happen.

One morning, the Swift One not having put in an appearance, Lop Ear and I were down at the mouth of the slough playing on the logs. We had scarcely got out on the water when we were startled by a roar of rage. It was Red Eye. He was crouching on the edge of the timber jam and glowering his hatred at us. We were badly frightened, for here was no narrow mouthed cave for refuge. But the twenty feet of water that intervened gave us temporary safety, and we plucked up courage.

Red Eye stood up erect and began beating his hairy chest with his fist. Our two logs were side by side, and we sat on them and laughed at him. At first our laughter was half hearted, tinged with fear, but as we became convinced of his impotence we waxed uproarious. He raged and raged at us and ground his teeth in helpless fury. And in our fancied security we mocked and mocked him. We were ever short-sighted, we folk.

We Were Startled by a R[illegible] of Rage.

And just as abruptly our merriment gave way to consternation. It was not Red Eye's way to forego revenge so easily. We waited in fear and trembling for whatever was to happen. It never struck us to paddle away. He came back with great leaps across the jam, one huge hand filled with round, water washed pebbles. I am glad that he was unable to find larger missiles, say, stones weighing two or three pounds, for we were no more than a score of feet away, and he surely would have killed us.

THE FRUITS OF LIBERTY

GERMANY DOES NOT FIGURE LARGELY IN BIG INDUSTRIAL INVENTIONS.

A brief review of the sources of the important discoveries and inventions, which have made the industries of the civilized world vastly more effective since 1830 than they ever were before will convince any impartial person, says Charles W. Eliot, in the "Atlantic," that the means of improvement have come from the free countries, and not from the countries despotically governed. Going back to the latter part of the eighteenth century, we find that propulsion by steam on land and water was first made commercially successful by Englishmen and Americans; and that English and French chemists made the fundamental discoveries in chemical theory. In the early part of the nineteenth century, the development of the factory system with steam-driven machinery was an English achievement, and later an American. Coming on in the nineteenth century, it was Americans who developed the telegraph and telephone as industrial implements, and thereby changed in large measure the habits of industrial, commercial and financial life, and in many respects of domestic and family life also. It was an Italian who invented and made commercially practical electric lighting and the wide diffusion of mechanical power by electricity. The explosive engine was developed as an industrial agent in France; and the gasoline motor and the automobile have been French, English and American developments. The aeroplane heavier than air was invented by Professor Langley, when Secretary of the Smithsonian Institution, and was developed for practical use by two other Americans—the Wright brothers. The cotton gin, on which the whole cotton textile industry is founded, was the invention of an American, as were also the sewing machine, the typewriter, and all sorts of shoe machinery.

HUN CREPT TOWARD WOUNDED CANADIAN

But This Foeman Bandaged the Other and They Endured Agony Together

A Canadian soldier in an English hospital wrote to a lady working for the Canadian Red Cross Society, asking her to come to see him as he was very ill and very lonely. She found the man suffering from a very severe wound in the armpit; the arm was kept outstretched at right angles from the body, and the case was a serious one. The story the poor fellow told was, like so many of those of the battlefield, extremely pathetic. "Some time ago," he said, "I was told off for an advance on some of the ground that had been lost the day before. We went forward a few yards and then down again, and so on repeatedly, as the shells were coming over in great numbers. Suddenly I was hit, and this time, when I fell I could not get up again. The battle went on, and the din was awful. I crawled into a ditch and then, I suppose, lost consciousness. For presently I found myself lying there in absolute quiet.

That Crawling German

"There was no one in sight. I looked round and a little way off I saw a German lying on the ground and moving. I wondered what would happen. The man was evidently wounded. I kept quite still, but by and by my wound gave me so much pain that I could not help groaning. At this the German looked over to me and began slowly and laboriously to make his way towards me. He had been wounded in both legs, and crawling was evidently painful work for him. Still he came on, and when he reached me he spoke to me in English, and bandaged up my wound. He behaved to me with the greatest kindness, and when he found that all the food I had got was a bit of bread, he proceeded to share his food, of which he had got a good supply, with me. We remained lying out in the open together for forty-eight hours and became very good friends. He showed me a photograph of his wife and four children, of whom he spoke with great tenderness.

Kindness Was Repaid

"At length, after two days and two nights, I saw some Canadians coming towards us. They did not see us, but stopped about fifty yards away and began to dig a trench. The German and I began to discuss the question as to which of us should go to the Canadians for help, and we decided that I should go, as the German, when crawling to them, might be regarded as acting with hostile intent. So I made my way as best I could to the Canadians, told them what a good friend to me the German had been, and they straightway went after him and carried him most tenderly back to our lines. I was glad to see them try to repay his goodness to me."

HOW TO KEEP WELL

BY JOHN W. S. McCULLOUGH, M.D., D.P.H., CHIEF OFFICER OF THE PROVINCIAL BOARD OF HEALTH.

INFANT WELFARE—ARTICLE No. 8.

FORMULA for Fourth Month:
Cream—Six ounces.
Skimmed Milk—Eight ounces.
Boiled Water—Eighteen ounces.
Sugar of Milk—Four level tablespoonfuls.

From this point until the baby is eight months old two ounces of skimmed milk should be added and two ounces less of boiled water used. The sugar of milk in the formula should be reduced one half teaspoonful every three months.

Formula at Eight Months:—
Cream—Nine ounces.
Skimmed Milk—Twenty-seven ounces.
Boiled Water—Twelve ounces.
Sugar of Milk—1½ level tablespoonfuls.

At this age the formula may be made from whole milk as follows:—
Whole Milk—Thirty-six ounces.
Boiled Water—Twelve ounces.
Sugar of Milk—4½ level tablespoonfuls.

From this point on to thirteen months the formula may be increased by replacing the boiled water with whole milk two ounces each month. At thirteen months the boiled water may be omitted from the formula, one ounce a week. Beginning at the age of eight months the sugar may be gradually reduced one tablespoonful each month.

At the age of five months or at any time after that, barley water is a very good substitute for the boiled water in the formula. A sign indicating the use of barley water is the failure of the baby to gain in weight. Gain in weight is one of the best signs that the baby is doing well. Another indication for barley water is the appearance of the baby's movements. If they are not well digested try the use of barley water.

Barley Water Barley water is made by mixing two level teaspoonfuls of Robinson's or Brook's barley flour to enough water to make a paste, add water to one pint. Boil for twenty minutes in a double boiler. Strain through two thicknesses of cheesecloth. Add enough boiled water up to one pint to make up for what has boiled away.

Lime Water. This is added to the formula if the baby spits up its food or if the stools are too frequent or slightly green in color. If used it should be added in the proportion of one-fifth of cream and skimmed milk. For example in the formula for a new-born baby there are four ounces of milk and cream. One-fifth of this is about three-quarters of an ounce. The boiled water should be reduced by this quantity.

Boiled Water. All water used by the baby should be boiled. In addition to the quantity given in each feeding the baby should have some boiled water a couple of times a day. At first it may have one-half to three-quarters of an ounce, twice a day. This should be gradually increased until at three months he is taking four or five ounces a day. Give it before the bath in the morning and in the later afternoon.

Sugar of Milk. The best sugar to use is lactose or sugar of milk.

Malt Sugar. This may be used when the baby does not digest sugar of milk well, does not gain in weight, or is constipated. It should not be given if the baby vomits or has loose movements.

Cane Sugar. Cane sugar or ordinary granulated sugar is often used. It is cheaper and more convenient and many babies do well on it, but it is not so satisfactory as sugar of milk. Changes should not be made except on the advice of a physician.

Amount at a Feeding. The stomach of a baby is quite small. If too much food is given or if it is given too often the stomach becomes distended, indigestion is set up, and the baby manifests its discomfort by crying or restlessness. At birth the average baby will take with comfort from one half to one ounce. This amount may be gradually increased at the rate of an ounce a week up to eight ounces at a feeding. The average amount of food for a baby to take is one ounce more than he is months old. Big healthy babies will take more than small delicate ones.

Method of Feeding. Do not prop the bottle up and leave the baby to feed itself. Hold it throughout the whole nursing. Occasionally take it away to let air into the bottle. Each feeding should be given slowly, taking twenty or twenty-five minutes.

GETTING AFTER CHILBLAINS.

Some Hints About Remedies For These Winter Pests.

Here are a number of cures for frosted feet or chilblains. Some are very simple.

Soak the feet in water in which potatoes with their jackets on have been boiled.

Soak the feet in strong brine.

Soak the feet in bran water containing three teaspoonfuls of muriate of ammonia.

Take equal parts of tincture of iodine and solution of ammonia and paint the bitten parts morning and evening.

Another preparation that is good is the following: One ounce of spirits of wine, ten drops of tincture of arnica. Rub well into the frozen parts.

Here is an ointment that is recommended: Pure carbolic acid, thirty grains; tannin, thirty grains; tincture of iodine, thirty drops; simple ointment, two ounces. Apply twice a day. This is best prepared by your druggist.

A very simple one is to apply to the affected parts compound tincture of benzoin.

One ounce sal ammoniac dissolved in one cup of vinegar. Bathe with soft cloth or gauze. It gives immediate relief.

Citron ointment, one ounce; oil of turpentine, two drams; olive oil, four drams. Mix and apply to parts freely night and morning.

Another, used by an old lady who says it is excellent, is as follows: Mix four ounces glycerin with one dram carbolic acid. Paint the affected parts with this once or twice daily, using a small brush in applying and giving another application before retiring at night. Bind the parts with soft cloth.

Splashers Flop a Bunk

"Where can a fellow get a flop with a splash for about a man and a half?"

The speaker told Sam McGuire, a theatrical man he accosted at Forty-second street and Broadway, New York, that he was a circus man just in from the road. McGuire finally learned that he desired a room for $1.50.

McGuire met the man again.

"The hut was a bunk," he said. "They slipped me a drop instead of a splash," which McGuire later learned that he had received a shower bath instead of a regular tub.

"Your hair," said the aggravating barber, "is coming out on top."

"Good!" cried the sensitive victim. "I knew it was in me. Now, for goodness' sake don't talk to it, or it'll crawl back again."

United States Consular representatives of Germany repudiated this charge.

RETURNED SOLDIERS ARE TRAINED IN VOCATIONS

Factory Established in Toronto for Manufacture of Artificial Limbs---5400 Returned to Ontario.

TORONTO, Feb. 20. — Of the 5400 soldiers who have returned to Ontario, 554 are taking vocational training here, according to Hon. W. D. McPherson, who went into the matter exhaustively in the House yesterday, in answer to N. W. Rowell.

To meet the difficulty in supplying artificial limbs in this province, a factory for these had been started in the rear of the convalescent hospital on College, and a branch on College Street near Spadina avenue. There returned soldiers were employed, and had proved extraordinarily adept under trainers from Gt. Britain and the U.S., said he. At present the Provincial Secretary was of opinion that they were now able in Ontario to supply all the artificial arms and legs that would be required here, unless there was a deluge of patients. These limb factories did all the repairing, too, as ordered by doctors. They were given free to returned soldiers.

If 15,000 or 20,000 men were returned to Canada, Ontario could take care of her share, said Mr. McPherson. The general situation was good. The feeling on the part of the general public and employers was exceleint, said he.

Are Well Paid

Men getting vocational training were given nearly their service pay and allowance. No difference in the men's pension was made for their added proficiency.

Mr. Rowell, in asking for a return of all correspondence regarding returned soldiers, pointed out that many have been sent over to England, and there found unfit for military service. These men were a loss to Canada's industrial life, and should be brought back as soon as possible, he said. He had heard that some of them were detained in England on account of lack of hospital accommodation in Canada. He would suggest that it might be well to use the war tax to increase hospital accommodation in Canada rather than in England.

Vocational training was not compulsory, said Mr. McPherson, in reply to a question from Mr. Rowell.

Officers had told him that they had seen men in their ranks who they knew on the first parade were physically unfit. He suggested that they had been passed in order to swell the ranks. However that might be, the thing was to get them back as soon as possible.

Mr. McPherson said the more strenuous training in England had been largely responsible for numerous rejections. The British authorities were not anxious to pay to keep unfit soldiers. He suggested that the whole subject should be discussed with a great deal of caution lest the public should gain wrong impressions.

Premier Hearst outlined the government's work for returned soldiers and said the government would always be alert to aid returned soldiers back into civil life.

WILSON STILL REFUSES TO TAKE DEFINITE STAND

Demands Are Pouring in That Something be Done to Relieve Congestion at American Ports.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 20. —There were strong indications last night that unless some sensational development precipitates immediate action, President Wilson's next step in the crisis with Germany will be postponed until a few days before Congress adjourns for the session, one week from next Sunday.

The belief still is prevalent in official quarters and at the capitol that the President intends to ask Congress for authority to protect Americans and their ships from illegal submarine attacks, and as he is known to want no extra session if it can be avoided, it is regarded as certain that he will address a joint meeting of the senate and house before March 4th.

Must Relieve Congestion.

Demands that some way be found for relieving the congestion at Atlantic ports, resulting from the holding of American and other neutral ships in port, are pouring in at the White House and the executive departments. The disposition of the administration, however, seems to be to await further developments of Germany's policy. It is freely admitted that American rights are being violated and the government defied, and that at what the President deems the proper time the United States must assert itself.

NOTED GENERAL DROPS DEAD

GEN. FUNSTON PROMINENT IN THE AMERICAN ARMY.

SAN ANTONIO, Tex., Feb. 20.—Major-General Frederick Funston, Commander of the American forces on the Mexican border, collapsed in a hotel here last night and expired in a short time.

Physicians who were hurriedly summoned gave the cause of death as acute indigestion. Gen. Funston had just finished dinner and was playing with a little child when stricken.

In the Spanish-American war Gen. Funston served in the Philippines as a colonel of the U.S. forces. For crossing the Rio Grande River at Calumpit on a small bamboo raft in the fact of heavy fire and establishing a rope ferry by means of which the U.S troops were enabled to cross and win a battle, he was made Brigadier-General. Then he organized the expedition that caught Aguinaldo, the Philippine insurgent leader, after a desperate chase. When the Mexican situation became acute last year Funston was the man called to the front to head the American forces on the Mexican border. Gen. Pershing commanded the invading expedition.

TIN CANS COLLECTED BY GARBAGE MEN CAN BE PUT TO GOOD USE

Tin cans to help to win the war! Ald. Jos. Saunders' worries are over. Tin cans which are collected by hundreds by the garbage collectors and taken to the incinerator can be diverted from this channel and used to advantage to help overcome the shortage of tinplate in Canada, due to lower production in England and the shipping situation. The Department of Trade and Commerce thinks that steps should be taken to collect all the tin available, such as tin boxes and cans, in order that it may be used over again. It is believed that if some systematic plan of collection is adopted the shortage of the tinplate will be largely made up.

Letter of Rev. C. R. Flanders to the British Weekly and What He Says

In a letter to the editor of the Advertiser, London, Ont., Dr. C. R. Flanders replies to a cable from London which said:—

"Sir Robertson Nicoll's journal, the British Weekly, gives prominence to what Canadian military authorities call the greatest libel ever perpetrated by a Canadian upon his fellow countrymen, Rev. C. R. Flanders, Methodist Church, London, Ontario, writing to the British Weekly asks in effect why Canada should send her sons to fight for drunken England, and makes wild, vague innuendoes about "War Office bungling." He more than hints that Canadian soldiers are sent to death at the front because their Canadian officers are incapacitated by drink."

Dr. Flanders will success Rev. R. G. Peever as pastor of George St. Church here next June. In his letter to the Advertiser Dr. Flanders says in part:—

Allow me to say that Windermere's sensational cable reminded me of that quaint saying of Sir John A. MacDonald, "When I throw a stick at a bunch of dogs, I know which one I hit by the yelping he makes." I never dreamed that my letter to the British Weekly would make the liquor traffic of England howl so loudly and bitterly as Windermere represents, and am rather delighted that I seem to have struck to the quick.

Recovers Extracts of Letter

I did not preserve, fo. more than two weeks, a copy of what I had written to the British Weekly, but dropped it into the scrap basket. This evening, since seeing the Free Press, I have fished out of that receptacle the only two portions I can find. May I give them to you? Here they are:

"England's Devotion to the Liquor Traffic from the Canadian Viewpoint.

"London, Ont., Jan 16, '17.

"To the Editor of British Weekly:

"Dear Sir. —Canadian loyalty to the British Empire in this war crisis, as ever, has been strong, unswerving and unobtrusive. The press of England has not only justly but with flattering enthusiasm, frequently acknowledged this claim. We have given of the flower of our Canadian manhood all unmindful of the fact that our country is large and young and our population altogether inadequate. Many of these men have already paid the supreme sacrifice; all who remain are ready to die for the motherland. The patriotic fervor of our men is only surpassed by the unflagging self sacrifice of our women. Many of these are overseas in service in hospitals, while their sisters at home seem to live but to serve God and Britain. In contributions toward the relief of suffering and to promote war efficiency, we have given with unstinted hands. Last evening the citizens of this city of London, Ont., beseiged the city council, demanding that a special tax be immediately levied upon our taxpayers by which the amount paid to the Patriotic Fund now being raised might be double that of last year. The economic slogan sounding throughout the Dominion calls for retrenchments in all expenditures, and on all sides Canada is returning to her early simplicity of life that her aid to the Empire may be as great as possible."

Save England's Grain

Now, from memory may I add, that I contended:

That England in simple justice, should not waste grain by the thousands of bushels, sugar by the thousands of barrels and men by the thousands in the manufacture of strong drink.

That in view of the patriotic devotion of our Canadian men, our sons should not go from their Canadian homes to fight for the Empire and be exposed to the onslaughts of an enemy far more deadly and destructive than the foe they so bravely go to fight.

From my basket I recovered the following, which seems to be that in my letter which has awakened the strongest feelings:

"And why should Canada be expected to send her men into battle—

"Into the jaws of death,
Into the mouth of hell,"

while England continues to produce for the consumption of both officers and men that which incapacitates the brain for its best action and only affords a temporary and very doubtful artificial stimulus? The bungling of a war office, not trained to the exigencies of war, Canada is prepared to bear with set teeth. But when our men return wounded from the front with whispers of what might or might not have been, if only their brave officers had been truly themselves, our women ask their pastors, touching the moral obligation involved in the reckless exposure of their loved ones to unnecessary and criminal blundering in the hour of danger."

No Reference to Canadian Officers

In the above you will notice that I make no use of the term "Canadian officers." As a matter of fact my information had not to do with Canadian officers.

Neither did I in any part of my letter use the words "drunken England"; as a matter of fact, I made no reference to the condition of England.

I am certainly misquoted in the words of the reporter when he attributes to me the statement: "I ventured to say that there were at least rumors of battles in which Canadian men suffered what they need not have suffered if the men who were leading them and controlling the battle scheme had not been incapacitated by the use of strong drink."

I can readily believe that to be the case in any army where the drink habit prevails with the sanction of the authorities, as it does in the British army, but the statement above is not mine. And yet I am equally sure that the reporter did not wish to misrepresent me.

Not Making an Apology

I hope, Mr. Editor, that your readers will not interpret this as an apology for the position I take in this matter. I only wish that I could find stronger words in which to protest against the rank injustice and hindrance to victory the liquor traffic of England represents in relation to the war. England gives her sons and her daughters freely to death, and ours as well, by virtue of our loyalty to her, but she will not give up her indulgence in intoxicating drinks, except in "munition areas," although Russia beckons and the war slowly drags its horrid length along. I am, sincerely yours,

C. R. Flanders.

WITH TIME

At a certain age there are almost sure to be constitutional changes, and one in particular is the gradual weakening of the eyesight. Imperceptible at first, except to scientific test, yet the change is there, and if, at this time, the eyes are given the assistance they need, they are kept strong longer than if left in use without the aid of glasses till a later period. Give your eyes the best chance you can by having Dr. Fowler test them as to their condition.

109TH BATTALION COLORS NOW STORED IN OMEMEE

Will be Placed in Old Home Church of Lady Eaton.

(Special Correspondence.)

OMEMEE, Feb. 20. Unforeseen trouble has arisen over the 109th colors, which were brought to Lindsay last week by Col. J. Ballantyne, O. C. the 109th Bn. previous to its being broken up in England. Immediately on the arrival of the colors in Lindsay arrangements were under way for a dedication service in Cambridge street church, which was to have been held on Sunday, Feb. 18th. Since the announcement was made by the pastor of Cambridge street church in reference to the placing of the colors, Lady Eaton has expressed the desire to have them placed in her old home church. This desire was followed up by a message from Brig.-Gen. Hemming of the 3rd Military District requesting the local militia authorities to carry out the donor's wishes. The colors arrived in Omemee, in charge of two soldiers, Friday morning, and will be safely stored until the return of Sir John and Lady Eaton from Florida, when the dedication service will take place.

Friends of Mr. H. Murray, one of our general merchants, will be glad to learn that he is on the highway to recovery, after a severe attack of la grippe. Mr. Murray has come to the conclusion that this spring malady is well named.

Mr. R. J. Mulliagn, druggist, left on Monday for a two months' visit to Florida.

The Prodigals

Rev. Dr. L. Norman Tucker, Precentor of St. Paul's Cathedral, addressing the London Ministerial Alliance, declared himself in favor of universal military training. He referred to the statements that hundreds of men had run away to the United States through fear of conscription, expressing the hope they would never return to Canada. In a consideration of after-war conditions, Dr. Tucker predicted the nationaliation of Canadian railways.

DRINK HOT WATER IF YOU DESIRE A ROSY COMPLEXION

Says we can't help but look better and feel better after an inside bath.

To look one's best and feel one's best is to enjoy an inside bath each morning to flush from the system the previous day's waste, sour fermentations and poisonous toxins before they are absorbed into the blood. Just as coal, when it burns, leaves behind a certain amount of incombustible material in the form of ashes, so the food and drink taken each day leave in the alimentary organs a certain amount of indigestible material which, if not eliminated, form toxins and poisons, which are then sucked into the blood through the very ducts which are intended to suck in only nourishment to sustain the body.

If you want to see the glow of healthy bloom in your cheeks, to see your skin get clearer and clearer, you are told to drink every morning upon arising a glass of hot water with a teaspoonful of limestone phosphate in it, which is a harmless means of washing the waste material and toxins from the stomach, liver, kidneys, and bowels, thus clean-ing and purifying the entire alimentary tract before putting more food into the stomach.

Men and women with sallow skins, liver spots, pimples or pallid complexion, also those who wake up with a coated tongue, bad taste, nasty breath, others who are bothered with headaches, bilious spells, acid stomach or constipation, should begin this phosphated hot water drinking, and are assured of very pronounced results in one or two weeks.

A quarter pound of limestone phosphate costs very little at the drug store, but is sufficient to demonstrate that just as soap and hot water cleanses, purifies and freshens the skin on the outside, so hot water and limestone phosphate act on the inside organs. We must always consider that internal sanitation is vastly more important than outside cleanliness, because the skin pores do not absorb impurities into the blood, while the bowel pores do.

RAILROADERS TO ENLIST

Canadians Are Given Charge of Vital Work in France

A signal honor has been bestowed upon Canada by the Allied Powers in France. Canada has been given complete charge of the whole of the Allied railway construction on the western front. Colonel J. W. Stewart, of Vancouver, is in command of this important work. Colonel Stewart is a member of the railway firm of Foley, Welch, & Stewart, and has built hundreds of miles of Canadian lines. In preparation for the spring offensive the Canadians are building hundreds of miles of road in France and Flanders and are evidently constructing behind the front lines strategic roads such as gave Germany such a tremendous advantage in the early part of the war. This accounts for the recent call for fifteen hundred miles of Canadian railway lines and for the insistent demand for men for railway construction corps.

An urgent appeal for men for such work is being made by the Militia Department. As the men will not be required for fighting or trench work it has been decided to raise the age limit of enlistment to 48 and to lower the physical standard. In connection with this work four new companies have been authorised in Western Canada, one in each of the four Western Provinces.

The Manitoba battalion will be commanded by Major Lanigan, a son of Mr. J. B. Lanigan, General Freight Manager of the C.P.R. The Saskatchewan company will be commanded by Major George Robinson, a member of the First Contingent, who won the Military Cross. Capt. George Gardiner and Capt. Fitzsimmons will raise jointly the Alberta company and the British Columbia company will be recruited by Major Marsh, a contractor of New Westminster.

The two new Railway Construction Battalions, recently authorized, 256th and 257th, will look after recruiting for Eastern Canada. In addition, the 143rd Bantam Battalion of British Columbia and the 228th Overseas Battalion have been converted into Railway Construction Corps and will leave for overseas soon.

It is understood also that a number of battalions have been created from the Canadian forces in England for this work.

Altogether there probably will be ten thousand Canadians engaged soon in this important and vital operation.

Perhaps the reason a woman's work is never done is because she employs a domestic to do it.

Seed Garden of Canada.

According to officials of the Canadian Seed Branch, the Okanagan Valley, B.C., promises to become the seed garden of Canada. Before the war most of the seeds used in Canada came from Belgium, France, and Germany. This supply has been largely cut off and the question of getting sufficient seed has been a serious matter. One of the most difficult problems has been to get sufficient sugar beet seed which before the outbreak of hostilities was nearly all shipped from Belgium and Germany.

Experiments have been made in the raising of seed in the Okanagan Valley, and this year several carloads of sugar beet seed will be procured. This, along with several other valleys with similar climate, are the most ideal in Canada for seed raising and are the equal of California points, the only places hitherto able to compete with Europe. Officials in Ottawa believe it will develop into a big permanent industry. At present prices are high, and there is no doubt that profits will be made. For instance, sugar beet seed is 22 cents a pound as compared with six cents before the war. Whether the Canadian growers will be able to continue to compete with the European countries after the war depends largely on the labor market.

A Daring Feat.

Snooks was one of those conceited, make believe, bold hunters and was always spinning his yarns about his experiences in Africa, and he generally wound up by saying he never yet saw a lion he feared. One night after he had finished yarning he was a little taken aback by one of his audience, who said:

"That's nothing. I have laid down and actually slept among lions in their wild, natural state."

"I don't believe that. I'm no fool," said the bold hunter.

"It's the truth, though."

"Yes; I certainly did."

"Can you prove it? Were they African?"

"Well, not exactly African lions. They were dandelions."—Chicago Herald.

SPORTING NEWS

SOLDIERS MUST SHOW THEIR WARES TONIGHT

Supporters of the 247th hockey team are kindly asked not to make their way to the team's dressing rooms tonight, as Sergt. Lane, the trainer of the eam, will require all the space available too look after the players.

It will be with fear and trepidation that many fans will watch the opening chapter of the Oshawa-247th Battalion game here tonight. The task of overcoming four goals looks like an insurmountable mountain to many supporters of the team, who have not figured on the great disadvantages under which the Petes played at Oshawa. To the optimistic ones who have watched the antics of the Soldiers this season, it has been apparent that Bob Armstrong and his assistants require much ice surface to handle the puck and get through—something that was forbidden them at Oshawa. But why worry? The Soldiers will get back the four goals and win the round if they play up to form. They have not been doing their best for several games. Tonight it is up to every player on the team to show the fans their wares and play the quality of hockey they are capable of playing, not only individually but also as a team. Peterborough fans are loyal and are with the Soldiers to the end. It is up to the team to produce tonight.

CURLERS SET EXAMPLE FOR 247TH HOCKEY TEAM

The Neill-Sheppard Cup will stay in Peterborough until next year. The return game of the contest for this prize was played at the curling rink last night between four rinks of Orillia and four rinks of the local club. Peterborough started in with eight points against them and with a view to at once overcoming this score they worked like Trojans and were soon on an even footing and on some rinks were ahead. Skip Waddell had a fine game against Skip Stewart. Skip Ray Best was pitched against Dr. Harvey and was 8 up at the finish. Skip Alex. Kay with his District Cup rink was 5 up against Skip Curran, while Kkip Lang was down 3 shots to Skip Farwell. Peterborough finished a victor on the round by 9 shots.

SPIEL UNDERWAY WITH 36 RINKS

Peterborough's bonspiel opened this afternoon to a good start, with 36 rinks in attendance, and the preliminary draw started at half-past one. The second draw will start about four o'clock as only twelve ends are played in these contests.

The clubs represented are: Lindsay, Bobcaygeon, Stroud, Napanee, Port Hope, Cobourg, Oshawa, Norwood, Keene, Lakefield, Fenelon Falls, Campbellford, Millbrook, Stouffville and several local rinks.

Shortly after one o'clock the old veteran and popular Lindsay curler Mr. J. D. Flavelle, was asked by the committee to make the draw, and the following was the result:—

Much Enthusiasm

The visiting curlers were all very enthusiastic over the bonspiel and congratulated Angus McIntosh on his sheets of ice, which were perfection.

It is quite possible that the first of the consolation games may be played late this evening, although a few of the curlers would like the games postponed in order that they might attend the hockey game.

Skip Taylor, who won the Challenge Cup last year, is vice-skipping for Sam Ray this time.

INTERMEDIATES OF HAMILTON LOSE PARKER

WAS HURT IN A COLLISION WITH HUSKY ON NIAGARA FALLS SEVEN.

HAMILTON, Feb. 20. — Harold Parker, Hamilton hockey club's sterling defence player, will not be able to play in the H. H. C.-London third round games this week. President Bob Parker of the city team stated that his injuries received in the game with Niagara Falls are sure to keep him out of the game for at least a week or ten days. Two front teeth were knocked out and his upper lip torn in a collision with Fraser, the husky Niagara Falls defence player. This morning Parker could hardly open his mouth, and his dentist could not touch his mouth without causing considerable pain. The injury has also prevented Parker from eating.

Coming at such a time as this, the youngster's injury is a severe blow to the club. Tonight in London the red and white will commence a series with the 117th Battalion, which is looked upon as the most important of the season. The opinion is that if Hamilton can defeat such a strong team as the Cockneyville soldiers they will be hard to keep away from the O. H. A. title, and it is most unfortunate they should lose one of their strongest trump cards at this stage.

HOCKEY

The Peterborough deaf hockey team went to Toronto on Saturday and played a game with the Toronto deaf team in the evening, and came off victorious by the score of 2-0. The ice was in very poor condition, being covered with water an inch deep. The Toronto boys wanted to have the game postponed but the Peterborough boys couldn't see why they should go back home without playing a game. They decided, with their eyes shut, to play, and then the Toronto boys were game enough. Both teams played a good game, but the Peterborough boys were in better shape. Several of the Queen City players were thrown flat in the water and the spectators broke into laughter on many occasions. Gerow scored the two goals.

The Peterborough line-up:—

Goal, G. O'Brien; defence, W. Charlisbois and D. Gordon; rover, C. Ford; centre, D. Gerow; right wing, J. Crough (capt.); left wing, D. Fleming.

HOCKEY MATCH RETURNS

The returns of the hockey match will be announced from the stage of The Turning Point at the Grand Opera House tonight.

RECRUITING IS ON IN EARNEST

WIDOW OF LAKEFIELD SOLDIER WHO MET DEATH GETS PENSION.

The recruiting campaign which opened last night was not attended with favorable consideration by the weather man. Very few people braved the storm and the pool roms were deserted so that the recruiting officers had little material to work on. The dance at the Conservatory was visited and Capt. Belton made a short address to those present.

Just what success attended the 500 Club on their first night's visit will not be known for a few days.

247th Battalion Orders

Fitting of Clothing—

Officers commanding units will be held strictly responsible that the garments of all soldiers under their command are correctly fitted, and that the jackets, in particular, will be loosened up to permit the wearing of a cardigan packet and of such extra clothing being worn in cold weather, and also to allow possible shrinkage of material. The attention of Officers Commanding units and details is especially directed to this matter.

Duties—

Orderly officer for tomorrow — Lt. T. W. Quinn.

A. E. BRITAIN, Lt.,
Adjutant.

Mrs. M. A. Rowe, of Lakefield, whose husband died of wounde received on the battlefield, has been granted a pension of $744 per annum. This will be welcome news to the friends of the family. Mrs. Rowe has several children.

Veteran Speed Skater Had Unrivalled Career.

One of the greatest skaters the world has ever known was Fred Robson of Toronto, who has decided to quit the racing game for all time. Mr Robson, after skating in races and against records for twenty-two years, announced his retirement. There are few skaters who held as many records as Robson, outside of Joe Donohue, the famous skater of New York state, John S. Johnson and Johnny Nillson of Minneapolis. However, Robson's feats on the ice were all made in competition and are the more remarkable. For a time his mile record was considered the world's record, that of 2.41⅗, which was beaten by Robert McLean, the Chicago skater. Morris Wood, of Pittsburg, shared the honor with Robson.

It was at the age of 19 years that Robson began smashing the world's records. He was a native of Toronto and most of his skating was done in this country and through the eastern part of the United States. He had more than 160 medals and many other trophies, which he won in skating competitions as an amateur. Robson took a great deal of pains to coach the youngsters for races, etc.

Following are some important records held by Robson: 50 yards—45 3-5 seconds (Canadian record); 100 yards—10 seconds (Canadian record); 60 yards—6 seconds (world's record); 75 yards—7 4-5 seconds (world's record; 220 yards—18 seconds (world's record; 440 yards—37 seconds (Canadian record); one mile—2.41 1-5. Dead heat with Morris Wood (Canadian record); 220 yards—Hurdles, indoors, 5 hurdles, each 24 inches in height—21 2-5 seconds (world's record); 220 yards—Hurdles, outdoors, 10 hurdles, each 28 inches in height (world's record).

Miss Alma Knassman of Peterborough, is a popular visitor to the city the past week or so, the guest of Mrs. Fred Popplewell, a number of informal little affairs being given in her honor.—Brantford Courier.

Mr. Justice Sutherland is at the Empress Hotel.

The Morning Hotel News, Dayton, Florida, of Tuesday, Feb. 13, says: Preceding the dance at the Clarendon Saturday night, Betty Burnham, the little granddaughter of Mr. and Mrs. James Kendry of Peterborough, Ont., who are season guests at the hotel, gave an interpretive solo dance, "The Song of the Robin," with Elfin grace. Little Miss Burnham interpreted for her audience the story of a child at play with a robin with a spontaniety that was the incarnation of the music. Her gestures and movements were perfectly natural and unstudied and her poise notable. For an encore she gave "The French Doll," a characteristic solo dance. Betty is a pupil of Miss Delta Boice. Saturday night Miss Boice will give a recital which is being anticipated with much pleasure.

Al. Wilson and Fiske O'Hara

NOTED COMEDIANS AND SINGERS TO APPEAR AT THE GRAND.

Owing to a very singular booking local theatre-goers are to have an opportunity of hearing at early dates two of America's greatest dialect comedians and singers.

On Saturday next at the Grand Opera House for two performances, Al. H. Wilson will present "My Killarney Rose." This is the first time Mr. Wilson has had an opportunity of visiting Peterborough. In fact only the larger Ontario cities, such as Toronto, Hamilton and London have so far had an opportunity of hearing him. This season he entered Canada from the East, playing in Montreal last week, and this week Ottawa, Kingston, Belleville and Peterborough will have an opportunity of hearing him.

Next Monday, Feb. 26, Fiske O'Hara comes to the Grand in a new play, entitled His Heart's Desire. Mr. O'Hara and his splendid company has visited Peterborough so often that it is hardly necessary to say anything in connection with his performances, which are always clean and bright, and always draw capacity houses.

Theatre-goers who have had an opportunity of hearing both Mr. Wilson and Mr. O'Hara are somewhat undecided as to which of the two performers they like the better. However, local patrons will now have a splendid opportunity of making comparisons, particularly as the two stars play so closely together.

The seat sale for Al. H. Wilson opens on Thursday morning at 10 a.m. and for Fiske O'Hara on Friday morning at the same hour.

SOLDIER GETS WRIST WATCH

PRIVATE ALBERT OLIVER SURPRISED BY HIS FRIENDS.

The residence of Mr. Wesley Olliver, 2nd line of Smith, was the centre of a very pleasing social evening on Saturday when the many friends of Pte. Albert Oliver gathered to bid him farewell. He had enlisted with the 256th (Railway Construction) Battalion, which will likely go overseas at once.

During the evening's entertainment a surprise was sprung on the young soldier when Mr. Stanley Cann read a farewell address to him, which was accompanied by a wrist watch presented on behalf of his friends by Mr. Fred. Steinkrauss.

Lily Lake, Peterborough,
February 17th, 1917.

To Pte. Albert Oliver:

Dear Albert,—A number of your friends, having learned that you had enlisted to go overseas in the service of your King and Empire, desire, before your departure, to give expression to the high esteem in which you are held in the neighborhood and wherever you are known, and of their appreciation of your action in offering yourself for service in the expeditionary force. We know that whatever you can do for the cause will be most willingly and zealously done, and we earnestly hope that you and your comrades may meet with every success, and that our enemies, who with such deliberate malice brought on the war and have since carried it on with such atrocious cruelty, will be completely defeated and peace once more reign throughout the world.

As a small token of our esteem and of our good wishes for you, we ask you to kindly accept the accompanying wrist watch, which we hope will help you to remember us while you are away.

With earnest wishes for your continued good health and a safe and speedy return after a full completion of the duty you have taken upon yourself, we remain,

Yours most sincerely,
Signed on behalf of your friends of Lily Lake,
STANLEY CANN.
FRED STEINKRAUSS.

Pte. Oliver made a suitable reply thanking the donors for their useful gift, after which all joined in singing "For he's a jolly good fellow," "Auld Lang Syne" and "God Save the King."

GOOD PRICE FOR THE DEERS HEAD

AT CONCERT FOR THE BAND FUND AT ARMY TEMPLE.

Mr. Edwin Elcome, taxidermist, is one of the good friends of the Salvation Army band and when the musicians serenaded him at the last Christmas season, Mr. Elcome instead of making a cash contribution, presented to the bandsmen a handsome deer's head, a gift than won the unanimous thanks of the serenaders. Last night at the Temple when the band gave a concert to help the band funds, the deer head was auctioned by Bandsman Tom Brooks and realised a very satisfactory sum, the purchaser being Bandsman Mendel Braund.

The storm prevented a very large crowd from attending the concert, yet those who did brave the storm enjoyed the program very much. Bandsman Alex. Murray's concertina solo was much enjoyed as also was Dept. Bandmaster Boorman's vocal solo and the instrumental duet by Bandsmen Ernest Jones, Fred Blondon and Boorman. Adjt. McElhiney presided.

The Program

BRITISH CLOSE PORT OF PLYMOUTH

LOCAL TALENT SCORE BIG HIT BEFORE FOOTLIGHTS IN "THE TURNING POINT"

Entertainment Under Auspices of the Peter Robinson I.O D.E. Filled Grand Opera House---Praise for Performers From Professional.

The receipts at "The Turning Point" last night were $493.75. The Peter Robinson Chapter of the I. O. D. E., under whose auspices the presentation was given, cleared $200.

A house filled to capacity, an audience liberal with applause, greeted the bright members of the amateur company that presented "The Turning Point" at the Grand Opera House last night under the auspices of the Peter Robinson Chapter, I. O. D. E. Mr. Louis George NeVille, the professional who staged the performance, was highly pleased with the manner in which his assistants acquitted themselves. Coming before the curtain at the end of the second act, he stated that none of the performers had been rehearsing more than nine days, while others took up their parts less than a week ago; yet all were familiar with their lines, and everything was going on the stage as smoothly as clockwork. Never in his experience of twenty-five years had he trained a better amateur company than that with which he was surrounded last night.

Mr. NeVille also complimented Mrs. C. R. Widdifield, regent of the Peter Robinson Chapter. He never worked with a more capable, devoted or patriotic head of an organization, and he advised every woman in the city not already a member to join at once so as to be benefited by associating with the worthy regent.

A Story of Graft.

Aside from the excellent portrayal of the various roles, the plot of the play was itself sufficient to hold the interest of the audience. A quiet little community in Virginia was stirred into something like excitement by the discovery of coal in the neighborhood. A sleek-tongued promoter from New York operated among them, buying up land and selling shares in a mining company. Even the unworldly-wise parson falls a victim to his wiles and invests all his savings. He also sells stock to Pansy Parr, the girl who married a rich old man to save her father from a financial crisis; and a widow, Mrs. Anderson, the latter using trust money of her daughter's to take stock in his name. He exerts his influence over Barbara Byrd, a country girl, and she leaves her surroundings to see the Great White Wey with him, and is supposed to have died. Fergerson tries to buy the right-of-way to the railroad from his mine from Dave Denny, but finds that Breckenridge is trustee for David until the latter is 25 years of age, so enters into a verbal agreement with Breckenridge to get control of the same. He agrees until Aline Anderson, with whom Breckenridge is in love, bids him not to sell, but go out into the world, make his mark, come back and claim his right to her. This is the turning point, for Breckenridge declines to sell, goes out and makes his fortune while Fergerson is occupied in trying to get the right-of-way through influencing Mrs. Anderson to compel her daughter Aline to marry him. Aline consents, to save her mother from disgrace through exposure of using trust funds.

Pansy Parr comes into the life of Aline, and plays Breckenridge across the board, and tells of her experience of marrying a man with "one foot in the grave and the other on a banana skin," to save her father from a financial crisis. Dr. Snicker is now busily engaged with his "dear people" and looking after his "dear lady," while Pansy Parr at last persuades Aline not to marry Fergerson but to "play Breckenridge to win." Aline tells her brother of her decislin and the latter conveys the message to Dr. Snickler, who decided it "an act of Providence." The final is where Fergerson gets another sum of money from Mrs. Anderson to further gamble on the market, and on visiting her home the next day comes face to face with Breckenridge and is shown a telegram of his action with regard to Barbara Byrd, using his influence over her.

Dave Denny, who appears on the scene, is persuaded to leave the room although "his hands are itching" to get Fergerson for robbing him of his sweetheart, Barbara. Breckenridge compels Fergerson to hand back the money and sign papers, under threat of what Dave would do if liberated. After the promoter leaves, Dave is once more with his first love, who lives, a case of mistaken identity of death at a hospital accounting for same. Money and papers are handed back to Dr. Snicker, Mrs. Anderson and Pansy Parr, while Aline Anderson and Brent Breckenridge are united again in love's dream. Dr. Snicker looks after his "dear lady"

NO OFFICIAL POSTPONEMENT OF CONFERENCE

OTTAWA OFFICIALS ARE PUZZLED OVER CABLE RECEIVED IN N. Y.

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

OTTAWA, Feb. 21—Reference in a London cable to the New York Tribune to the postponement of the Imperial conference is puzzling officials here, who have had no intimation of any such action. It is pointed out that no date has ever been set for the conference for the reason that it would depend upon the length of time it would require for overseas delegates to reach England.

MR. J. RIDDELL FRACTURES ARM

As Mr. John Riddell, Homewood Ave., was walking on the ice covered sidewalk on Hunter St., east of St. Peter's Cathedral, yesterday, he slipped and fell, fracturing his arm near the shoulder. Dr. Moir was called and used the X-ray to determine the extent of the injury. Mr. Riddell spent a comfortable night.

GRAMAPHONE RECORDS ON COUNT'S SHIP CONFISCATED

Valuable in Germany For Their Rubber Contents.

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

HALIFAX, Feb. 21.—Government inspectors have confiscated a large number of gramaphone records from Germans on the steamship Frederik VIII., now lying here. The Germans claim they want them for their musical qualities, but immigration officials consider them more valuable for their rubber contents. Records will be run off to see if they contain any secret messages.

PORT OF PLYMOUTH CLOSED TO SHIPPING OF NEUTRALS

THE HERO OF LABRADOR

These brief articles about Dr. Grenfell are published from day to day to inform the public of the character of the man and his work, and how worthy of support that work is. Subscriptions can be left at the office of this paper. Dr. Grenfell's parish is the fisher-folk scattered all along the coast of Labrador and Newfoundland. The coast of Labrador is unusually hard to navigate. Frowning cliffs rise precipitously from the shore, hidden reefs threaten the mariner and icebergs and ice floes are continually encountered. No friendly lighthouse warns sailors of their danger, no chart assists them to find their way. Each time that a fisherman starts out he knows that his return is uncertain and such a life breeds an indifference to danger—a dauntless courage which is rarely equalled. But brave and fearless as these men are Dr. Grenfell surpasses them in courage. When he first appeared on the coast, the people thought him a mad man, for, knowing nothing of the tides, reefs and rocks, and apparently caring naught for the winds, he sailed up and down the 2,000 miles of dangerous shore of northern Newfoundland and along the whole 1,000 miles of Labrador coast.

The first year his ship met many disasters. It was capsized with all on board, dashed on the rocks and at the end of the season it was a hopeless wreck. the next season the doctor apeared with a little steam launch, the Princess May, in which tiny craft he cruised the entire length of the Labrador coast. On its return trip the boat was reported lost, but it weathered a gale that bothered even the mailboat. "Sure," said a skipper "I don't know how she done it. The Lord must kape an eye on that man."

Opportunity for Service

When this little boat was worn out, another took its place, and still another, until now the Strathcona is doing duty. The doctor has been called reckless and foolhardy, but he is simply in a hurry. The coast is long, the season short, and the need great. Every day brings a new opportunity for service, and he can neither wait for time or tide. He is told of the pressing need of some sick child or the critical illness of a man or woman, and he goes to save that one with firm faith in God's protection. "As the Lord wills," he says, "whether for wreck or service, I am about His business."—R. P.

LONDON, Feb. 21.—The British ship Centurion of 1803 tons, has been sunk.

CARSON ON SUB. PERIL

Armed Merchantmen Increased 50 Per Cent.

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

LONDON, Feb. 21.—Sir Edward Carson in the House of Commons today said the submarine menace recently had grown until its extent had become grave and serious. The menace had not yet been solved, but measures which had been taken would mitigate it by degrees.

Sir Edward informed the House that an anti-submarine department had been established in the Admiralty, composed of the most experienced and capable men in the navy. The number of armed merchant ships had been increased nearly 50 per cent. in the past two months. The House, said Sir Edward, would expect him to deal mainly with the growth of the submarine menace, and he would do so by surveying the work of the navy.

Work of the Fleet

He emphasized the importance of what the Grand Fleet was doing, pointing out that it was assisting the expeditions in Mesopotamia, Saloniki and Egypt, and had to keep the seas clear.

Upon the whole, he continued, the country had suffered less privations than any of the belligerents. The total number of persons carried across the seas up to the end of last October was 8,000,000, he added.

In the first eighteen days of February, the First Lord announced, 89 allied and neutral steamers of more than 1,000 tons had been lost, their total tonnage aggregating 268,000. This compared with 69 vessels of 201,000 tons in the first eighteen days of December and of 65 vessels of 182,000 tons in the first eighteen days of January.

Proclamation Gives Terms of British Naval Blockade.

LONDON, Feb. 21.—It is officially announced that the port of Plymouth has been closed until further notice to all ships except those of the Allies. Other vessels entering the harbor are punishable under the defence of the realm regulations and are liable to detention.

An official proclamation modifying the terms of the British naval blockade was issued here today. It follows:—

First—A vessel which is encountered at sea on its way to or from a port in any neutral country affording means of access to enemy territory, without calling at a port in British or its Allies' territories, shall, until the contrary is established, be deemed to be carrying goods with enemy destination or of enemy origin and shall be brought in for examination, and, if necessary, for adjudication before a prize court.

Second — Any vessel carrying goods with enemy destination or of enemy origin, shall be liable to capture and condemnation in respect of the carriage of such goods, provided that in the case of any vessel which calls at an appointed British or Allied port for examination of her cargo, no sentence of condemnation shall be pronounced except on the carriage of goods of enemy origin or destination and no such presumption as laid down in Article 1 shall arise.

Third—Goods which are found on examination of any vessel to be goods of enemy origin or destination shall be liable to condemnation.

BACKED THEIR TEAM, LOST AND LANDED IN COURT

One Oshawa Supporter Told Magistrate he Lost $110 and Refused Cadi's Invitation to Come Again.

Hockey fans who have backed their teams all season had a damper put on their enthusiasm last night when the police raided the pool room and tobacco store of Yoetes Bros., 339 George St., and seized on some money wagered on last night's hockey game and the proprietors, George and Louis Yoetes, had charges registered against them of keeping a common betting house. Five young men, two of them from Oshawa, were arrested and charged with being frequenters of the place.

At the police court this morning the case against the proprietors was enlarged and the case against the frequenters was adjourned. The defendants pleaded not guilty.

Two Oshawa men were willing to plead guilty to betting but were advised not to by the magistrate until the case against Yoetes Bros. is heard. These young men wanted to get home and were allowed to give their evidence so as to save being brought back at the trial.

When one of the crowd was placed in the witness box he stated that he had got acquainted with the Yoetes Bros.' pool room and tobacco store. The brothers had been pointed out to him in Oshawa as men who were liable to back Peterborough's team. He went there yesterday and placed a wager. He had also made some bets with Louis Yoetes himself. He had bet about $110 on Oshawa to win the round and knew of at least one other bet being made at that time.

Come Again—Nix

Magistrate Dumble: How much money did you lose?

Witness: A hundred and ten dollars.

Magistrate: And you say you are from Oshawa and lost all that money?

Witness: Yes.

Magistrate: Come again.

Witness: Not this winter.

Later on witness identified both Louis and George Yoetes as the men who had acted as stake-holders or made bets.

Lost $25

Another visitor from Oshawa had bet $25 that Peterborough would not win the round. The money was placed in the hands of Louis Yoetes wrapped up in a piece of paper on which the bet was recorded. He also had heard bets talked of and seen some money passed over the counter. He identified the slip he made out which was seized with the $50 when the police made the raid.

There were quite a number of men in the tobacco store at the time of the visit of the police. It was a local paynight and many patrons of the store were getting their cheques cashed.

CONTINGENT OF CANADIAN GIRL CLERKS FOR WORK IN FRANCE TO RELIEVE MEN

Capt. Burnham Cables Offer to British War Office---Addressed Crowd at Rink Preceding Hockey Match.

Acting on the strength of what came to his knowledge while on service in England and France, in regard to the shortage of man-power and the subsequent announcement that women would be employed behind the lines in France in order that men might be relieved for service in the fighting forces, Capt. J. H. Burnham, M.P., has opened lists at his office on Water street, and will receive the names of young women who are willing to meet the demand for female help. Capt. Burnham today sent the following cable to the British War Office:

> War Office, England:
> Will you accept offer to raise contingent of Canadian girl clerks for France to relieve men? Signed. BURNHAM.

Capt. Burnham spoke of his plan when he made a short address in the interest of enlistments preceding the game at the rink last night.

Capt. Burnham said: That since the news had just arrived that Gt. Britain would send many thousands of women to France to take the places of soldiers there doing clerical work, storekeeping, etc., he would open at once a list at his office for the names of those women in Peterborough who would offer their services and thus add many thousands, whose places they could supply, to the Canadian fighting line. The vast importance of this movement is apparent.

Return Overseas

Capt. Burnham said that when his leave ended with the present parliamentary session he hoped to return overseas in company with a full draft of the 247th. He agreed, however, with the young man who had said that it was a good deal too much for a man not in khaki to criticise another man for not being in it. Therefore he had put on his uniform for the occasion, although not customary off duty. This was no longer a time for talk. The young men knew all about the war already and if he talked for a week he could not say more than that the war could not be won unless the British Empire was able to put forth its whole man power. The only way to become an officer in the Canadian forces nowadays, said the speaker, was first to become a private. Canadian soldiers at the front had introduced the wholly new and proper plan of getting officers from the ranks of those doing the fighting, but that method had left a very large number of highly trained Canadian officers hung up high and dry both in England and Canada. That was where the trouble lay. As time went on, no doubt, however, a place of service would be found for all of them, both young and old. "So," said the speaker, "we must hand in our names or keep quiet." Some

BELIEVES HE SAW MR. F. J. MIGHT ON MONTREAL TRAIN

Passenger on Train Was Acting Strangely.

It now seems possible that the mystery surrounding the disappearance of Mr. F. J. Might, the Peterborough merchant, may be cleared up, and Mr. James Buchanan, salesman for the Ritchie Company, has perhaps supplied the essential information, says The Ontario of Belleville.

On Wednesday, Feb. 7, Mr. Buchanan of the Ritchie Co. bought a ticket and proceeded to New York via Montreal. On the train between here and Montreal he noticed a well-dressed gentleman acting very strangely and nervously. The appearance of the man and his unusual conduct fixed itself on Mr. Buchanan's mind. Upon the latter's return from New York he read the report in The Ontario and at once formed the conjecture that this might be the missing merchant. He communicated his idea to Mr. C. M. Reid and the latter at once advised him to notify the relatives at Peterborough This he did.

Last night Mr. Caldwell, brother-in-law of Mr. Might, arranged to meet Mr. Buchanan at the Grand Trunk station here. Mr. Buchanan was shown a photo of Mr. Might and at once positively identified it as that of the man he had seen on the train.

Mr. Caldwell had made further inquiries en route. The conductor of the train also identified the photo.

Mr. Might, if it was he, went as far as Montreal. Then he changed and went on to Point Levis. After that no further trace of him has yet been discovered, although it was ascertained that he had purchased a ticket for Moncton, N. B.

PLANING MILL SCENE OF FIRE

SEVERAL HUNDRED DOLLARS' DAMAGE CAUSED BY A BLAZE.

The Peterborough planing mill was damaged to the extent of about $400 by fire shortly before 10 o'clock last night.

Mr. Alex. Gibson on his way home detected smoke and later saw the flames shooting upwards in the mill. He ran to box 43 and sent in the alarm.

The fire department soon had two lines of hose playing on the flames, which were confined to the south of the centre building, and the blaze was soon under control. It is thought that a pile of dry material left against the chimney was the cause of the fire.

CANADA IS GOOD ENOUGH

Rev. Thos. Wilson, for 14 years pastor of the Presbyterian Church, Walkerton, has received a unanimous call from the Presbyterian Church of the Covenant, the largest in Williamsport, Pa., a city of 40,000 people. The stipend offered is practically double what he now receives. Walkerton is anxious to retain him. He is a brother of the Rev. J. A. Wilson of Hamilton, and for some years assistant at St. Paul's Church here. Rev. Mr. Wilson announced to his congregation that he had decided to remain in Walkerton where he had been pastor for the past 14 years. He has two sons at the front and felt that Canada was a good enough country for him to live in.

DETRIMENTS TO RECRUITING.

LIEUT.-COL. ACKERMAN is reported in a local paper as saying that certain articles that have appeared in The Review recently have been a detriment to recruiting.

Recruiting was practically a dead letter in this city and in other parts of Ontario long before the articles referred to were written. It was the conditions which The Review discussed, not the articles, which are responsible for the slump. This paper can no more be held accountable for these conditions than it can be for a murder or any other crime which it describes or discusses in its columns. It is the condition that should be remedied. Carping at The Review will not help matters in the least. The people, as a rule, the young men especially, were familiar with the situation before this paper dealt with it.

There have been articles in local papers that have been a detriment to recruiting. The journal that permits itself to be used as a channel of criticism of The Review has for months been insinuating in its editorial columns that the Government at Ottawa is a hotbed of graft and that the members are indifferent in the matter of dealing with the war problem. It openly and mendaciously says that there are three men in the Cabinet doing their utmost to discourage recruiting, and that every dollar raised for war purposes, every recruit put into khaki, is simply another opportunity for the thief and the grafter.

How can the young men of Canada be expected to enlist if such are represented as existing conditions? It is true that in its local columns the paper referred to persevered in its usual namby-pamby style of journalism, refraining from criticism of anything situated within easy walking distance of Peterborough. It is safe to slam a public official in Ottawa, but a different matter entirely when it comes to any man or any situation in the local field.

At the rate of recruiting before the articles objected to were published it would require something like four years to get a battalion up to full strength. If the newspapers and parties of Canada had combined to enforce conscription, all this trouble and wasted energy could have been saved. But our contemporary never opened its editorial mouth in favor of conscription, simply because the party to which it extends limp allegiance is opposed to anything of the kind, fearing to offend the province which contains its last hope. Partyism swallowed up patriotism. No political advantage was to be risked. The tirade of abuse against the Government was kept up. And in the meantime the country called for recruits, with indifferent success.

THOSE PENNY BANKS.

IF THE BOARD OF EDUCATION decide to establish savings banks in the public schools, the bankers of the city will co-operate, even if the innovation involves considerable sacrifice on their part. At the annual meeting of the Clearance House Association the matter was discussed, and it was agreed that if the work is taken up by the schools the banks will handle the money, one bank taking over the funds of some particular school.

The manager of one of the city banks told The Review yesterday that there were penny banks in the schools of a city where he resided some years ago. The teachers kept the first offerings of the pupil until the latter had one dollar to his credit. This was then deposited in the big bank, the pupil was given a book, and after that could do business directly with the receiving teller, any amount being accepted.

The Review has had first hand information concerning these school banks. It has always maintained from the start of this discussion that children should do business with the banks and leave the schools out of the transactions. The system to which the local bank manager refers is similar, aside from the preliminary steps taken to raise the first dollar. This could be done, it would seem, just as easily at home as through the medium of the schools.

It is only a commendable spirit of loyal citizenship that induces the banks of this city to agree to co-operate in the event of the establishing of such institutions in the schools. The work would add to their duties and would mean nothing in the way of profit. The teachers, too, would not only be required to keep track of the deposits, but would have to sign an order every time a pupil wished to withdraw part of his account.

THE SANITARY INSPECTOR.

THE SANITARY INSPECTOR must be a man possessed of a fair degree of technical training, as the duties which he is expected to discharge call for expert knowledge. The position is one secondary in responsibility to none in the city. The health of the public depends largely upon the faithful and efficient performance of his task. The Ontario Health Act is one of the most difficult of all laws to enforce in every detail. The Sanitary Inspector who plays no favorites is sure to raise up for himself considerable bitter opposition. Such an official must needs be a man of stamina in order to hold his own with a public, a large proportion of which is hostile.

In the appointment of a sanitary inspector, the returned soldiers are entitled to consideration. But the fitness of all applicants must first of all be taken into account. And it is fitness alone that should figure. No man should be appointed to such a position for no better reason than that he belongs to a particular party or is a member of this or that secret society.

OUR PEDANTIC CONTEMPORARY.

OUR GEORGE STREET neighbor probably makes a vulgar display of its geographical attainments in order to conceal its deficiencies in other matters—the trade question for example.

LAWS AND LAWYERS.

WOMEN, WHATEVER their qualifications, are not to be permitted to practise law in England if the lawyers there can prevent it. At the annual meeting of the Bar, just held in London, the members declined even to consider the question of admitting them, defeating by a large majority a motion to this effect.

Women are being used on the police force in London, in fact in every capacity in which men now at the front have served. They can uphold the law, but must not be permitted to have anything to do with its interpretation. They can perform menial tasks, while the higher professions are barred to them. And, above all else, the franchise is denied them.

When Ontario enters the list of those provinces that recognize the rights of women, a steady migration of the downtrodden sex in England, Scotland and Ireland for the land of the free and the home of the equal can be looked for with confidence.

ITS WAVERING FAITH.

WE NOTICE with infinite regret that The Examiner's faith does not stand the test of adversity. It does not believe in the same creed that it embraced to its own undoing five short years ago. Then it was all for free and uninterrupted interchange of natural products between Canada and the United States. Now it would lock the door of every avenue of export and throw the key down the well. It would build a brick wall about home products and leave the rest of the world to cruel chance.

The news—more or less reliable—that Canadian potatoes are going across the border throws our neighbor into a perfect frenzy of rage. A shipment of pulpwood has the same effect upon it. "Canada for the Canadians" is a high-sounding phrase, pleasing to the ears of the unthinking, but it is only a thin veneer for narrowness of spirit and parochialism.

Suppose Canada insisted upon an embargo on everything worth while and the United States denied that reciprocity in trade would inaugurate reciprocity in prohibitory tariffs, how would it work out? Canada depends upon the Republic almost entirely for its coal supply. Fuel this winter is scarce in the United States. If the Americans elected to put an embargo on black diamonds, the people of this country could freeze to death, even though surrounded by potatoes. Cannot The Examiner realize that it is playing with a gun that is not only loaded but liable to kick viciously?

Some cars of coal intended for Canada were diverted before they reached the border, and the contents turned over to warm shivering native Americans. The Examiner, if memory serves us, was wroth at what it was pleased to regard as an outrage. It may be too much to expect broadness of vision from a Grit newspaper lost in the shades of Opposition and without a compass to work out its own rescue, but an occasional exhibition of fair dealing would not come amiss.

MUNICIPAL TAXES AND THE FUND.

DURING THE YEARS 1914 and 1915 the people of the Province of New Brunswick were somewhat indifferent in the matter of contributions to the Patriotic Fund. Last year the amount raised was $300,000.

It was felt by the public-spirited that this was not bearing a fair share of the burden, and it has been decided to raise the sum required entirely by municipal taxation. Over half a million dollars will be raised in this way. On or before March 1 the first payment, three-twelfths of the total amount, must be paid to the treasurer of the Patriotic Fund at Ottawa, and thereafter the balance must be paid in equal monthly instalments. Municipalities are empowered to brorow money for this purpose if their assessment is not made in time for payment.

It is probable that in 1918 the voluntary contribution plan will be abandoned and the taxation system universally adopted. Peterborough has led the way in this matter, the managers of the local fund having had the foresight to see what it is now certain will be regarded everywhere as the way of wisdom.

ANOTHER LIBERAL SLOGAN

"National Government or war-time election" is the slogan of "certain citizens of Hamilton," who emblazon it on their envelopes but do not record their names on the letter paper. We do not blame them for this. It is only anonymity that keeps alive the movement. Let the names of the proposed ministers be mentioned and bricks will fly. The people promoting the movement do well to call themselves "certain citizens," although if they were really "certain" they would not seek concealment. It is because they are not certain that they call themselves "certain citizens."

Their scheme depends for life upon its mystery. It would be laughed out of court if people knew what it meant and who was behind it. It would be angrily dismissed if its composition was defined. It would start a merry row among its promoters and possible beneficiaries if its policy came up for discusion among them.

At the commencement it was favored only by the men who last year promoted an agitation against a war-time election. They thought there was a chance to defeat the Government, but they were handicapped by their arguments against a war-time election. Not being courageous enough to come out openly and expose their partisanship they put forth coalition as an alternative. Coalition lost its hold by reason of public distrust of Sir Wilfrid Laurier. Even Liberal partisans who really want to win the war had not the heart to wish Laurier into a war Government. Certain business interests then saw their chance. It was not necessary to take Laurier in, they said. What was needed was a national, not a coalition government—big men, they said, men representing our industrial interests. Of course no names were mentioned and no one knew where they were to find seats, although vacancies in the Senate were tempting.

Through it all, however, there was no thought among any of them of supplanting Sir Robert Borden. It is a tribute to his power and leadership that every scheme proposed contemplated him as Prime Minister. During the whole period of the war his prestige increased. Today his leadership is unquestioned. Thousands of Liberals are thankful he was Prime Minister when the war broke out. They recognize that he has had only one care and one purpose since then. They know the country is safe in his hands. They endorse every word of the eloquent eulogy paid him last year by that robust patriot, Dr. Clark of Red Deer!

SAVING YOUR EYESIGHT

Man is not better off without his eyes than a submarine without her periscope. A blind hermit would soon die for the want of food. One's efficiency along most lines nowadays depends a great deal upon the strength of the sight. The perfect young eye has a wide margin of endurance and few of us realize when its strength is being used up until it is crippled.

Now that the price of paper is soaring higher and higher, small type is being introduced in all kinds of reading mater. The eye becomes exhausted if worked long at a time to decipher small letters or figures. This causes nervous disturbance, headaches, indigestion and sleeplessness. We had better be a little morel liberal in paying for reading matter with legible type and economize in other ways—tobacco or imitation flowers on our spring hats, for instance.

Save your eyes from dust as much as possible.

If you have to read when riding in cars or trains do not rest your book or arm on any part of the seat, but hold it in your hand, so that it will move with the body and not be going one way while the head and eyes are swinging in another direction.

Never read with a bright light shining directly in your face, but try to get it over one or the other shoulder, or shining down over your head.

Try to hold your reading matter at an angle so that the light reflected from the paper will not shine directly into your eyes.

The color of the paper is worth considering in account books. The contrast between a pure white paper and a yet black handwriting or type causes a little confusion along the lines between the white and black. It is easier to follow letters or figures if they are brown on a light buff paper. Practical tests will soon convince you that the lines will then be more distinct than when the sharper contrast of black with white is made.

The desk upon which you have your reading matter should be of a materiol that will not reflect the glare of the light into the face, which will irritate the eyes.

When you have to seek artificial aid by the use of eyeglasses, there is no one too learned in the anatomy of the eye and the many abnormalities to which it is subject for the task of giving advice. Often more harm is done by glasses selected by those not educated in medical science than would be done without the glasses. Furthermore, one is misled by a false sense of security, while an undiscovered diseased condition of the eye runs on until it is too late to remedy it.

Never forget to take the best care of your eyes. They are good and necessary friends.

EDITOR'S MAIL

A SOLDIER'S HOME

Editor Review: With reference to the sale of the Doupe home on Mark St., I think the public should know the facts of the case. Mr. Doupe went overseas with the 93rd. While fighting in France his wife died, leaving four small children. Their home was mortgaged for a small amount. I am told the man who held the mortgage wanted his money. Now why was not this property sold at auction so those children would receive the full value of the property? I am told it was sold on the quiet for $1700. I can get a buyer who will bid $2000 first bid, if sold at auction and the proceeds of sale were to go to the children. Surely brass bands and shouting count for nothing if we don't protect the children of men who go to the front to fight for us. I believe this property would bring much more money, as there are two houses on the lot, both renting now. Surely there are people in Peterborough who, if given a chance, would see to it that this valuable property is not given away for nothing.

FAIR PLAY.

In Modern Language

A girl was required to write a brief sketch on the life of Queen Elizabeth. Her paper contained this sentence:

"Elizabeth was so dishonest that she stole her soldiers' food."

The teacher was puzzled and called the girl.

"Where did you get that notion?"

"Why, that's what it says in the history."

The book was sent for and the passage was found. It read:

"Elizabeth was so parsimonious that she even pinched her soldiers' rations."

A Logical Conclusion

"Did you really call this gentleman an old fool last night?" said the judge severely.

The prisoner tried hard to collect his thoughts.

"The more I look at him the more likely it seems that I did," he replied.

Hollow Hopes

"Never despair. Somewhere beyond the clouds the sun is shining."

"Yes, and somewhere below the sea there's solid bottom. But that doesn't help a man when he falls overboard."

Why It Failed

A man who bought the mixture came back in three days to complain that he had drunk it all, but was no better.

"Drunk it all!" gasped the druggist. "Why, man, that was a rubber solution to put on the soles of your boots."

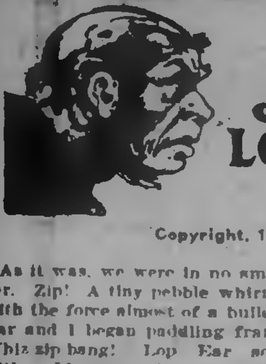
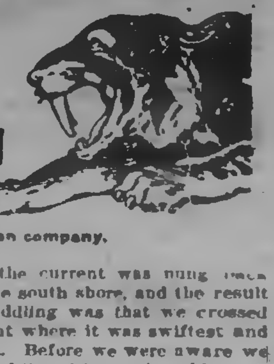
BEFORE ADAM



By JACK LONDON



Copyright, 1907, by the MacMillan company.

As it was, we were in no small danger. Zip! A tiny pebble whirred past with the force almost of a bullet. Lop Ear and I began paddling frantically. Whiz zip bang! Lop Ear screamed with sudden anguish. The pebble had struck him between the shoulders. Then I got one and yelled. The only thing that saved us was the exhausting of Red Eye's ammunition. He dashed back to the gravel bed for more, while Lop Ear and I paddled away.

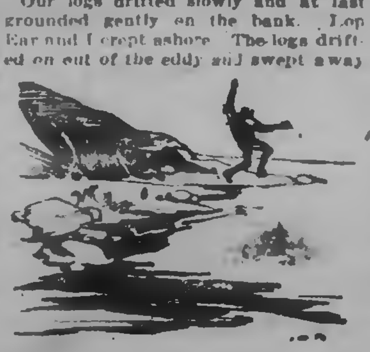
Gradually we drew out of range, though Red Eye continued making trips for more ammunition and the pebbles continued to whiz about us. But in the center of the slough there was a slight current, and in our excitement we failed to notice that it was drifting us into the river. We paddled, and Red Eye kept as close as he could to us by following along the shore. Then he discovered larger rocks. Such ammunition increased his range. One fragment, fully five pounds in weight, crashed on the log alongside of me, and such was its impact that it drove a score of splinters, like fiery needles, into my leg. Had it struck me it would have killed me.

And then the river current caught us. So wildly were we paddling that Red Eye was the first to notice it, and our first warning was his yell of triumph. Where the edge of the current struck the slough water was a series of eddies or small whirlpools. These caught our clumsy legs and whirled them end for end, back and forth and around. We quit paddling and devoted our whole energy to holding the logs together alongside each other. In the meanwhile Red Eye continued to bombard us, the rock fragments falling about us, splashing water on us and menacing our lives. At the same time he gloated over us wildly and vociferously.

It happened that there was a sharp turn in the river at the point where the slough entered, and the whole main current of the river was deflected to the other bank. And toward that bank, which was the north bank, we drifted rapidly, at the same time going down stream. This quickly took us out of range of Red Eye, and the last we saw of him was far out on a point of land, where he was jumping up and down and chanting a paean of victory.

Beyond holding the two logs together Lop Ear and I did nothing. We were resigned to our fate, and we remained resigned until we aroused to the fact that we were drifting along the north shore not a hundred feet away. We began to paddle for it. Here the main force of the current was flung back toward the south shore, and the result of our paddling was that we crossed the current where it was swiftest and narrowest. Before we were aware we were out of it and in a quiet eddy.

Our logs drifted slowly and at last grounded gently on the bank. Lop Ear and I crept ashore. The logs drifted on out of the eddy and swept away down the stream. We looked at each other, but we did not laugh. We were in a strange land, and it did not enter our minds that we could return to our own land in the same manner that we had come.



He Was Jumping Up and Down and Chanting a Paean of Victory.

We had learned how to cross a river, though we did not know it. And this was something that no one else of the folk had ever done. We were the first of the folk to set foot on the north bank of the river, and, for that matter, I believe the last. That they would have done so in the time to come is undoubted, but the migration of the fire people and the consequent migration of the survivors of the folk set back our evolution for centuries.

Indeed, there is no telling how disastrous was to be the outcome of the Fire People's migration. Personally I am prone to believe that it brought about the destruction of the folk; that we, a branch of lower life budding toward the human, were nipped short off and perished down by the roaring surf where the river entered the sea. Of course in such an eventuality I remain to be accounted for, but I outrun my story, and such accounting will be made before I am done.

I have no idea how long Lop Ear and I wandered in the land north of the river. We were like mariners wrecked on a desert isle, so far as concerned the likelihood of our getting home again. We turned our backs upon the river and for weeks and months adventured in that wilderness where there were no folk. It is very difficult for me to reconstruct our journeying and impossible to do it from day to day. Most of it is hazy and indistinct, though here and there I have vivid recollections of things that happened.

Especially do I remember the hunger we endured on the mountains between Long lake and Far lake and the calf we caught sleeping in the thicket; also there are the Tree People who dwelt in the forest between Long lake and the mountains. It was they who chased us into the mountains and compelled us to travel on to Far lake.

First, after we left the river, we worked toward the west till we came to a small stream that flowed through marshlands. Here we turned away toward the north, skirting the marshes, and after several days arriving at what I have called Long lake. We spent some time around its upper end, where we found food in plenty, and then one day in the forest we ran foul of the Tree People. These creatures were ferocious apes, nothing more. And yet they were not so different from us. They were more hairy, it is true; their legs were a trifle more twisted and gnarly, their eyes a bit smaller, their necks a bit thicker and shorter and their nostrils slightly more like orifices in a sunken surface, but they had no hair on their faces and on the palms of their hands and the soles of their feet, and they made sounds similar to ours with somewhat similar meanings. After all, the Tree People and the folk were not so unlike.

I found him first, a little withered, dried up old fellow, wrinkled faced and bleary eyed and tottery. He was legitimate prey. In our world there was no sympathy between the kinds, and he was not our kind. He was a tree man, and he was very old. He was sitting at the foot of a tree—evidently his tree, for we could see the tattered nest in the branches in which he slept at night.

I pointed him out to Lop Ear, and we made a rush for him. He started to climb, but was too slow. I caught him by the leg and dragged him back. Then we had fun. We pinched him, pulled his hair, tweaked his ears and poked twigs into him, and all the while we laughed with streaming eyes. His futile anger was most absurd. He was a comical sight, striving to fan into flame the cold ashes of his youth, to resurrect his strength dead and gone through the oozing of the years—making woeful faces in place of the ferocious ones he intended, grinding his worn teeth together, beating his meager chest with feeble fists.

Also he had a cough, and he gasped and hacked and spluttered prodigiously. Every time he tried to climb the tree we pulled him back until at last he surrendered to his weakness and did no more than sit and weep. And Lop Ear and I sat with him, our arms around each other, and laughed at his wretchedness.

From weeping he went to whining and from whining to wailing until at last he achieved a scream. This alarmed us, but the more we tried to make him cease the louder he screamed. And then from not far away in the forest came a "Gock! Gock!" to our ears. To this there were answering cries, several of them, and from very far off we could hear a big bass "Gock! Gock! Gock!" Also the "Whoo-whoo!" call was rising in the forest all around us.

Then came the chase. It seemed it never would end. They raced us through the trees, the whole tribe of them, and nearly caught us. We were forced to take to the ground, and here we had the advantage, for they were truly the Tree People, and, while they outclimbed us, we outfooted them on the ground. We broke away toward the north, the tribe howling on our back. Across the open spaces we gained, and in the brush they caught up with us, and more than once it was nip and tuck. And as the chase continued we realized that we were not their kind either and that the bonds between us were anything but sympathetic.

They ran us for hours. The forest seemed interminable. We kept to the glades as much as possible, but they always ended in more thick forest. Sometimes we thought we had escaped and sat down to rest, but always, before we could recover our breath, we would hear the hateful "Whoo-whoo!" cries and the terrible "Gock! Gock! Gock!" This latter sometimes terminated in a savage "Ha, ha, ha, ha, ha-a-a-a a!"

And in this fashion were we hunted through the forest by the exasperated Tree People. At last, by midafternoon, the slopes began rising higher and higher, and the trees were becoming smaller. Then we came out on the grassy flanks of the mountains. Here was where we could make time and here the Tree People gave up and returned to their forest.

THEATRES IN JAPAN

How Playgoers Are Entertained in Far East.

The revolving stage, hardly more than an experiment in Europe and America, has been in use by the Japanese for centuries, while the run way, which is rarely seen here except in a musical play, is a necessary adjunct of almost every drama in Japan. Such are among the observations of Percy Burton, an English theatrical manager, who has been traveling in the Far East.

"A leading actor in Japan is well off if he receives $1,500 a year," declares Mr. Burton, "and lesser players are proud to be attached to a star's company, quite apart from the matter of salary, so long as they receive their daily rice.

"The Japanese audience expects full value for its money and usually four, five, or six plays of varying length and style are performed in a single afternoon and night, drama being interspersed with farce and musical comedy or dancing.

"The spectators squat on their haunches or recline at their comfort, but are enthusiastic enough when their attention is aroused by the discomfiture of the villain or the frequent murders which take place, none being too bloody for the sanguinary loving Japanese plebeian, who will cry with apparently greater facility than he can laugh, and applaud as vigorously as an Italian opera enthusiast.

"Nor does the scenery leave much of anything to be desired, both interior and exterior scenes being on realistic lines and wonderfully well designed and executed. One, in fact, of a bamboo grove, with rushes waving and whistling in the wind, and with flowing water, I have not seen excelled. Sometimes, it is true, a carpenter coming on with a hammer, will destroy the illusion of a scene if it is not quite finished when the circular stage revolves."

If you would put a small boy where you may hope to find him five minutes later, put him in the pantry.

MARIMBA IN GUATEMALA

The People There Are Very Fond of Music.

The people of Guatemala are very fond of music. Their most popular programs are those in which classical selections predominate. Band, orchestral, and marimba music constitute an indispensable feature of all public festivals and entertainments.

The most highly prized music in Guatemala is that of the Marimba, a sweet-toned musical instrument said to have been invented by the "Tecomate," a tribe of Indians of the State of Chiapas, Mexico. The original form of the instrument, crude in structure, was brought to Guatemala, where it has been greatly improved. It resembles the xylophone in structure and manner of playing. The keys, strips of wood graduated in length to the musical scale, are made of two kinds of wood called "hormigo," not unlike cedar, and "aguacate." The keys are held together by means of a cord drawn through them. There are 45 tones and 30 half tones. The bass tones are given by the long, thick slats, the high tones by the short, thin slats. The keys are struck with two small rubber hammers called "banquetas."

The marimba is about eight feet long, and varies from one to two feet in width. The sounding board beneath the keys is constructed of two kinds of wood, "taxiscob" and "guachipilin," and the keys are made of mahogany. The cost of a marimba is from $60 to $125 gold.

The finest marimbas are manufactured in Quebaltenango, and the most skilled operators also come from the city, which is the second in size in Guatemala. Eight operators are required to play a marimba, and the addition of a bass viol, a recent innovation, gives strength and volume to the music.—Scientific American.

CLERK WOULD FLATTER QUEEN

ASKED FOR SHOE BRUSH; CLERK OFFERED A TOOTH BRUSH.

It is a Spanish custom to openly pay compliment to ladies in the street, the theatres, and other public places, and ladies are disappointed if in their walks or shopping excursions many pretty things are not said to them. One afternoon lately Queen Victoria Eugenie, accompanied by one of her ladies-in-waiting, went to a fashionable perfumers in one of the principal streets and asked a youth behind the counter for a fairly strong shoe brush of moderate size. After some moment's delay the clerk produced a diminutive tooth brush, which he presented to Her Majesty for her approval.

"What is the use of showing me that?" observed the Queen. "I asked for a strong brush."

"For one whose foot I feel sure must be as small and dainty as yours this brush will be more than sufficient," replied the clerk.

Hardly knowing whether to be annoyed or amused, the Queen turned to her lady-in-waiting, but the latter, with great indignation, exclaimed:

"What insolence! Are you aware that this lady whom you have addressed in such an impertinent manner is none other than the Queen?"

The unhappy youth collapsed. He had only recently come to Madrid from the provinces, and failed to recognize the Queen, who wore a veil and was simply attired.

No one laughed more heartily on hearing of this incident than King Alfonso himself, who has a keen sense of humor.

Gordon McNally, Norman Hall, Gerald Bishop, Floyd Henderson and J. P. Fitzgerald, five Oshawa young men, landed in the city last night in a very hilarious condition. It was suspected that they had consumed too much whiskey. They were at the hockey game and later came under the eye of the police, who took them to the cells.

At the police court this morning they pleaded guilty to the charges and were each fined $10 or one month in jail.

The magistrate thought that it was a pity to interfere with a hockey game by getting drunk and referred to one of the defendants as a slacker.

Chief Thompson relieved the mind of the court by giving the information that the wet goods were not procured in Peterborough.

FATE OF ANNIE DOUGLAS NOW IN JURY'S HANDS

"No Bill" is Returned in Case of Alice Douglas.

The jury is out in the case of the King against Annie Douglas, charged with murder. Mr. Justice Sutherland concluded his address to the jury shortly after four o'clock.

Last evening the grand jury returned a true bill against the girl for causing the death of her infant son on July 5, 1916. In the charges against Alice Douglas the grand jury found "No bill."

When court opened this morning the selection of a jury was proceeded with and many challenges and requests to stand aside were made by M. D O'Connell, counsel for the prisoner, and Crown Prosecutor Shaver. The following were finally selected:—

Fred Lynch, Asphodel.
J. J. Murphy, Smith.
O. Callander, Peterborough.
J. E. Trennum, Smith.
Oliver Baskin, Norwood.
R. C. Heiderman, Peterborough.
A. Greenbank, Norwood.
Wm. Rae, Otonabee.
A. Carveth, Dummer.
R. Conlon, Douro.
W. J. Copp, Peterborough.
R. C. Banbridge, Otonabee.

Mr. Shaver gave a brief outline of the evidence against the defendant. It would show that Annie Douglas gave birth to a normal male child on July 4 and that when Dr. Huycke left the house that evening the baby was doing nicely. The next morning when the doctor called the child was dead, very dark in the face and smelled strongly of turpentine.

The evidence of Dr. Huycke, Miss M Drope, a trained nurse, Inspector Miller and others was heard for the Crown.

ONTARIO WOMEN WILL BE GIVEN VOTE AND AT ONCE

No Longer Any Doubt That Sir William Hearst is in Favor of This Reform--- No Delay Probable.

TORONTO, Feb. 21—Women will be given the suffrage by the Ontario Legislature this session. That the Government had its mind pretty well made up was indicated in the House by Sir William Hearst in the opening round of the debate on the Speech from the Throne, and what doubts remained were dissipated by the caucus of the Conservative members yesterday. The Government laid before the members their decision to give the women the vote, and while there was considerable discussion of details, there was little [illegible] opposition.

The action of the Government in objecting to Mr. Rowell's woman franchise amendment and having it removed from the order paper cleared the way for Government action. The extension of the legislative and municipal franchise to women will be taken up by the House in the consideration of the two bills introduced by J. W. Johnson, Conservative member for West Hastings. The point has not been settled, but it is understood that the legislation to be finally passed will be a Government measure.

It is stated that the Government is not greatly concerned about the fact that local assessors are now preparing the lists, and that legislation this session will be too late to put women on the lists in time for the next general election. The remedy under consideration is an extension of the time for completing the lists to probably June 1.

FAREWELL TO SOLDIERS FROM GILMOUR MEMORIAL CHURCH

On Sunday evening Gilmour Memorial Baptist Church was the scene of a farewell meeting, tendered to Sherman Blewett and Albert Oliver on the eve of their departure to Toronto and thence overseas in the service of their country. The gathering was large and fully representative of the community as well as of the church.

An interesting feature of the meeting was the presentation of a beautifuly bound pocket Bible to each of the young soldiers, containing a suitable inscription. The presentations were most gracefully made by Miss Jean Scott and Miss Beatrice McGregor. The recipients in a few well chosen sentences expressed their appreciation of the kindly feeling so warmly manifested towards them. Needless to say, these speeches were received with hearty applause. Short adresses were given by Mr. Joe Mann as Sunday School teacher, Mr. C. Moore as S.S. superintendent, and Mr. H. Archer as president of the B.Y.P.U. Mr. W. Paul conducted the service of song, and Mr. Fred Scott and Mr. A. B. Mann led in the devotions. The pastor, Rev. John Galt, presided and addressed some words of counsel to the lads in khaki. There are now nine names on the Gilmour Memorial honor roll.

Scene from Al H. Wilson's song-play "My Killarney Rose," which comes to The Grand next Saturday, February 24th, for two performances. The seat sale opens to-morrow morning.

CONTINGENT OF CANADIAN GIRL

people seem to think that an officer can stay in England or Canada as he likes. That was not so. Once he enlisted he was under the immediate control and [illegible] of the authorities, who did not consult him about where he was to go. It must always be remembered. If you want to blame anybody, blame the authorities. To expect trained officers—the victims of a new order of things and one not in vogue in any other army—to suddenly give up all their training, pay, promotion, etc., that they had built up, and go back into the ranks was almost too much unless absolutely necessary. But room could not be found at that even, for all the lieutenants in case they decided to revert so that these difficulties would simply have to be left to time to straighten out. "If you can't or don't enlist, don't knock and don't say what you would have done [illegible] etc."

PRESENTATION AND ADDRESS

TO MR. THOMAS CLEMENTS WHO LEAVES WARSAW FOR THIS CITY.

WARSAW, Feb. 21. As Mr. Thos. Clements, who for many years has been a merchant and one of the highly respected citizens of the village of Warsaw, recently removed to Peterborough, the Methodist Sunday school presented him with a leather seated oak chair and a pair of military brushes, accompanied by the following address:

Dear Mr. Clements:

It was with deep regret that we learned of your removal from our village, and we feel that we cannot let you go without showing in a small way our appreciation of your labors in our Sunday school and church. We have found you ever ready to assist in any worthy cause, and as we look back over the years you have been in our midst we have pleasant recollections of your association with us both as a worker in the Master's service and as a worthy citizen in all the walks of life. As a slight token of our appreciation of your work and of our esteem will you accept this chair and these brushes from the Warsaw Methodist Sunday school, and as your family and you sever your connection with us, be assured that you carry with you our best wishes for the prosperity, health and happiness of you all, and in making new friends in your future sphere of life we trust that you will not forget the old, and although you are leaving our immediate neighborhood, we are glad that we shall occasionally meet you from time to time. We pray that God may ever prosper you and yours through the years to come, and that you may be blessed in all the work you undertake for the advancement of Christ's kingdom.

Signed on behalf of the Sunday School,

R. Somers,
Mrs. D. R. Clare,
Mrs. G. G. Taylor.

LAID TO REST.

The funeral of the late Charles Nixon took place this afternoon to the Little Lake Cemetery and was attended by a great many of his friends from Lindsay, Port Hope and Omemee, as well as Peterborough. The pallbearers were Mrs. Nixon's five brothers, Messrs. William, Robert, George, Albert and James Padgett and Albert Ashmore of Lindsay. The funeral services were conducted by Rev. R. B. Grobb.

Sergt. Stanley, recruiting officer for the 256th Batt., will be at the Armouries and at the recruiting station to receive accounts contracted by the enlisted men who boarded in the city. These accounts should be in his hands by Thursday and payment will be arranged for. Recruiting for the unit has ceased.

Sergts. Hines and Robbins are in the city with a view to accepting enlistments for reinforcing the Iron Second Batt., in which so many Peterborough soldiers have served. They will be at the recruiting station on Simcoe St. and prospective recruits will receive a cordial welcome from the recruiting sergeants.

Frank Warnald, a boarder at the Montreal House, has been attested as a member of the 247th Battalion. The strength is 185.

Superintendent R. L. Dobbin's report on the activities of the waterworks department for the year ending Dec. 31, 1916, follows:—

The largest item of construction for the year was the extension of the force main from the Auburn dam to the corner of Park and McDonnel Streets, via Water, George, Smith and Donegal Streets. At this point it connects with the 14-inch main laid westerly to the Bonner-Worth Co.'s factory; 8850 feet of 18- and 16-inch mains were laid, at a total cost of about $38,000.

This construction has brought a much-needed increase in pressure to the city generally, and particularly to the western part of the city. Friction losses in the mains have been reduced very considerably, and we have been enabled to reduce the pump house pressure from 90 to 70 lbs. per square inch, the average pressure in the mains remaining the same as before.

On July 27 the inspector for the Canadian Fire Underwriters' Association made a fire test at the corner of Hunter and George Streets. He found that with the 12 hose streams running, and 120 lbs. pressure at the pump house, the pressure in the mains was reduced to 54 lbs. At this time the force main had been constructed only as far as the corner of Smith and George Streets.

On Oct. 3, construction having proceeded as far as the corner of Smith and Reid Streets, with the aid of the Fire Chief, a test was made at Hunter and George Streets, duplicating as far as possible the conditions under which the former test was made. The object was to show the advantage of the work thus far constructed.

With twelve streams running as before, the pressure in the mains was reduced to 75 lbs., which is an increase of nearly 40 per cent. over the former result.

On Dec. 11 Peterborough experienced the worst fire in its history, at the factory of the Quaker Oats Co. On account of the breaking of some large risers by the initial explosion, the pressure in the mains in the immediate vicinity was reduced very considerably, as the flow of water through the two 8-inch fire connections was practically unobstructed. When these connections were shut off the pressure in the mains at once rose to 110 lbs., and was maintained there as long as required, in spite of the fact that at one time 17 streams were in use.

Had the waterworks not been able to supply this service when it was needed there is no doubt that a large part of the city would have been destroyed.

In order to get as much benefit as possible from the new force main, short pieces of 5-inch pipe were laid on Stewart and Rubidge Streets from Smith to Edinburgh Streets, and a piece of 4-inch on Donegal Street from McDonnel south across the creek.

The only main laid in the ordinary way on petition was the 4-inch on Wolfe Street, from Aylmer to Bethune Street.

On account of the construction of the new force main ending up so late in the season, the whole scheme for giving fire protection to the Auburn district was not able to be carried out. However, the 8-inch main across the Dam was extended for 495 feet, and one hydrant connected to it through 150 feet of 5-inch pipe. This will give some protection to this district for the time being, and if the cost of materials and labor are not prohibitive during the coming season, the whole plan should be carried out.

Services

The number of new services laid during the year was 64, which is the lowest since 1908. The lack of new buildings in the city are no doubt responsible for this.

All service posts set in the sidewalks were examined during the summer, and any that were projecting were lowered. Also a large number of old wooden posts were replaced with iron ones.

A good start has been made in relocating the service posts in the system, and out of about 4300 some 2700 have ben measured and the location sketched. A simple card system has been instaled to make these measurements accessible.

Pumping Station and Dam

The Turbine Equipment Co. have not yet completed their contract for the auxiliary steam pumping plant, on account of troubles with the condenser and air pump. These latter parts have failed to deliver the 28 inches of vacuum required, and are being replaced by machines of more efficient type. They are now on the ground and will be installed shortly, and we may expect to hold the final test soon after.

The plant was used five times during the winter of 1915 and 16, when frazil ice had paralyzed the water wheels, but has not been so used this winter up to the time of writing. On account of the thick coating of ice that was formed at the beginning of the winter in the forebay there has been no occurence of frazil.

In June at a cost of about $1200 a liquid chlorine sterilizing plant was instaled at the pumping station for treating the water as it is pumped into the mains. The apparatus is of the most modern type, and has operated satisfactorily in producing a safe water during the past summer.

The appearance of the pumping station has been improved greatly by the construction of a fence round the property of the Commission on the west side of the river. The buildings and pumps have been painted inside and out, this latter work being done by the regular employes at the station.

The portions of the old piers above the surface of the river were removed, and the general appearance of the dam and surroundings much improved thereby.

I would ask the Commission to consider the building at the pumping station of a cottage for the chief operator, so that he would be on hand at all times in case of emergency. If at all possible this work should be done this coming season.

The total pumpage for the year was about 40 million gallons more than in the preceding one, which will partly be accounted for by the extreme heat and drought of the months of July, August and September.

The maximum rate of demand was higher than in any previous year, reaching a rate of nearly seven million gallons per day on Aug 21 at 7.30 p.m. The total pumpage that day was 4,323,000 galls. which is the largest day's pumping in the history of the waterworks.

General Remarks

Attached you will find are the particulars regarding the extensions to the mains and services, etc., together with costs. A large increase in the cost of labor and materials is responsible for the increased cost of some of the construction items. In the case of the pumping station the extra coal used in the steam auxiliary plant, and the chlorine used in the sterilizing plant explain the increase in maintenance.

If conditions are at all favorable this coming season I would recommend to the Commission that the construction of the new office and workshop for this department be proceeded with. The present premises have reached a condition in which they are entirely unsuitable for the work carried out there.

In addition to those already at the front four more of the department's employees have enlisted, making a total of 14 since the beginning of the war, of which number three have made the supreme sacrifice.

In closing this report I wish to express my appreciation of the individual support given the undersigned by your honorable body during the past year, and ask that the spirit of hearty co-operation which has been so strongly evidenced in the past may continue during the coming years, that the welfare of the Department may ever be kept foremost in our work.

Construction Work

Under the heading of construction it is shown that 2.10 miles of iron mains were laid in 1916, which with 42.10 miles previously laid, makes the total mileage 43.20 miles. The number of hydrants on the streets is 267. The number of services 4,323 and the average gallons of water pumped per day in 1916 was 2,970,888, an average per head of population of 148 gallons.

FINANCIAL STATEMENT

During the year $40,157.45 was expended in laying mains and setting hydrants. This work was charged with $208.47 of discount on one lot of debentures sold and credited with $614.60 premium received on another sale of debentures. The amount also includes the expense of laying the new force main from Auburn Dam along Water, George, Smith, Donegal and McDonnel Sts. The amount expended in laying services was $1,192.59, which makes a total of $41,350.04 expended on construction work during the year.

In laying the force main a 5-inch main on George Street from Smith Street to Hilliard Street was taken up and replaced by the 18-inch force main. The cost of the labor in originally laying the 5-inch main was estimated at $1,200, and this sum has been deducted from the expenditure on construction account and written off by being charged to maintenance.

Of the cost of the purchase of the land for a hydro-electric sub-station and waterworks yard $7,515.19 was charged to the waterworks department.

The net water rates, including special frontage, rates, amounted to $59,307.82, and adding $2,000 charged for the use of the dam for power purposes brought the revenue up to $61,307.82. The expense accounts, including interest and sinking funds, amount written off tools and plant for depreciation, and the $1,200 charged to maintenance in connection with the replacing of the five-inch main on part of George St. amounted to $57,216.73, showing a profit on the year's operations of $4,091.09.

WHY WOMEN WRITE LETTERS

To Lydia E. Pinkham Medicine Co.

Women who are well often ask "Are the letters which the Lydia E. Pinkham Medicine Co. are continually publishing, genuine?" "Are they truthful?" "Why do women write such letters?"

In answer we say that never have we published a fictitious letter or name. Never, knowingly, have we published an untruthful letter, or one without the full and written consent of the woman who wrote it.

The reason that thousands of women from all parts of the country write such grateful letters to the Lydia E. Pinkham Medicine Co. is that Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has brought health and happiness into their lives, once burdened with pain and suffering.

It has relieved women from some of the worst forms of female ills, from displacements, inflammation, ulceration, irregularities, nervousness, weakness, stomach troubles and from the blues.

It is impossible for any woman who is well and who has never suffered to realize how these poor, suffering women feel when restored to health; their keen desire to help other women who are suffering as they did.

ARE UNIQUE CITIZENS

Mennonites Came to Canada to Escape Military Service.

Five bishops of the Mennonite Church in Canada waited on the Government recently to ascertain whether the registration of Canadian man-power by the National Service Board was to mean military service for them. Under an agreement made by order-in-Council in 1873, these people were entirely exempted from such service. The delegation was answered that the signing of the National Service cards would not mean the relinquishment of any of their rights in this respect.

In presenting their petition the delegates referred to the history of Mennonite wanderings since the time their ancestors left Holland in the sixteenth century and went to Germany under a promise of exemption from military service. When that was revoked they went to Russia, and when there, too, conditions changed they came to Canada and are now about 50,000 strong. The members of the delegation were Abraham Doerksen, David Tolms, Hermuch Doerksen, Benjamin Ement, and Klaas Peters.

They were received by Hon. Robt. Rogers, Mr. R. B. Bennett, M.P., and Colonel Hugh Clark, M.P. In reply to the delegates Hon. Robert Rogers stated that the signing of the National Service cards would not mean that the Mennonites were committing themselves to National Service. In the present crisis, however, it was necessary for all citizens in the safeguarding of their freedom to share the national burden. Mr. Rogers suggested that the Mennonites, as capable agriculturists, could render a very useful service by doing everything possible to increase their production of grain and cereals.

Oyster Sandwiches.

These are a fine delicacy suited to the late supper party. Select large oysters, drain and dry carefully. Meanwhile soften some butter and season some cracker crumbs with salt and pepper. Then, holding each oyster on a fork, dip it into the crumbs, then into the melted butter and again into the crumbs. Arrange them in an oyster broiler (which differs from an ordinary broiler in having the wires closer together) and broil over a hot fire for about two minutes, turning every few seconds. They should not be shriveled, but plump, soft, juicy and tender. Use as a filling between buttered slices of crisp toast and dress before putting the sandwiches together with a little tartar sauce.

Chocolate Cookies.

One-half cupful of butter or three-eighths cupful of manufactured shortening, one-half cupful of sweet milk, one cupful of chopped walnuts, one cupful of brown sugar, one egg, two teaspoonfuls of cocoa, one-half teaspoonful of soda, one cupful of seeded raisins, one and one-half cupfuls of flour. Cream sugar and shortening together; add milk, egg, walnuts, raisins and flour, which has been previously mixed and sifted with the soda and cocoa. Drop by spoonfuls on buttered tins and bake in a quick oven.

CANADA'S GREAT WATER POWER

The demand for more hydro power at Niagara raises once again in concrete form the problem of water-power development in Canada. Among the important questions that will engage the attention of governments after the war the utilization of Canada's water resources is one of the most urgent and practical. A comparison shows that the development per capita of hydro-electric power is 487 horse-power per thousand of population in Norway and 210 in Canada. In Manitoba the ratio falls to 111 per thousand of population. In comparison with fuel power the hydro-electric is very cheap. In Canada this is important, where fuel has to be imported. The industrial growth of the Dominion will depend very largely on the cheapness of power. The dependence of the country on the coal mines of the United States will some day prove of serious concern to Canadians, unless steps are taken to utilize available waterpower for heating as well as lighting and driving power. It no longer baffles engineering skill to heat widely-scattered buildings from a central plant. As Professor J. C. McLennan recently pointed out, this is now done at the University of Toronto. The heating of a city or town from central plants is as feasible an engineering proposition as the lighting of a city. Were the United States at war and all exports stopped or railway communication interrupted, the consequences for Canada would be serious. One of the "key" industries of Canada is cheap and uninterrupted power. No great strides can be made by the Dominion in any of her national industries and undertakings until statesmen realize the importance of mobilizing the waterpower of the country and of harnessing it to the manifold needs of the nation.

SOLDIERS WIN ROUND AND ENTER THE O.H.A. FINALS

Petes' Defence Held Back Visitors in the First Period.

Total Score 12-9

Soldiers Will Play in Finals

The 118th Battalion team of London defeated Hamilton in London last night by 4 to 3, and the Hams should win the round, as it is probable that Harold Parker, who did not play last night on account of injuries, will make an extra effort to be in the return game. The winner will meet Kitchener in the semi-finals next week, and the 247th Soldiers will meet the surviving club in the Intermediate O.H.A. finals. Pretty good for the Petes.

The 247th Soldiers produced in large quantities at the rink last night and Oshawa was eliminated from the race. Major O'Flynn's lads are now in the finals and they will be there or thereabouts when the holder of the John Ross Robertson mug is announced next month. The score last night was 7 to 0, making the count on the round stand at 12 to 9. Poor Oshawa! The hopes of the team and their several hundred of supporters ran high when the teams took to the ice for the preliminary work-out, and the Oshawan following bet everything they had that the Petes couldn't turn the trick. And they had plenty of opportunities to cheer in the early stages of the contest, for the visiting team put up a magnificent game, attacking time and time again, right into the mouth of the Peterborough nets, but they could not score. LeGros kicked them out as fast as the marksmen could shoot on his citadel and the local goaler will be given credit for preventing the Oshawans from adding to their lead of four goals gained at home. The visitors had many more shots than the Petes; they wouldn't let the locals get away for an attack on the Childs' end of the engagement, and, altogether it didn't look any too hopeful for the Soldiers. But the break came at last, after nearly seven minutes of hard and well-played hockey. With Pat Flanagan viewing the game from the penalty box, Bob Armstrong took a stroll, got through the mid-ice opposition, and swooping around Riordan, fooled Childs with a shot that landed in the unguarded side of the nets. It was a clever bit of work and the fans made the most of it. Eight minutes of thrills and excitement passed before another goal was scored by the Petes. Adams and Flanagan were penalized but the visitors couldn't get the ruber behind LeGros. Finally, Pat Flanagan and Adams tore up the ice, the former missing the shot but recovering in time to pass out to the waiting Adams, who scored.

Al. Flanagan and Bob Armstrong combined for the third and last tally of the period, Armstrong getting the tally after Childs had blocked the first shot from Flanagan. Throughout this period Oshawa played fast hockey, but it was heart-breaking for them. Shoot as they did, from far and near, the goals refused to come their way and they were fading when the gong sounded. The visitors alone know how well Grover Halpin and Pat Flanagan supported LeGros in defence of the Peterborough nets. The stellar pair stopped and bounced the oncoming visitors in a way that rattled their molars, the result being that the Bradley boys lost much of their steam and they did not perform so well in the second and third periods.

The second period opened with Hall of Oshawa and Al. Flanagan of the Soldiers missing from the ice, the former having become a casualty through an injury to his leg. The six-man hockey did not develop much for the visitors and after four minutes Bob Armstrong shot after a combination play in which Halpin and the forwards took the puck right in on the nets, and the locals were on even terms. It was at this stage that the fans howled the loudest. They got another chance to make a different kind of noise when Hall slashed Armstrong across the feet, bringing the big fellow to the ice and almost starting a riot. Referee Bernhardt acted promptly and the unruly Hall was hurried to the coop for a protracted stay.

Adams scored the fifth goal on a combination play with Armstrong and Evans, and Pat Flanagan put his team two goals ahead on a shot from a play down the ice with Evans.

Jack Adams tallied the seventh and last goal of the game, 45 seconds after the third period started. Accepting a pass from Armstrong outside the Oshawa defence, the local left winger made the rest of the journey alone and landed the disc behind Childs. With this period well advanced, Armstrong broke his skate but remained on the ice, and crippled though he was, the tall lad was always threateneing the visitors' nets.

AND THIS IS CALLED A GAME

SIMULTANEOUS CHESS IS ENOUGH TO BEWILDER MOST PEOPLE.

Some chess sharp has figured that there are 318,979,564 ways of playing the first four moves on each side of the board. When you consider the infinite variety of combinations involved in a masterly game of chess, you may continue to sneer at that game as a sport, but you are forced to admit that a chess master must have considerably more brain power than a southpaw pitcher, for instance. When Frank J. Marshall played 129 games simultaneously in Philadelphia, he set up a new record. Marshall's opponents were all good players, yet Marshall won 97 of his games, losing only nine, the remaining 23 being drawn. Dr. Lasker, Capablanca, Bernstein, and other chess masters have performed wonderful feats in playing simultaneous games, but Marshall surpassed them all. Harry N. Pillsbury used to perform seeming miracles by playing many games simultaneously without seeing the boards. In Kansas City Pillsbury played twelve games of chess and three games of checkers simultaneously, sitting with his back to the boards. Nonchalantly smoking a big cigar, he heard the moves of the players on the fifteen boards called out to him, and would immediately call back the name of his own piece and where it was to be moved. Although pitted against men of unusual ability, he won every game! To do this he had to be able to keep in his mind a mental picture of each board, and just where each of 32 chessmen on each board was placed, and to direct the moving of his own men without a moment's hesitation, yet taking into consideration all of the men of his opponents, and the multitudinous possibilities of their play. Doesn't it give you a headache, just to think of it?

'TWAS "VOCAL" INTERFERENCE

WHY QUAINT BILL BYRON PUT OUT TORONTO BATTER.

The year prior to joining the National League staff, the famous umpire, Bill "Lord" Byron, worked on the International League. Joe Kelley was managing the Toronto club. In the game in question, Toronto was playing Rochester at Toronto. A foul fly was hit in the direction of first base. The Rochester first baseman pursued it. The Toronto player coaching at first base kept pace with the fielder in the race after the ball, and kept yelling that he would make the catch. Finally the fielder decided to let the coacher catch the ball. It fell to the ground untouched.

"The batter is out," shouted Umpire Byron. Immediately Manager Kelley raced from the bench to learn the reason, since the ball had not been caught.

"The batter is out because of the coacher's interference," was Byron's explanation.

"What kind of interference?" demanded Kelley.

"Vocal, Joe, vocal!" snapped Byron, and that ended the argument.

DELANEY AND TAIT WIN GAMES IN THIRD ROUND

Alex. Kay's Rink Lose to Cobourg by 5 Shots.

Surprises of all kinds greeted curlers and others interested in the games at the open bonspiel at the curling rink yesterday. From the time that the first stone was played until late last night the different contests were the centre of the critical eye of friends of both sexes of the curlers.

The arrangements made by the committee in charge were perfection and no more happy bunch of visitors to the city were ever equal to the visiting curlers yesterday. Lunch was served on the third floor by T. Hooper & Son and when each draw was called the opposing rinks were always waiting for the starting signal.

The surprise of the contests yesterday was the defeat of Skip J. D. Flavelle of Lindsay, who fell in both opening games, first to Skip Smith of Campbellford and then to Skip Strickland of Lakefield in the first round of the consolation.

AT THE TEE

Only two Peterborough rinks are left in the third round, Skips McDermid and Campbell, and they are drawn against each other in the 2.30 draw.

All eyes are on Skip Smith, Campbellford. Someone says he carries the moonlit leg of a rabbit.

Oshawa was up four shots at the final end against Campbellford yesterday, when the Trent Valley town got five and won the contest. Just Skip Tait's luck.

It is expected that the finals will be reached this evening and will likely be played first thing tomorrow morning.

Capt. Bottum of Bobcaygeon met many old friends at the 'spiel.

Every one of the visitors had a good word to say about the Peterborough ice. Angus had it in good shape.

George Benor swears that the No 7 ice is his hoodoo. He never won a game on it.

Only two defaults in the competition so far, and these were unavoidable ones by local rinks.

LOCAL TALENT SCORE BIG HIT BEFORE FOOTLIGHTS

The Actors.

Mr. J. G. Campazzie, as Dave Denny, acted to perfection the part of the Virginian countryman whose anatomy is saturated with weariness and who has not a single care in the world except the love affair in which the Southerner is invariably involved. When that affair went wrong and the object of his affections was led astray by another, Dave woke up, and, with a pistol in his pocket and vengeance in his heart, sets out to take the life of his rival. He is saved from homicide only by the influence of a friend.

Mr. G. R. Langley, the promoter, was a fine illustration of the crafty financier who recognizes no power but that of money and who hesitates at nothing either in love or finance to attain his ends.

Miss Seabourne Hamilton, as Barbara Byrd, was the artless but ambitious country girl led astray by the polished and unprincipled New Yorker. The difficult part was well taken, especially in the final scene when she suddenly appears after having been given up for dead.

Mr. D. L. McLaren took the part of Dr. Snicker, the amorous and mercenary clergyman. The pastor on the stage is never taken seriously, but is always made to appear as more or less of a joke. He can never essay to make love behind the footlights without at the same time making a ninny of himself. This was what the role of Dr. Snicker called for, and he filled the part with lifelike fidelity.

Mrs. W. Reg. Scadding admirably filled the part of the wealthy widow, high in society and lax in her methods of handling funds that were committed to her trust. She is saved from disgrace by the very man whom she attempted to ruin. Mrs. Anderson was an excellent subject for the advances of the fat-witted parson with the itching palms.

Miss Mable Paterson as Pansy Parr was the wit of the performance, and was a pleasing combination of idle society vaporings and hard-headed common sense which saved her friends from many an awkward situation.

Mrs. J. F. Birnie as Aline Anderson carried her part well. She was the misguided daughter of an ambitious society mother and was willing to sacrifice herself in order to spare that mother the fate of the embezzler.

Mr. NeVille, the only professional in the company, appeared as Brent Breckenridge, was perfect in every phase of his role and developed wonderfully from the easy countryman to the wealthy mine owner and man of the world.

Miss Florence Scott as Anora and Miss Isabel Morphet at Billie excelled in the various musical numbers, the former making a hit in her rendition of "Irish Eyes."

The Musical Program.

Mr. Campazzie also distinguished himself as a soloist, rendering "Virginia Sunshine" in excellent voice. The following young ladies, in handsome and appropriate costumes, composed the chorus, and their rendition and excellent drill was one of the most pleasing features of the entertainment: Misses Esmeo Aylmer, Helen McLaren, Helen Stapleton Geraldine Hooper, Nora Hatton, Bessie Mather, Marjorie Hatton, Georgie Stevenson, Agnes Carmichael, Marjorie Gladman, Irene Scott, Kathleen Dunsford, Edith Kerr, Helen Rush, Margaret Eastwood, Phyllis Young, Celia Dunsford, Hilda Cubitt, Marion Harstone, Margaret Stevenson, Maysie Armstrong, Phyllis Dawson Margaret Neill, Jessie Cressman Vera Knox, Gretta Rountree, Maida Conner.

When recalled after their rendition of "Sweetheart Time," the chorus introduced a novel feature by whistling the tune.

A Recruiting Speech.

Between the first and second acts Mr. Joseph Wearing introduced Sgt.-Major Douglas, who made an excellent five-minute recruiting speech.

The score of the hockey game was announced from the stag.

SOCIAL AND PERSONAL

WINN—O'NEILL

A quiet wedding was solemnized at St. Mary's Church this morning at 7 o'clock, when Miss Martha Winn, of Emily, was united in marriage to Mr. Ambrose O'Neill, of Lindsay. Nuptial Mass was celebrated by Monsignor Casey, who also performed the ceremony.

The bride, who was becomingly gowned in blue, with white hat, was assisted as bridesmaid by Miss Mary Hogan of Lindsay, who was similarly gowned. The groomsman was Mr. Albert O'Neill, of Emily.

The bride was the recipient of a number of beautiful presents. The groom's gift to the bride was a sunburst of pearls, to the bridesmaid a gold brooch, and to the groomsman a pair of gold cuff links.

Mr. and Mrs. O'Neill will reside in Lindsay, where their friends will wish them many years of happy wedded life.—Lindsay Post.

Mr. L. Walker of Toronto spent the week-end visiting his sister, Mrs. J. E. Firth.

Mr. Sandy Lockington, Port Hope, was here for the Oshawa Peterborough hockey match last night.

Mr. Chas. Nixon of Port Hope attended the funeral of his nephew, the late C. R. Nixon this afternoon.

Miss Electa Strong of Toronto is the guest of Mrs. J. M. Fanning.

Mrs. T. F. Matthews is visiting in Toronto.

Mrs. E. L. Davis went to Toronto yesterday afternoon.

Mr. Matt Mulhearn, who is in the city taking part in the curling bonspiel, is a guest at the home of his cousin, Mrs. A. H. Lehane.

Miss Pearl Eastwood, who had been visiting her parents here, returned to Toronto yesterday afternoon.

Mrs. Andrew Patterson is visiting in Toronto.

The Peter Robinson Chapter, I. O. D. E., wish to extend their sincere appreciation to all the friends of the Chapter who have given so generously of their talents and time in the production of The Turning Point, especially those members of the cast who are not also chapter members, who have devoted their entire leisure towards making it a successful play. They would also like to express their gratitude to all those who made the play a financial success by the free disposal of practice rooms, by their kind assistance in the selling of tickets and their attendance last night.

Show Your Practical Sympathy with Slave-Raided Belgium

If ever Belgium needed sympathy—OUR sympathy—she needs it now! To the ravages of fire, sword and a savage, brutish soldiery, Germany has added deliberate, cold-blooded slave-raiding.

Over 100,000 Belgian workmen have already been snatched from their homes and taken into slavery in unknown places. The mothers, wives and children who beg for their release are driven back by the Huns in utter despair. Neutral protests have failed to change Germany's inhuman purpose, nor can the Allies free Belgian manhood until the Teutons are crushed.

But we can save the women and children through the neutral Belgian Relief Commission, which is feeding three million of them. We can express our indignation, and our sympathy with our Ally's wrongs, in a practical way, by giving more liberally than ever to the Belgian Relief Fund.

Make this a personal matter! Decide what you can afford to give, and send your subscriptions weekly, monthly or in one lump sum to Local or Provincial Committees, or

JUDGMENT IS RESERVED IN BETTING CASE

MR. G. N. GORDON ARGUES THAT NO OFFENCE WAS COMMITTED.

Police Magistrate Dumble reserved judgment this morning in the case of Yootes Bros., who were charged with conducting a common betting house. The evidence taken yesterday was all that was submitted.

Mr. G. N. Gordon for the defendants argued that no one in the city ever thought of Yotes Bros' store as a common betting house any more than they did of any office or store in Peterborough. There was no law in Canada against individuals betting but there was a law against running a common betting house, and that required a continuation of the offence and not one particular occasion. He also claimed that the charge was laid under a section which did not provide an offence.

Backers of Peterborough Team

Crown Attorney Hatton contended that the evidence of Thompson of Oshawa made it quite clear that Yootes Bros. would back Peterborough's team and also that the receipt for the money signed by Dudley was sufficient evidence to warrant a conviction.

The magistrate and counsel had some argument over the application or non-application of the section under which the information was laid, to the case. A number of authorities were cited for the court's consideration.

NICKEL AGITATORS ARE SHOWN UP BY MR. McCRAE

Whole Matter is Plot Against Company and Object was to Exploit mining Lands

TORONTO, Feb. 22—With a final struggle over the nickel issue following a six-hour debate in which Hartley Dewart, K.C., and Charles McCrae, of Sudbury, were the chief performers, the debate on the speech from the Throne was wound up last night. The final day was entirely different to preceding days. Instead of the rambling discussion that featured the mid-stage of the debate, the argument became warm and pointed, the Liberal member winding up with an amendment calling for the refining in Ontario of all nickel mined in the province. His amendment was not voted upon for the simple reason that Mr. McCrae, in winding up his address, nullified it by another amendment endorsing the announcement of the Government that legislation would be brought in this session based upon the report submitted to the House by the Nickel Commission. Mr McCrae's amendment was carried by a vote of 59 to 26.

There were two features to the debate. The Sudbury member gave the House some hitherto unknown facts about the origin of the "nickel campaign." He directly charged that the agitation against the International Nickel Company and the demand for the prohibition of export originated in an organized effort on the part of men who were interested in undeveloped nickel lands to discredit the International Nickel Company and destroy its business by playing upon patriotism. Mr. McCrae backed his charge up by naming a president of the Sudbury Board of Trade as one who plotted to this end, but whose plotting was shown up before his own fellow-citizens and who was convicted of misrepresentations to his fellow-members of the Board of Trade and to the British Board of Trade, to whom he sent a letter, charging the Canada Copper Company with sending nickel to Germany, via South America. Mr. McCrae was also able to call to his assistance an editorial in the Globe, frankly speaking of an attempt made to enlist its support in a plot to discredit the Nickel Company under the cloak of patriotism.

DOUPE HOUSE SALE APPEARS REGULAR

Letter in Review Yesterday Was Misleading With Regard to Price—Property Was Advertised for Over Three Months.

The letter published yesterday with reference to the sale of the Doupe residence, the home of the family of Pte. Doupe, now fighting in France, appears to have been misleading. Pte. Doupe had no interest in the property. It belonged entirely to his wife. When Mrs. Doupe died, leaving four children, the executors decided that it would cost over $1,000 to repair the building and finally made up their minds to sell it. It has been advertised for the past three months or more in The Review, the price asked for it being $2,600.

The writer of the letter in yesterday's paper says he heard that the selling price was $1,700. That is only a rumor. No one outside the parties directly interested knows what the price really was and these parties seem to regard the matter as none of the business of the general public.

The sale was regular in every way, an ordinary business transaction. There was a mortgage on the property, the interest was in arrears and the taxes had not been paid since 1914. The executors had no alternative but to dispose of the place.

HOSE WAS TESTED

FIRE COMMITTEE INSPECT FIRE STATION.

Members of the fire committee visited the fire station yesterday afternoon when 1200 feet of Canadian Consolidated Co.'s hose was tested at the guaranteed pressure of 400 lbs., and was found satisfactory.

PREMIER IMPRESSED BY TRIP ACROSS ATLANTIC

Wonderful Achievement of British Sea Forces.

LONDON, Feb. 22.Sir Robert Borden, the Canadian Premier, who arrived in London today, told his interviewers that his voyage was uneventful except for the taking of the necessary precautions. The association was organized only a year ago with Mr. R. B. Rogers as president. Aldermen Weir and Smith are in accord with the objects in view and their active support as civic representatives is relied on.

FAMILIES OF SOLDIERS OVERSEAS ARE BURNED OUT OF THEIR HOMES

To be burned out of their home in Lakefield last evening was the misfortune of Mrs. Garret and Mrs. Barr, the wives of two soldiers who are overseas with the 109th (Lindsay) Battalion. Two small children who were in a bed room where the fire originated were saved from injuries, due to prompt action taken by the women.

The house, of frame construction, was totally destroyed. The summer kitchen and shed were saved. The origin of the blaze is unknown. Mrs. S. Nicholls was the owner of the property and carried some insurance.

Mr. J. W. Stuart, city, saw the fire as he came into Lakefield last night after a business trip in Buckhorn.

PETERBOROUGH, WEDNESDAY, FEB. 21, 1917

THE SLIPPERY PLACES.

A MAN IN BRANTFORD fell on an icy pavement, breaking his arm, and was awarded damages by the county judge, who tried the action without a jury. The city carried the case to a higher court, but the finding of the lower court was sustained. Justice Meredith ruled that the fact that at the time when the plaintiff sustained the injury weather conditions had made all walks slippery and more or less dangerous could not relieve the defendants of responsibility.

A resident of this city slipped on an icy sidewalk the other day and broke his arm. An action for damages against the city is always costly, as a recent case has shown. The amount expended in defending a suit or in satisfying a judgment will go a long way toward keeping the walks in a safe condition. They are so slippery now that the wary pedestrian will not negotiate one of the hills without taking to the middle of the road. Foot passengers are falling everywhere, and a man or woman who walks out in the centre of the street to find a safe footing is simply exposing his or her person to a new risk, that of colliding with vehicles.

The sand man got out on the job yesterday, but the amount of territory covered was not sufficient to materially reduce the danger. Last night's snow storm made conditions worse than ever.

MILITARY BANDS IN ENGLAND.

F. GRAY, who went overseas with the 59th Battalion Band, writes to his uncle, Mr. Bert Gray, that all the physically fit men in that organization are being taken for trench duty and their places in the band filled by men over age or otherwise disqualified for the front. The number of bandsmen, too, is being reduced from 38 to 23. Mr. Gray writes that soldiers, rather than musicians, are required. It is no longer a matter of choice with the bandsmen if it ever was whether they go to the trenches or back to Canada. Every man able to fight is required to do so. Not every band, either, has the "pull" required to secure an easy berth for the members.

If the same method was followed by recruiting officers with regard to the various bands now in Canada, criticism would be effectively silenced and one great obstacle in the way of enlisting removed.

AUTO LICENSE FEES.

WHEN THE OFFICIAL appointed by the Government for the purpose issues a license to the owner of an auto he is allowed twenty-five cents for his trouble, whether the price of the tag is $10 or $25. All of the money so collected, less the nominal fee, is sent to Toronto and placed in the provincial strong box.

The general use into which automobiles are coming has conduced the necessity for better highways, even if the ordinary horse-power traffic is left out of the reckoning altogether. One would naturally think that the tax raised from the sale of licenses should be devoted to keeping up the highways over which the cars run. A part of it is, the Government agreeing to pay forty per cent. of the expense of road building done under provincial espionage, the balance of the cost to be borne by the urban and rural municipalities. The division of the money is not fair. The various municipalities should license the cars owned within their boundaries and keep the entire receipts as a road fund. The municipalities, besides building roads, are charged with the duty of seeing that the law with regard to the running of automobiles is duly observed.

Every taxpayer in the community is interested in this matter, and auto owners themselves should co-operate in an effort to have the law changed.

THE HIGH COST OF INVESTIGATIONS.

MANITOBA LEGISLATORS waxed fat on graft until the people woke up to the fact that they were being robbed in broad daylight and turned the offenders out of office. Then the always available Royal Commission was set in motion. One man of the bunch under suspicion has been sent to the penitentiary. Any ordinary court of law could have accomplished as much with comparatively less expense to the country. But the Royal Commission has so far cost the province over four hundred thousand dollars in fees alone. Sitting as a judge, an office to which he was appointed, the commissioner would draw nothing but his usual salary. When the form of procedure is changed, and he presides as a Royal Commissioner, he gets $100 a day over and above his compensation as a judge. The lawyers are paid in proportion.

Of what avail is it if any province turns a gang of grafters out of office if they are to be bled white by another class to whom authority has been delegated?

A SCHISM IN THE ALLIANCE.

THE SOCIAL SERVICE COUNCIL of Manitoba has refused to follow the lead of the Dominion Alliance in dealing with the Dominion temperance question. The Alliance proposes to make a move on Parliament for a Dominion-wide temperance enactment, and the Manitoba auxiliary holds that such a step would be useless and that Parliament has already gone as far as the Constitution permits.

At the last session of the Federal House an Act was passed enabling any province desiring to do so to adopt legislation making the possession and use of intoxicating liquor illegal in that province. None of the dry provinces have so far availed themselves of this enabling Act. Let any of them do so, and it will put a stop to liquor advertisements or the circulation of literature boosting any variety of wet goods. It is idle to ask the Ontario Legislature to pass such a law. No dealer will advertise in any territory that does not afford a market for his wares. The remedy suggested by the temperance people is the wrong one. Make Ontario bone dry, and the liquor advertisements and circulras wil disappear automatically. It is not necessary to interfere in any way with the liberty of the press.

Temperance organizations should endeavor to avoid the suspicion that they are in any sense political machines. They can hardly hope to do so if they permit themselves to be used as the tools of designing politicians in an attempt to embarrass or arouse class prejudice against the Government.

AN AMERICAN TRIBUTE.

JUDGE WILLIAM McADOO of New York, addressing the Canadian Club at Montreal, recently said:

> "My country has marvelled at the miraculous feat of Canada, a country with a population little exceeding that of the State of New York, in recruiting, training and transporting safely to Europe more than 400,000 men. For that we take off our hats to Canada as a great, virile nation."

While Grit newspapers are engaged in the mean game of deprecating what this country has done and making light of the almost superhuman energy displayed by the Government since the war broke out, disinterested and competent authorities like Judge McAdoo, Theodore Roosevelt, ex-President Taft, Nicholas Murray Butler, James M. Beck and a host of othess, are speaking in trems of profound admiration of what Canada has done in the cause of democracy and civilization.

The closing sentence of Judge McAdoo's speech at Montreal was as follows: "If the supreme test ever comes to us, under the Providence of God, I sincerely hope that we shall make as good an exhibit as the people of the Dominion."

To do as well as Canada has done, it would be necessary for the United States to raise, train and equip for service an army of five million men in a little over two years.

NOTES AND COMMENT.

NO SYSTEM of thrift is rational if it calls for starving or improperly clothing the body.

• • • •

IF THERE IS ONE constructive and progressive statesman in Canada, that man is Sir William Hearst.

• • • •

SILENCE may be golden, but the speeches in the Legislature appear to be generally nickel plated.

• • • •

THERE MAY NOT BE for lieutenants vacancies enough to go round, but there is still plenty of room for privates.

• • • •

SIR WILLIAM PRICE of Quebec, as a colonel, took a battalion to Europe, and in order to get into action has reverted.

• • • •

IF IT IS ONLY the wicked who stand in slippery places, then a large proportion of the pedestrians these days belong in the ranks of the righteous.

• • • •

THE MANAGERS of the food supply in Germany will no doubt insist upon a strict observance of Lent and welcome the forty days of self-denial as a relief.

• • • •

LITTLE WONDER the mind of Hartley Dewart runs on aliances with the liquor party. He owes his membership in the Legislature to such a combination.

• • • •

THE GREAT TROUBLE with the Opposition in the Legislature is that they appear unable to discern the difference between nickel and the Ontario Temperance Act.

• • • •

IT IS NO MORE unreasonable to ask an officer to give up his pay and rank by reverting than it is to expect a man in civil life to abandon a good position and place in society to enter the service.

OPINIONS OF OTHER EDITORS.

No Change of Heart.

(Woodstock Sentinel-Review.)

George Viereck, publisher of the Fatherland, announces that his paper has dropped its name and will be hereafter known as the New World. The Fatherland championed the cause of Germany, even against the United States, as long as it was safe to do so. The change of name is not necessarily an evidence of a change of heart.

Where Style Doesn't Count.

(London Chronicle.)

A little anecdote illustrating the spirit of France is told by a war correspondent. Two French Poilus were talking in a front trench. "The seat of my trousers is torn," remarked a Poilu. "I'm quite unpresentable." "Oh," said another, "that makes no difference among friends, and your enemies will never see it."

St. Valentine, His Day.

(Judge.)

February, though the briefest of months, perpetuates the fame of three immortals—Washington, who freed his country; Lincoln, who freed the slaves; and St. Valentine, who freed———. No, he didn't free anybody. His mission is (or was) to bind together "two souls with but a single thought, two hearts that beat as one."—said hearts being still young enough and spry enough to beat it before matrimony ensues.

Will Keep Till After War.

(Brantford Expositor.)

W. M. German, M.P. for Welland, has introduced in the House of Commons a bill to provide for an elective Senate, the term of office being seven years. Whatever the merits of the bill may be, there is little chance of its being dealt with at this time. Any jobs of tinkering with the Canadian Constitution must stand until after the war.

Lloyd George's French.

(London Weekly Dispatch.)

French was the language used at the various conferences where there were interpreters in attendance, though Mr. Lloyd George can get on very comfortably with easy conversational French. "A week or two's practice," said a colleague of his, "and the Premier would be as apt with his French as with his Welsh."

Not Sitting Still.

(Philadelphia Ledger.)

That commercial bodies in Great Britain are not sitting still and twiddling their thumbs till the war is over is shown by the activities of the Bradford chamber of commerce, which is preparing a 600-page illustrated year book in English, French, Russian, Spanish, with special attention to the Russian trade. And we are fooling ourselves into thinking that we're going after foreign business. We have some things to learn yet.

CUTTING OUT THE SLANG

"Henry, you will have to be more careful of the language that you use around the house," said Mrs. Lee as she smoothed out the tablecloth in their Hunter Street flat. "I'm getting a very bad habit from you—I think only in terms of slang, and it's all your fault."

"Then you'd like me to cut it out is that it?" drawled her husband.

"Cut it out is right," came the quick rejoinder. 'What do you think I said yesterday when the minister's wife was calling and sitting there just as polite as you please?"

"Search me!"

"Well, we were talking about Nellie and how shiftless she has been getting of late, and I told Mrs. Coover we had decided to fill Nellie's mitt with the spondulix we owed her and then put the skids under her."

"And did she have a comeback?"

"Mrs. Coover just turned red and began to talk of the work they're doing at the mission and of how dreadfully some people live, and what terrible language the boys on the street use. 'We ought to keep our English pure and undefiled,' she said and looked straight at me with her sharp black eyes.

"And you?"

"I spoke right up and said: 'Mr. Lee always declares that it's these street gangs that put our English on the hummer for fair, and I'm strong for whatever Henry says.'

"By that time I could see the good lady fairly gasp. She looked around for something else to talk about. She lamped my poor little ornery geraniunms and gave them the once over. She could see they had been frostbitten. 'What a terible winter we have had for flowers,' she said. 'The cold nights must have been severe on your plants.'

"'Oh, yes,' I piped up. 'They put my geraniums quite on the blink—I mean—the decline, you understand. In fact, it nearly overcomes me to talk about them, for my heart was set on them, and to think what pippins they are now!'

"By the time I had finished I thought that the poor woman would collapse. Just as she was leaving she sair, 'I suppose you know that the language society meets tomorrow afternoon with Mrs. Perkins, and I'm sure you will agree with me that our work should begin at home.' I was so afraid of opening my mouth and putting my foot in it that I didn't chirp when I showed her to the door. Now then, Henry, what I want is your help and assistance in cutting out the slang from this day forth forever more."

"Im with you, kiddo," chimed in her husband.

"Oh, Henry, my love, you're a bird. Slip her there!"

ANECDOTES OF THE FAMOUS

All that is worst in Billy Sunday's manners comes to the surface when he encounters lack of support in his work or criticism of himself. Meeting on one occasion with a poor response to a call for volunteers in a fight on behalf of prohibition, he promptly called those who held back "you damnable, dirty, rotten, filthy blasphemers who want to keep the city a hell-hole."

That is Billy Sunday—vulgar, ill-mannered, and bigoted; and egoist right through his whole make-up; a petty tyrant in public — often; preacher of a theology now regarded as old-fashioned and crude; an unblushing money-maker. All these if you will, but also a man who undoubtedly has exercised a profoundly good influence on tens of thousands of men and women.

His critics say that he has disgusted with religion more people than he has converted, and this also may be true. But his strenuous earnestness, his uncompromising fight against admitted evils, his sense of humor, his fearlessnes, have made him a national figure.

The Charlie Chaplin of the pulpit; yes—and the Barnum of the evangelical world a showman who knows his business from A to Z. His recent campaign in Boston was remarkable in every respect, though he failed in a big attempt to convert "the Hub" to prohibition.

The collections at Boston amounted to fifty five thousand dollars, and 28,000 Bostonians "hit the trail" for the penitent form.

Sunday is now preparing to attack New York City for the first time, and declares he will "clean it up." John D. Rockefeller, jr., is his financial backer. Within six miles of the heart of the American metropolis a temporary structure is being erected to hold 20,000 people. Thousands of helpers will canvass the city literally block by block, and the beating of the big drum will be heard from Yonkers to Staten Island. New Yorkers love the sensational, and Billy Sunday will give it them in unlimited quantities. Hiss success—as a showman at any rate—is assured.

We are getting too polite these days. Drunkards are called dipsomaniacs, but they'll go to hell just the same.

When the time for the judgment of God comes you've all got to tell Him what you have been doing down here. He's going to ask you if you've been going to the leg shows where the women don't wear enough to make a pair of leggings for a humming bird.

As so the doctrine of future probation. I say if a man doesn't settle his future before the undertaker pumps the embalming fluid into him, then he's a goner.

You beetle-browed, peanut-brained bloated gink, with a breath that will kill a fly at thirty yards, remember that Christianity and red whiskey never stay in the same skin together.

I came near beating up the husband of a woman who was refused permission to come to my tabernacle. "Shall I divorce him for his brutality?" she asked. "No, sister," I said, "you have married him. That's where you dropped your candy."

Old Herod was all soused up one night, and had a bunch of high rollers to come up to the Temple. Out came that God-forsaken, licentious, dancing woman Salome, and began to wriggle and hootchy-kootchy around. I can see that old whiskey-soaked scoundrel laugh and say :"Sis you're a peach. You can have anything in my kingdom your litle heart desires."

She spun around on her toe like this (here the preacher gave a fantastic imitation of a toe dancer) and spread her foot up to a quarter to six. When Salome demanded the head of John the Baptist, Herod did not want to do it, but she had given him a solar-plexus blow. He had to make good for his oath's sake.

TEXTS FOR REFORMERS.

"Although I have learned that in trying to reform reformers I am merely a reformer myself," said the philosopher, as he pegged at the sole of a shoe, "the temptations of the old vice are sometimes almost irresistible. No, I sha'n't deliver a lecture, but the recent naive assertion of a dear lady to the effect that she approves of excessively short skirts, but thinks cigarette smoking a sin, moves me to quote. You remember the people alluded to in 'Hudibras' who 'Compound for sins they are inclined to by damning those they have no mind to.' Now, I agree with the lady as to the short skirts, and I detest cigarettes, but I think it perfectly all right for those who enjoy cigarettes to smoke them. That shows my liberal spirit. When I was a reformer I was ready to burn at the stake any person whose vices were not to my own opinion. Oh, yes, another of the texts that saved me from reform is from Macaulay's history if England. He says: 'The puritan hated bear-hunting, not because it gave pain to the bear, but because it gave pleasure to the spectators.' All reformers should read that text and analyze their motives before going into action. It should particularly appeal to moving picture censors."

POINTED PARAGRAPHS.

Love is a disease that sometimes even marriage will nit cure.

Cupid makes a mistake when he grafts a bud on an old scrub.

He is a man of strong will power who never talks about the weather.

Our mistakes of yesterday are mainly responsible for our worries of today.

Many a man's idea of comfortable clothing is the kind his wife won't let him wear.

When a drunken man doesn't think he is exceptionally wise, he is beyond the thinking stage.

There would be fewer old bachelors if single men were not allowed to associate with married men.

Canadian Thrift

"The need for national saving" was the text used by Canada's minister of finance the other day in speaking before the Toronto board of trade. Sir Thomas White said that from this time to the end of the war the Dominion's share of the burden is going to become increasingly heavy.

What Canada has accomplished in the two and a half years of war is impressive. Before the war the Dominion was buying from outside about $300,000,000 a year more than she was selling beyond her borders. Interest on what had been borrowed abroad amounted to nearly $175,000,000 a year, and in order to pay this interest more money was being borrowed in England and in the United States.

The war changed all this. Canada's surplus of exports over imports has risen to a point where it more than meets the interest charges on borrowings.

In 1915 the people of Canada added over $10,000,000 to their bank deposits, and in 1916 twice as much more. They have bought some $200,000,000 of domestic loans in the last two years and have raised some $250,000,000 to help England in fighting the war.

Wise saving out of ample earnings has been the explanation of this remarkable record. Remember that Canada's population is under 8,000,000, and you will appreciate the size of the accomplishment.

But the Dominion's real test, according to Sir Thomas White, is ahead. He says:

"If every citizen of Canada will save to the utmost of his power in these days of high world prices for our produce and enormous munitions expenditures at home, I believe we will be stronger financially when the war is over than before it commenced."

EDITOR'S MAIL

The Review has received a communication, with a request for publication, discussing the merits of a case which will come up before Magistrate Dumble tomorrow and in which a local resident is charged with obtaining goods under false pretences. As this matter is before the courts it has been decided to keep the letter out of print for ethical and legal reasons. If the case is as our correspondent states, the defendant will be given an opportunity to tell his story in court and that is the proper place in which to make the statements contained in the letter.—Ed. "I've bought a bulldog," said Parsniff to his friend Lessup, "and I want a motto to put over his kennel. Can you think of something?"

"Why not use a dentist's sign, 'Teeth inserted here'?" suggested Lessup.

"Harry," asked the teacher of a bright-faced lad, "can you tell me who George Washington was?"

"Yes, ma'am," was the quick reply; "he was the first President of America."

"Quite right," replied the teacher. "And can you tell us what he was remarkable for?"

"Yes, ma'am," replied the youngster. "He was remarkable because he told the truth!"

"You say you have spent hours over a single line?"

"Yes; and sometimes days."

"Then you're a poet?"

"No; I'm an angler."

Magistrate—I am surprised to find such criminality in one so young. Only 14, and yet you are caught picking pockets!"

Prisoner—It were all your own fault.

"Mine?"

"Yus. If you hadn't given father three months I wouldn't have had to work for mother."

The other morning a mother of seven was alarmed at hearing her youngest child screaming.

Rushing up to the bedroom to ascertain the cause, she observed her four-year-old boy prodding at his little sister's arm with an old pocket-knife.

"Whatever are you doing, Willie?" shouted the frantic mother.

"I am waxinating Eva," replied the youngster proudly.

BEFORE ADAM

By JACK LONDON

Copyright, 1907, by the MacMillan company.

The mountains were bleak and inhospitable, and three times that afternoon we tried to regain the woods. But the Tree People were lying in wait, and they drove us back. Lop Ear and I slept that night in a dwarf tree, no larger than a bush. Here was no security, and we would have been easy prey for any hunting animal that chanced along.

In the morning, what of our new gained respect for the Tree People, we faced into the mountains. That we had no definite plan or even idea I am confident. We were merely driven on by the danger we had escaped. Of our wanderings through the mountains I have only misty memories. We were in that bleak region many days, and we suffered much, especially from fear, it was all so new and strange; also we suffered from the cold and later from hunger.

It was a desolate land of rocks and foaming streams and clattering cataracts. We climbed and descended mighty canyons and gorges, and ever from every view point there spread out before us in all directions, range upon range, the unceasing mountains. We slept at night in holes and crevices, and on one cold night we perched on top a slender pinnacle of rock that was almost like a tree.

And then, at last, one hot midday, dizzy with hunger, we gained the divide. From this high backbone of earth, to the north, across the diminishing, down falling ranges, we caught a glimpse of a far lake. The sun shone upon it, and about it were open, level grass lands, while to the eastward we saw the dark line of a wide stretching forest.

We were two days in gaining the lake, and we were weak with hunger, but on its shore, sleeping snugly in a thicket, we found a part grown calf. It gave us much trouble, for we knew no other way to kill than with our hands. When we had gorged our fill we carried the remainder of the meat to the eastward forest and hid it in a tree. We never returned to that tree, for the shore of the stream that drained Far lake was packed thick with salmon that had come up from the sea to spawn.

Westward from the lake stretched the grass lands, and here were multitudes of bison and wild cattle. Also were there many packs of wild dogs, and, as there were no trees, it was not a safe place for us. We followed north along the stream for days, then, and for what reason I do not know, we abruptly left the stream and swung to the east and then to the southeast, through a great forest. I shall not bore you with our journey. I but indicate it to show how we finally arrived at the Fire People's country.

We came out upon the river, but we did not know it for our river. We had been lost so long that we had come to accept the condition of being lost as habitual. As I look back I see clearly how our lives and destinies are shaped by the merest chance. We did not know it was our river. There was no way of telling, and if we had never crossed it we would most probably have never returned to the horde, and I, the modern, the thousand centuries yet to be born, would never have been born.

And yet Lop Ear and I wanted greatly to return. We had experienced homesickness on our journey, the yearning for our own kind and land, and often had I had recollections of the Swift One, the young female who made soft sounds, whom it was good to be with and who lived by herself, nobody knew where. My recollections of her were accompanied by sensations of hunger, and these I felt when I was not hungry and when I had just eaten.

But to come back to the river. Food was plentiful, principally berries and succulent roots, and on the river bank we played and lingered for days. And then the idea came to Lop Ear. It was a visible process, the coming of the idea. I saw it. The expression in his eyes became plaintive and querulous, and he was greatly perturbed. Then his eyes went muddy, as if he had lost his grip on the inchoate thought. This was followed by the plaintive, querulous expression as the idea persisted and he clutched it anew. He looked at me and at the river and the far shore. He tried to speak, but had no sounds with which to express the idea. The result was a gibberish that made me laugh. This angered him, and he grabbed me suddenly and threw me on my back. Of course we fought, and in the end I chased him up a tree, where he secured a long branch and poked me every time I tried to get at him.

And the idea had gone glimmering. I did not know, and he had forgotten. But the next morning it awoke in him again. Perhaps it was the homing instinct in him asserting itself that made the idea persist. At any rate it was there and clearer than before. He led me down to the water, where a log had grounded in the eddy. I thought he was minded to play, as we had played in the mouth of the slough. Nor did I change my mind as I watched him tow up a second log from farther down the shore.

CHAPTER X.

IT was not until we were on the logs, side by side and holding them together, and had paddled out into the current that I learned his intention. He paused to point at the far shore and resumed his paddling, at the same time uttering loud and encouraging cries. I understood, and we paddled energetically. The swift current caught us, flung us toward the south shore, but before we could make a landing flung us back toward the north shore.

Here arose dissension. Seeing the north shore so near I began to paddle for it. Lop Ear tried to paddle for the south shore. The logs swung around in circles and we got nowhere, and all the time the forest was flashing past as we drifted down the stream. We could not fight. We knew better than to let go the grips of hands and feet that held the logs together. But we chattered and abused each other with our tongues until the current flung us toward the south bank again. That was now the nearest goal, and together and amicably we paddled for it. We landed in an eddy and climbed directly into the trees to reconnoiter.

It was not until the night of our first day on the south bank of the river that we discovered the Fire People. What must have been a band of wandering hunters went into camp not far from the tree in which Lop Ear and I had elected to roost for the night. The voices of the Fire People at first alarmed us, but later, when darkness had come, we were attracted by the fire. We crept cautiously and silently from tree to tree till we got a good view of the scene.

In an open space among the trees near to the river the fire was burning. About it were half a dozen fire men. Lop Ear clutched me suddenly and I could feel him tremble. I looked more closely and saw the wizened little old hunter who had shot Broken Tooth out of the tree years before. When he got up and walked about, throwing fresh wood upon the fire, I saw that he limped with his crippled leg. Whatever it was, it was a permanent injury. He seemed more dried up and wizened than ever and the hair on his face was quite gray.

The other hunters were young men. I noted, lying near them on the ground, their bows and arrows, and I knew the weapons for what they were. The Fire Men wore animal skins around their waists and across their shoulders. Their arms and legs, however, were bare, and they wore no footgear. As I have said before, they were not quite so hairy as we of the folk. They did not have large heads, and between them and the folk there was very little difference in the degree of the slant of the head back from the eyes.

They were less stooped than we, less springy in their movements. Their backbones and hips and knee joints seemed more rigid. Their arms were not so long as ours either, and I did not notice that they ever balanced themselves when they walked by touching the ground on either side with their hands; also their muscles were more rounded and symmetrical than ours, and their faces were more pleasing. Their nose orifices opened downward; likewise the bridges of their noses were more developed and did not look so squat nor crushed as ours. Their lips were less flabby and pendent, and their eyeteeth did not look so much like fangs. However, they were quite as thin lipped as we and did not weigh much more. Take it all in all, they were less different from us than were we from the Tree People. Certainly all three kinds were related, and not so remotely related at that.

FAMOUS FIGHTING GOUGHS

Three of a Wiltshire Family Win Victoria Cross.

General Sir Hubert de la Poer Gough, K.C.B., to give him his full name and title, is one of the "Fighting Goughs" of Wiltshire, a family that has bred soldiers for the Empire for many generations. His father, Sir Charles Gough, gained his V.C. during the Indian Mutiny for saving the life of his own brother, also a V.C. man, and Sir Hubert's younger brother, Colonel John Gough, won his in Somaliland some years back. This constitutes a record. No other family can claim that three of its members have been recipients of this coveted order. Born in 1872, General Gough was gazetted from Sandhurst to the 16th Lancers in 1889. He first saw active service in the Tirah campaign eight years later, earning a medal and two clasps.

In the South African War he was in the thick of the fighting outside Ladysmith, where he was severely wounded. He was awarded for his services out there the Queen's medal with five clasps, and the King's medal with two clasps, representing in all seven general engagements. He was also given a step up in rank, which had the effect of making him, at thirty-seven, the youngest colonel in the British army. For the rest, General Gough is very good-looking—an inheritance, probably, from his mother, who, before her marriage was Miss de la Poer, a noted Irish beauty. He is quick, alert, agile, a splendid horseman, and keen on all manner of outdoor sports.

War-Time Prohibition.

Prohibitionists have received assurances that at the coming session of the British Columbia Legislature the Premier will introduce a measure providing for absolute prohibition during the period of the war, the understanding being that when the soldiers return a new referendum will be submitted.

LIMIT OF ENDURANCE

General Smuts concluded his report upon East Africa with high praise for the endurance of his men: "Their work has been done under tropical conditions, which not only produce bodily weariness and unfitness, but which create mental languor and depression, and finally appal the stoutest hearts. To march day by day, and week by week, through the African jungle or high grass in which vision is limited to a few yards, in which danger always lurks near, but seldom becomes visible, even when experienced, supplies a test to human nature often in the long run beyond the limits of human endurance."

Oration Over Allied Heroes

The funeral of ten British soldiers killed in a troop train accident near Paris took place at Versailles. Large crowds followed the hearses, and at the head of the procession were representatives of hte French War Minister and General Nivelle. The War Under-Secretary, M. Rene Besnard, delivered an oration at the grave.

Clearly, the claim of the soldiers and sailors is paramount.

DOCTOR AND NURSE

Former's Love Stood the Supreme Test at Operating Table in Hospital.

By HAROLD CARTER.

Nurse Glynn tapped quickly at the door of Doctor Bentley's room in the Central hospital, and then entered without further ceremony. The doctor was seated at his table, writing; he had not heard her knock. As she approached he turned round in his chair, got up, and took her in his arms and kissed her.

"I'm wanted?" he asked.

"Yes, dear. An emergency case. A child has been knocked down by an automobile. His leg is broken and there are internal injuries."

"Are they getting him ready?" asked the doctor, slipping into his linen overalls.

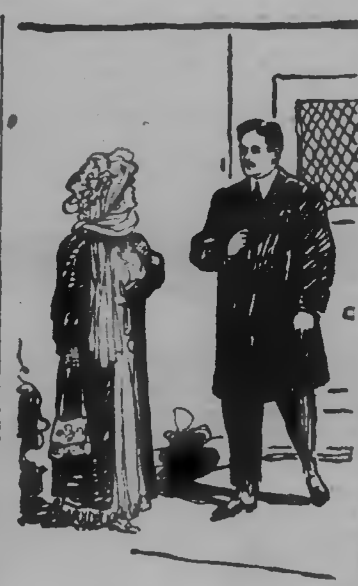
"He's being anaesthetized now," Nurse Glynn answered, and kissed him again. "O my dear, how glad I shall be when Easter comes. Then we shall be together always—no more of these hasty meetings."

She went out noiselessly, and Doctor Bentley, having completed his preparations, followed her into the operating room. The little patient lay upon the glass table, ready for his scalpel. At the head sat the nurse, pouring out, from time to time, a few drops of ether upon the mask which covered the lower part of the face. But although she watched the boy attentively she also watched the doctor; and she watched him with some sort of intuitive faculty of sight so that, without failing in her duty, she was as conscious of him as of the child.

For this was to be the supreme measure by which she might understand his love for her, whether strong and abiding, or a pitiful thing born of loneliness on the one side and propinquity upon the other. She was not sure of him; she could not be sure until he met the mother of the child on his way out.

He did not know that this was his own child upon which he was operating so deftly. His skilful fingers picked up the shattered filaments of muscle and flesh, uniting them for his assistant's sutures. His scalpel cut into the bruised tissues, but mercifully, and only to lay bare the shattered bones within. None at the Central hospital bore such a reputation for deft and careful surgery as Doctor Bentley.

They had been engaged three months. She knew what was a common report, that he had been married before, unhappily; that his wife had gone west and obtained a divorce upon the technical ground of desertion; that she had returned, to marry Anthony Blair, the millionaire, who could afford to give her those luxuries which her butterfly soul desired, and which the doctor, immersed in his work, had never dreamed of as necessary to her, nor been able to gratify.



"Have No Fear of That."

But that there had been a child she did not know till that evening when Mrs. Blair appeared with a white face at the hospital gates and pleaded for the crippled baby that had been knocked down. She carried it in her arms, and Nurse Glynn would never forget the look of terror upon her face. That it was the doctor's child she knew, for it must have been four years old, and it was only three years since the couple had separated.

Well, when he knew, would his heart turn with yearning toward his child and cast her out utterly, even though he knew that the past could be undone?

The operation was almost ended. The last instrument was replaced in the tray of bubbling water; Doctor Bentley was sponging the sewn tissues with the perchloride and pulling off his gloves. He divested himself of his linen garments and stood up once more conventionally clothed. Nurse Glynn removed the mask. The little patient moaned and stirred.

"He'll do finely now," she heard the doctor say. "Take him up to the ward, nurse. And—good-night."

She wheeled the table into the adjoining-room, transferred the child to the stretcher, and began pushing it through into the passage. The woman was waiting there—Mrs. Anthony Blair. Nurse Glynn hesitated involuntarily. She heard the doctor at her heels; in another minute he would know.

The night nurse took the stretcher from her. She turned away and lingered a moment near. Then she saw the doctor start and heard the woman's agonized cry.

"Oh, doctor, is he dead? He is not dead? He will live then? You must save him!" Then came the little exclamation of recognition and then silence. The two were standing alone. For the news of the meeting had spread among the other nurses and the hospital staff, and they tactfully disappeared.

"Oh, it's you," the nurse heard Mrs. Blair exclaim, in an embarrassed voice.

"Yes, Alice," she heard the doctor answer gravely. "I am happy to tell you that he will recover and that the limb will not be shortened. I am so sorry for you," he added impulsively. "Must have been a terrible blow. Your son—"

Her son! Was he, then, disclaiming the paternity of the boy, or did he not know?

"How old is he? He is a promising little fellow."

"Nearly four," answered the woman. She was still trembling, still overcome by the shock of the meeting. Her little butterfly mind was badly bruised, even as the child's little body had been.

"Four?" exclaimed Doctor Bentley in astonishment. Nurse Glynn, standing near, saw his face turn pale. He made an impulsive step toward her. "Alice! Whose child is he? Who is his father?" he demanded fiercely.

"I don't know," sobbed Mrs. Blair. "Why do you ask me? Why are you looking at me like that? Haven't you injured me enough that you should terrify me?" she sobbed. "I don't know who is its father, nor its mother either."

"Its—mother!" gasped the doctor. "Isn't he your child then?"

"Certainly not!" she exclaimed, drawing herself up indignantly. "Do you suppose my child would go to a common hospital if he were injured? Didn't they tell you that John ran the automobile over a street brat? Yes," she continued in a petulant voice, "and a crowd gathered and threatened me, and if I hadn't had enough presence of mind to jump out and carry him into the hospital they would have thrown stones at me. And I don't dare to go out if he should be going to die, or I shall be arrested and thrown into a common cell."

"Have no fear of that, Mrs. Blair," answered the doctor gravely. "I shall have you sent home in my own automobile. And the child will be well in a few weeks. As for the damage—"

"Mr. Blair is able to pay for any damages," replied the woman coldly. She had not understood.

The doctor bowed and turned away. He walked straight past Nurse Glynn; she followed him; he turned and saw her.

"You know, then?" he asked, seeing the look on her face.

"Yes, dear," she whispered. "And—I have been so afraid!"

He pressed her to his heart.

"You thought it was my child? If it had been—"

"If it had been," she whispered anxiously.

"Dearest," answered the doctor gravely, "I might have loved them. But you would still have been first in my heart—as now, as always."

COULDN'T KEEP ANY GOODS

Country Storekeeper Pretty Well Discouraged at the Perversity of His Customers.

"Have you crackers of any kind?" asked one of an automobile party as he entered a little store by the roadside nine miles from the nearest town.

"No, I'm just out o' crackers," was the reply. "I had some last week, but a man come along here the other day and bought all I had—darn it all! Seems like as soon as I lay in a stock of anything some one comes along and buys it all o' me, an' I got to bother round gittin' more."

"Have you any sardines?"

"Not a one. I got a dozen boxes a couple o' months ago, but some fellers on a fishin' touse come along the other day an' bought the last two boxes—plague take 'em! Seems as though I can't keep nothin' on hand, fer my customers!"

"Well, have you any oranges or fruit of any other kind?"

"No, I ain't. I got half a box o' oranges two or three weeks ago an' a auto load o' people came along and grabbed up the last of 'em the other day. I told 'em that if they tuk 'em all I'd jest have to git some more, an' I'd a good mind not to let 'em have 'em."

"My wife wants a spool of white thread. Have you any?"

"Sold the last spool I had Sat'day, dang it all! I tell ye, this keepin' store is mighty discouragin' bizness. Soon as you lay in a lot o' stuff some one comes in an' buys it all off'n you an' you got to hustle around an' git more. A man come in this mornin' an' bought the last bit o' cheese I had, an' here I was 'lottin' on havin' it last a couple o' weeks yet. It discourages me so gollin' things most as soon as I git 'em on the shelves that I've a good mind to sell out an' go back to farmin' where you ain't pestered the way you are when you keep sto'. I'm plum discouraged."—Puck.

SERBIAN BRAINS WON HEIGHTS TO MONASTIR

How Strategy of a Serbian Marshal Overcame Mountains---A Colonel's Master Hand.

A long-delayed despatch from Gordon Gordon-Smith correspondent with the Serbian army, shows that the operations which resulted in the capture of Monastir were as brilliantly conducted as any movements in this war, though on a relatively small scale by the combined forces under the command of Field Marshal Mischitch of Serbia. The Bulgarian army held the plain in front of the mountain range which barred the route toward the frontier of King Ferdinand's kingdom. Bit by bit, however, it was driven back till the Bulgarians were on the defensive on the mountain summits. On the Struma front, held by the British, and in the Vardar Valley, held by the French, the position has practically become one of "stalemate."

The Uphill Task

To the left of the French lines begin the positions held by the Serbians, and it is here that strategy and tactics have come to their own again and the world has been offered the unusual spectacle of a force inferior in numbers driving a superior one by sheer force of military skill from one mountain stronghold after another. For weeks past this work of clearing the enemy from the mountain summits has been the task of the Serbian army, re-inforced by certain French regiments d'elite, notably the regiment of Zouaves "Les enfants perdus" of the French army have notably maintained their reputation.

The correspondent continues: "The problem facing Field Marshal Mischitch was no easy one. It was to drive the German-Bulgarian army from its entrenched positions in the plain as well as from its hold on the mountain fastnesses on either side. No more striking picture of modern war and of modern military methods could have been seen than the capture of the Chuka Mountain and the village of Polog, of which I was a spectator. The staff of the Serbian division carrying out the attack was established on the mountain summit facing the Chuke Mountain. This was strewn with huge boulders and masses of rock, among which were placed the telephone stations connecting the staff with the various batteries and the actual fighting line on the opposite mountain. The colonel commanding the division (the Serbs are sparing in their distribution of general rank) was seated on a camp stool in the lee of a mass of rocks, with his field glass glued on the opposite mountain slope. From time to time a sharp order sent by telephone caused batteries of mountain guns, light or heavy artillery, to open fire on the Bulgarian position. It was like a virtuoso playing the piano.

Irresistible

"Then, on another order, little black lines began to emerge from all the ravines and rocks on the mountain side. The rattle of rifle fire and the pom-pom-pom of the machine guns drifted across the valley. The Serbian troops were beginning the assault. From the point where I stood it was quite possible to distinguish how the combat swayed backward and forward. Sometimes the ant-like lines of the attacking force would rush forward a hundred yards or so, sometimes I could see them taking refuge from the pitiless rifle and machine gun fire of the Bulgarians. Slowly but surely, however, the Serbian regiments pushed forward. The rattle of the machine guns from the first line of trenches ceased as they were stormed at the point of the bayonet. Five minutes later we saw long lines of Bulgarian prisoners pouring down the mountain side."

Recent Indian Horrors.

The lecturer was criticising Uncle Sam's method of handling the affairs of certain tribes.

"Pardon me for interrupting you," spoke up an auditor, "but do you maintain that we are our Indian brothers' Cherokee-keepers?"

"I have no hesitation, sir," answered the lecturer, frowning at him, "in pronouncing that the Choctawfulest pun I ever heard."

Might Be In Time.

"No offense, you know."

"For what?"

"Well, we were discussing who was the world's greatest man."

"And why should I be miffed?"

"Well, you see, we didn't mention your boy, but he hasn't grown up yet."

His Tailor's Bill.

"He is awfully hard up."

"That man?"

"Yes."

"He doesn't look it."

"That's why."

Not In These Days.

"A woman will have her way."

"That may be, but I can tell you some of them don't like their weigh a little bit."

No Time For Sleepy Heads.

A pretty girl gets on the line
And calls you up by phone
And asks you to come down tonight,
As she is all alone.
You go and find that it is so
And stay till almost nine,
And when you call her up again
You get the "busy" sign.

PERT PARAGRAPHS.

One reason why women are quick is because they have to be to keep up with the changing styles.

There are lots of people up in the air now who can't navigate airships or sail earthward on parachutes.

The iridescent glow surrounding picnics fades, pales and disappears when you get close enough to see the ants on the sandwiches.

NEW LIFE FOR RIBBONS

If Soiled or Faded There Are Ways of Restoring Them

There is an expert way to do so small a thing as washing ribbons.

The easiest, and perhaps the safest way is to put the ribbon into a fruit jar, fill the jar two-thirds full of naptha or gasoline and shake, for at least five minutes, take ribbon out and rinse in another jar of clean gasoline or naptha. These jars may be kept, if tightly covered for future use. After rinsing stretch out straight and wind evenly around a large jar or smooth crock, set in draught, until dry. Do not iron.

Black ribbons, if not too soiled may be freshened by sponging with alcohol or strong borax water; if very dirty wash in warm water with little soap bark, in place of soap. Rinse in warm water, dry quickly, stretch on cloth covered table, tacking ribbon tight at each end.

Light shades of ribbon may be cleaned by rubbing them with cornmeal slightly dampened with gasoline. Lay ribbon on clean cloth on underside of ironing board and rub ribbon on both sides until perfectly clean. Hang out of doors in shade to dry.

Pink or cream colored ribbons that are only slightly soiled may be cleaned by rubbing them with fine bread crumbs. Do not roll or crease.

Bridesmaids Carry Canes

Many bridesmaids carry a flower enammel cane instead of the usual shower bouquet. These canes are of the first empire style, enameled in white and trimmed with flowers and ribbons.

MANY SUBMARINES SUNK OTHERS ARE CAPTURED

Alfred Noyes Says Anti-U Boat Campaign Has Disposed of 200 Submersibles

NEW YORK, Feb. 22.—England's anti-submarines fleet consists of 4,000 private yachts, whalers and fishing vessels, manned by 60,000 men, and this force already has destroyed 200 German submarines, Alfred Noyes, the English poet, asserted in a statement here last night.

"Every boat is armed with guns throwing 12 or 14-pound explosive shells, and has 1,000 yards of steel netting training behind," he declared. "All the home waters are mapped out in blocks and each block patrolled.

"Imagine 60 trawlers stretching a steel undersea net from the English to the Irish coast and you get some idea of the British Admiralty's anti-submarine campaign, by which the German submersibles have been driven from home waters and forced to attack neutral vessels on the high seas."

Mr. Noyes said he had spent many days with the trawlers, and was informed by their captains that a submarine rarely will attack an armed vessel. What becomes of a submarine after it strikes a trawler's net, the poet said, is a naval secret.

"Some have been captured and taken to England, but most of them sink," he added. "It is impossible to save the crews. What is done to them when they hit the net I am forbidden to say."

HORSE MARKET.

TORONTO, Feb. 21—There was a fair trade done at the Toronto horse exchange last week. The Western trade is still going ahead, and better things are promised when the spring opens up. At the Union Yards Horse Exchange there were 130 horses, and over one hundred were sold. At private sale [illegible] were disposed of, mostly for the west. These animals weighed 1,250 to 1,450. At the auction sale on Wednesday prices ranged between $107.50 and $177.50. One pair of bay mares brought $390, and several others were $275 a pair. A fair trade was done with Quebec firms mostly of blocks and expressers. The French inspectors took 35 horses. Receipts for this week indicate a satisfactory trade. At the Repository there were about 200 horses sold. Four or five loads went to the West, with one load for Winnipeg and the others for various points in Saskatchewan. Preference is being shown for mares, and they bring prices $10 and $15 higher than the average. The prices ranged between $115 and $160. There were a couple of loads for Quebec at $145 to $175

VENTILATION OF WARSHIPS

Difficult Task When Structure is So Complicated.

One of the most difficult problems in building a modern battleship is to secure satisfactory ventilation. A ship is such a complicated thing, made up of so many steel boxes, large and small, for the accommodation of officers, men, coal, ammunition, and stores; dotted here and there with so many steel ladders, automatic lifts, steel bulkheads, and watertight doors, varied here and there by miles of electric wires belonging to lights, telephones, bells, and motors, to say nothing of the endless mileage of pipes for flooding, draining, pumping, fresh water, fresh air or compressed air, and speaking tubes.

First in importance comes the ventilating of the boiler and engine rooms. When you begin to think of the gangs of coal-black demons working away in the bowels of the ship at a temperature of 120 deg.; when, too, you commence to realize that unless the furnaces receive their required draught the speed of the battleship drops to below that of her sisters in the squadron, you appreciate the importance of the steam-driven fans to the furnaces and boiler rooms. The supply of air comes down through large watertight trunks which are continued right up to the weather deck, armored gratings being provided at the protective deck.

For ventilating engine rooms, large electric fans are employed. So, too, the coal bunkers have to be ventilated, owing to the gas which the coal gives off. This gas, when mixed with air, forms an explosive; so, in order to prevent a possibility of injury to men or ships, a supply and an exhaust pipe are fitted in such a manner as to cause a current of air.

Humor and Philosophy

By DUNCAN M. SMITH

PERT PARAGRAPHS.

A GOOD way to disseminate a bit of news or information is to impart it under the strictest pledge of secrecy.

Sarcasm is a more fatal gift than foolishness and not half so much fun.

Nowadays when you see two men talking excitedly on a street corner they are not discussing the respective demerits of regulars and insurgents, but are boosting different makes of automobiles.

If we all talked only when we understood our subject the sense of hearing would be in danger of falling into innocuous desuetude.

The man who is always trying to do somebody is numerous, and you can't differentiate him sometimes from your best friend or yourself.

If you want to be popular listen to the other fellow's grievance. While you are doing it you will be gathering warm regard from him at the same time you can be calculating how you are going to pay for a new winter suit.

There is no place like home, and some men are thankful there isn't.

Love is probably the only thing that has more lives than a cat.

McDERMID RINK VICTORS IN BLUE RIBBON EVENTS OF THE BONSPIEL

SUCCESSFUL SPIEL NEARS END

Skip McDermid and his three stalwart curlers won the Grand Challenge Cup in the finals of the open bonspiel at the rink early this morning and were congratulated by all. From the start yesterday morning until the finish at one o'clock this morning his rink had played four games. Some grind—but they never faltered, and they kept up their good work until the last stone was placed in the 14th end, when, by mutual consent, play was stopped.

Skip Tait of Campbellford had a splendid rink and it was thought that they were going to give the local four a battle as they got three on the first end. They gave great credit to Skip McDermid on his victory and will go home well satisfied that they did their best and they will carry with them the second prize in the main event — four auto-strop razors.

CONSOLATION

Skip Sam Ray defeated Skip W. O. Campbell in the contest to decide who would represent the local club in the finals, which will be staged at 3.30 o'clock this afternoon.

Everyone congratulated the ever-popular Sam on his victory and all hope that he will be successful in the final and concluding round of the 1917 bonspiel.

Third Round

Clifford 12, Kenneally 6

MR. LEVI PAYNE, 74 YEARS OLD, AT 'SPIEL

One of the most popular curlers in the bonspiel is Mr. Levi Payne, vice skip for Skip Strickland of the Lakefield rink, who lost out in the fourth round of the Consolation this morning. Mr. Payne is 74 but he was as spry as the best of them and he was a big factor in all the games won by the strickland quartette. He comes from the regions of Stoney Lake and is known far and wide by visitors and campers who spent vacations at the northern summer resorts. The Clifford rink from Oshawa finally put the Strickland four out by one shot.

MANY OVERSEAS CHAMPIONS

OARSMEN FROM CANADA, DENMARK, BELGIUM AND ENGLAND.

A notable eight-oared shell race was rowed at Richmond, England, on a war Christmas Day, for the benefit of the British Sportsmen's Ambulance Fund and other charities. The interest in the race lay in the fact that the rival captains were W. D. Kinnear, the Olympic single-sculling champion of 1912, and Diamond Sculls winner of 1910 and 1911, and H. T. Blackstaffe, Olympic single-sculling champion of 1908 and Diamond Sculls winner of 1906. Blackstaffe's crew won by a foot in a terrific finish. In the losing crew were Harrison Bourke, amateur sculls champion of Australia, and J. Taymans, Belgian champion. E. B. Butler of the Argonauts, former Canadian and American champion rowed No. 6 in the winning crew, and another member was J. P. Muller, champion of Denta.

AT THE TEE

Mr. Levi Payne, who is on the Lakefield rink, is 74 years of age and curled in three contests yesterday. He was waiting anxiously for the semi-finals this morning.

Skip Smith of Campbellford played in hard luck against Skip Campbell. Someone must have purloined his mascot.

The Keene rink skipped by our old friend Kenneally played a remarkable game until the third round of the consolation was reached. Skip Clifford of Oshawa put the jinx on him.

The contest between the two District Cup skips, Kay and Campbell, was the centre of interest. The browny Scotch quartette were able to win, despite fine playing by Kay's contingent.

The veteran local skip Sam Ray seemed better than ever yesterday and he was at the finish last night

It was one o'clock when the finals in the primary were decided, but that did not deter a large number of spectators from waiting till the yell was over.

Skip Taylor who won the Grand Challenge Cup last year, was vice-skipping for Sam Ray this time.

NIVELLE'S ENGLISH

General Nivelle made an excellent impression on all with whom he came into contact during his first visit to London as commander-in-chief. The biggest discovery of the war—he started in the present conflict as a colonel—his quick, decided, and albeit modest manner gave the members of the War Council a sense of strength, shrewdness, and confidence. The French Commander-in-Chief understands English better than he speaks it, and he laughingly chides himself for having forgotten what he learned during the four weeks each summer he was accustomed to spend in England during his younger days.

LOCAL SOLDIERS WILL PLAY HAMILTON IF TEAM WINS OVER LONDONERS

Should Cockneys Win They Will Meet Kitchener in Semi-Finals and Petes Will Play the Winner for Championship.

The Soldiers may not drop into the O.H.A. finals so easily as prophesied yesterday. Later information in the hands of Major O'Flynn is to the effect that the locals will be drawn against Hamilton should the Ambitious City seven win the round over London, which is quite probable, and in that event the first game between the Hams and the Petes would be played in Peterborough next Tuesday.

If, on the other hand, London should win the round, the Cockneys would be drawn against Kitchener in the semi-finals and the Petes would meet the winner for the blue ribbon.

Major O'Flynn will not worry, no matter what be the outcome of the Hamilton-London round. The fighting manager of the 247th lads takes the sportsmanlike view that if the locals cannot defeat the Hamilton-London winner they have no license to appear in the finals. Should they meet and triumph in a semi-final game, theirs will be all the more glory whether they win or are trimmed in the final dash. But the Major isn't looking for a trimming.

During the term of suspense, the team will be given sufficient practices, and for tonight an endeavor is being made to have a full team out against the Soldiers. Pete Spratt will lead the other fellows.

Save for some soreness and stiffness in the arm and shoulder, Bob Armstrong has recovered from the effects of the jolts he received on Friday night and he will be fit for the next game.

The Hamilton Herald says Harold Parker is sure to be in the game here on Friday night. He accompanied the team to London, but did not take his paraphernalia along. If he had, it's dollars to doughnuts that he couldn't have withstood the temptation to hop into h gm aet$5 temptation to hop into the game.

THE GREATEST OF KICKERS

LATE SERGT. "PETE" FERGUSON OF OLD OTTAWA ROUGH RIDERS.

The death of Sergt. Peter Ferguson, one of the best known Ottawa Scotsmen and an athlete of renown was a cause of deep and lasting regret throughout Canada. "Pete," as he was universally known, died in an English hospital from an attack of brain fever. He had been in hospital for a month. He left a wife and four children. Sergt. Ferguson enlisted in the 3rd ammunition column and went to England in the fall of 1915. "Pete" went through the South African war had considerable military training.

The late Peter Ferguson came to Ottawa about 1904 and first became well known as a soccer player. He was brought to the attention of the Ottawa Rugby Football Club, then the Rough Riders, and they succeeded in developing him into one of the most valuable men in the game. Ferguson, with his weight, strength and speed soon become one of the most famous players in the interprovincial. He was tried out at quarter-back and on the half line. Ferguson was not only a good tackler and formidable ball carrier, but he had wonderful strength in his legs and could kick a ball probably farther than any other man in the game. At goal kicking from placement he had few equals. Ferguson wound up his football career in the scrimmage. Of later years the late Peter Ferguson had devoted his spare time to association football. He was president of the Ottawa City Football League, doing splendid work in that capacity.

Serious Undertaking

Speaking at Birmingham, Sir George Newman said the unprecedented employment of women in industries was a grave adventure, and unless safeguarded and protected the nation must expect to pay down to the last coin for the new responsibilities.

Death Followed Commission

News was received of the death of Second-Lieutenant W. J. Davy, Somerset Light Infantry, owner of the Tracy Park estate, Bath, who was killed the day after he received his commission.

A man's ability to say no at the right time is of more use to him than his ability to quote Latin.

A Delicate Compliment.

The return of the Duke of Connaught to England recalls the story of a very pretty compliment that was paid to him by a certain French-Canadian settler—the descendant of an ancient Huguenot family, and evidently one of Nature's gentlemen—at whose house H.R.H. stayed for a brief period one day when out hunting.

While the Duke was resting after the fatigue of the chase in the best room the house afforded, he happened to glance round, and noted with surprise that, although there were two clocks in the apartment itself, and another visible in the corridor, not one of them was going.

Thereupon, acting upon the impulse of the moment, he mentioned in as delicate a manner as possible to his host that his clocks had all stopped, and hinted that he would like to be allowed to present him with one that could be more relied upon.

The settler thanked him with a smile, but added: "My clocks are excellent timekeepers. They were going just before you came, but I had them all stopped, as I did not desire that your Royal Highness, during your all-too-brief stay under my humble roof, should be reminded of the flight of time."

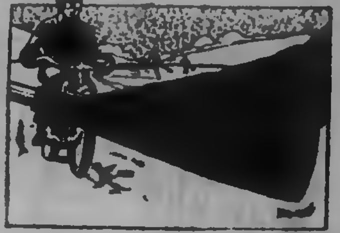
HAND GUARDS FOR CYCLISTS



When riding my motorcycle, says a correspondent, in cool weather, my hands become very cold, and in order to overcome this, I had guards, like that shown in the sketch, made of oilcloth. A piece, tapered from 10 inches at one end to 4½ inches at the other, and 12 inches long, was formed into a cone, the smaller end being fitted, with an elastic band, over the handlebar. The guards keep the hands comfortable without gloves in cool weather, and, with gloves, are of great service in the winter.—Popular Mechanics.

HAD ROYAL PACEMAKER

Billy Sherring of Hamilton Denies it Was Constantine

When Wm. J. Sherring, of Hamilton, one of Canada's greatest athletes, won the famous Marathon in Greece in 1906, he was paced in the final stages of the race by a Greek prince of royal blood. Many people have been under the impression that this prince was the crafty Constantine, and to clear up this point Mr Sherring wrote: "Prince George, brother of King Constantine of Greece, was the prince that paced me in the stadium at the finish of the Marathon race, May 1st, 1906. I met the present King on numerous occasions and attended several banquets at which he presided, and on one occasion at the royal palace our late beloved King Edward and Prince George (now our beloved King), Prince Arthur of Connaught, and the entire royal Greek household were all assembled, and the Canadian, Australian and British athletes were introduced separately to each of the royalty. In conclusion, I might add that I am glad it was not Constantine who paced me at the finish of the race, for he is so treacherous I am not sure but that he might have tripped me, as there were several German entrants in the race."

GOVERNMENT BACKS HYDRO

IN OPPOSITION TO THE PROPOSED C.N.R. LINE.

Mayor Duffus was in Toronto yesterday attending the annual meeting of the Hydro-Electric Railway Association, of which he was elected fourth vice-president.

Sir Adam Beck, chairman of the Provincial Hydro Commission, was present, and outlined the position of the whole hydro movement, particularly in regard to the present trouble from private interests which threatens to handicap the progress of the big radial schemes he has in view.

Secretary Hannigan read a message from Sir William Hearst promising the association that the Ontario Government would stand behind the association in protesting against the proposal to give the C. N. R. and the T., H. and B. power to construct a line between Hamilton and the border.

Political orators talk and talk, but the bright-faced girl on the silver dollar isn't saying a word.

DR. GRENFELL AND HIS WORK

Once again the people of this city are asked to support this heroic enterprise on the part of Dr. Grenfell and his associates by leaving subscriptions at the offices of the Review and the Examiner.

We are accustomed today to hear of noble deeds. We are proud of our Canadians because upon the battlefields of Europe, they have maintained the standard of the British fighting forces. So we may say of men like Dr. Grenfell, they have done their duty, because they have lived up to the traditions of a long list of missionary heroes in all parts of the world. We who cannot go into the fighting line, do what we can at home for those who cheerfully and willingly bear the heat and burden of the day. But words of appreciation and sympathy, though they have their place and position, will be of little avail unles we go still further, and not forget the principles for which these lives have been laid down—love, justice and mercy. It is for these that our soldiers and sailors have laid down their lives, and this is the Gospel message which men like Dr. Grenfell are trying to carry "into all the world" and "preach to every creature."

If you are suffering from dyspepsia, indigestion or sour stomach you should try a mixture of Salon Pepsit and Iridin.

This is said to be the formula of Dr. Banta's famous prescription which gave him a world-wide reputation.

These powders are sold in Peterborough at Lynch's Drug Store. 163

SAYS BODY IS A POISON FACTORY

Urges Everyone to Drink Glass of Hot Water Before Breakfast.

Just as coal, when it burns, leaves behind a certain amount of incombustible material in the form of ashes, so the food and drink taken day after day leaves in the alimentary canal a certain amount of indigestible material, which if not completely eliminated from the system each day, becomes food for the millions of bacteria which infest the bowels. From this mass of left-over waste, toxins and ptomainelike poisons are formed and sucked into the blood.

Men and women who can't get feeling right must begin to take inside baths. Before eating breakfast each morning drink a glass of real hot water with a teaspoonful of limestone phosphate in it to wash out of the thirty feet of bowels the previous day's accumulation of poisons and toxins and to keep the entire alimentary canal clean, pure and fresh.

Those who are subject to sick headache, colds, biliousness, constipations, others who wake up with bad taste, foul breath, backache, rheumatic stiffness, or have a sour, gassy stomach after meals, are urged to get a quarter pound of limestone phosphate from the drug store, and begin practicing internal sanitation. This will cost very little, but is sufficient to make everyone an enthusiast on the subject.

Remember inside bathing is more important that outside bathing, because the skin pores do not absorb impurities into the blood, causing poor health while the bowel pores do. Just as soap and hot water cleanses, sweetens and freshens the skin, so hot water and limestone phosphate act on the stomach, liver,

RIOTOUS YOUTH AT INVERLEA

POLICE CALLED TO MUNICIPAL RINK TO RESTORE ORDER.

The boys of the city are permitted to play hockey on the municipal skating rink at Inverlea Park at specified hours on certain nights. At other times the only pastime permitted is skating, and the girls enjoy the same rights as the boys.

Last night some of the boys seemed to forget that it was not one of the evenings on which hockey was allowed. They started a game, and some of the girls who were skating were rather roughly handled. When the boys refused to conduct themselves decorously a telephone call was sent for police aid. An officer arrived and restored order. The boys were induced to forego hockey, and when the representative of the law left the situation was outwardly calm.

Left to themselves, the boys soon broke out again and brought the proceedings to a summary end by removing the electric lamps and shrouding the rink in darkness.

What is apparently required at the rink is an official on duty all the time to preserve order.

TEUTONS FAILED TO HOLD GAINS

PETERBORO INDUSTRIAL ASSOCIATION THE OUTCOME OF MAYOR'S BANQUET

Possibilities of the City Discussed by Speakers.

INDUSTRIES

Successful in every way was Mayor Duffus dinner last night given in Hooper's Palm Room. Steps were taken for a new and more progressive Peterborough. Every one of the gathering of the city's most representative men of public affairs pledged themselves to assist in the upbuilding of the city and keep Peterborough to the fore.

After partaking of a very hearty dinner, well prepared for the occasion, a toast to the King was participated in, after which Mayor Duffus gave a very clear and comprehensive outline of the city's business and asked the fullest discussion and criticism on all matters of public importance. In the first place his Worship regretted the lack of boosters in the city and the fact that there were no outstanding figures to keep the city to the fore, as in other places. In the past Peterborough had men who were responsible largely for the city's growth, and he referred to the late Senator Cox, who had been interested in the city's progress at all times. He referred to the tax rate of the city and there being no chance to lower it, as the expenditures of the city over which the Council had control was only one-sixth of the taxation. The sewage disposal plant would have to be built and other items tended to increase the rate over last year, which finished with a good surplus owing to the Ontario Government paying the taxes on the Seymour Power Co. property. The necessity of keeping the debenture debt of the city down until 1931 was pointed out, as not until that date will any of the bonds of any large amount be maturing.. At the end of that year $786,000 of bonds will be taken up. In the meantime the utmost care must be exercised, as the expenses of the city are increasing, and the taxation will automatically rise until something is done to boost the assessment. The different spending departments of the city were referred to, and tribute paid to the magnificent educational advantages enjoyed, second to none in the province. Not only the public schools but the separate schools were praised.

Must Be Ready.

Peterborough, socially and morally, was in the highest class, and would stand the most rigid inspection. A period of reconstruction was at hand, and he did not want the time to slip by without taking advantage of the situation. If the war gets worse, it will be that much worse for the city. If the war should stop, the city should be ready, and the citizens must band together to meet the emergency. It was to get suggestions that he had called the meeting. He gave great credit to the city's department heads for their competency, particularly City Clerk Armstrong.

Peterborough's advantages as a summer resort drew large numbers of people to the back lakes. It was a natural ad. for us.

Want Government Industries.

Why does not Peterborough get some of the Government industries? The great boom going on in other towns and cities was referred to, and the members of Parliament, with the citizens, were asked to take the matter up seriously and systematically and do everything possible to meet the situation. Peterborough's growth was a gradual one, and, while it was in a very healthy state at the present time, the growth must be kept up, and that could only be done by the co-operation of all.

Peterborough to Lake Ontario.

Capt. Burnham, M.P., congratulated the chief magistrate on his enterprise and energy on behalf of the city. He referred to the success that attended the united effort of the Eastern Ontario municipalities in demanding hydro power from the Ontario Government and how the ministers in charge of the department fell in line as quickly as the people had pointed out the necessity. The Seymour Power Co. has acquiesced, and Peterborough is now in a position to furnish unlimited power at any time. In referring to the transportation problems, Capt. Burnham stated that the English syndicate were ready to build the line of railway from Montreal through Central Ontario, and it would touch at Stoney Lake, giving railway facilities to the front and back of us, and the Trent Canal would be open to Lake Ontario this spring. The Government intended to open it last spring, but could not do so. The efforts of the deputation to Ottawa had resulted in an appropriation being made for the completion of the north end.

Mr. Dumble—Is the contract let?

Capt. Burnham—Get the money first; let the contract after. If the Government made the same appropriation next year, we would have more than enough to complete the canal. The city has the railway, the canal, the power, and if you have the brains, nothing can keep Peterborough back.

T. V. C. Ancient History.

Mr. D. W. Dumble got on to his favorite subject, the Trent Valley Canal, and after stating that the high level bridge would not be built at Campbellford to allow navigation to Lake Ontario, questioned whether it would be possible for a steamer to go to Trenton this summer. He gave a history of the Trent Valley Canal from its earliest date, and felt sure that if all the members of the House of Commons would come and go over the route, the natural waterway would appeal to them. He commended the financial condition of the city. There was no lack of civic spirit. We have the opportunity and will be ready to grapple with the situation when the war is over. He reerred to the government allowing the railroads to parallel one another's lines. The railroads corporations were the obstacles to the completion of the Trent Canal.

Mr. Matthews Optimistic.

Mr. T. F. Matthews thought the Mayor's idea of citizens meeting together to discuss municipal matters was a step in the right direction. He thought the Mayor was too pessimistic. We have the opportunity, and unless we shove it along we cannot get results. The railroad to the north would not help Peterborough, and Lindsay's experience with the Haliburton road was referred to. The city was held in high esteem in the financial world, and the Mayor was quite right in advising the curbing of debenture issues. The advantages Peterborough gained by being with the Hydro Commission were shown when it was made possible to deliver to a prospective industry 8000 horse-power as soon as required. The reason that there were no outstanding men in Peterborough was because they were all workers and took no interest in civic affairs. Now that they were drawn into it, all would advance the city's interests. Peterborough must have new manufactories. Canada will develop and there will be an era of prosperity after the war. Mr. Matthews was in favor of the city taking over the street railway and the gas plant. It could be handled economically by the City Council or the Utilities Commission.

Own Street Railway.

Mr. W. H. Bradburn asked if the city would have to finance the street railway, and was informed that Sir Adam Beck had agreed to accept city bonds at four per cent. in payment. The ex-mayor agreed that the city should own both utilities. He pointed out the change that had come over Peterborough in the past ten years. The city had no special inducements to offer, as other towns could get as cheap power rates as Peterborough. He was in favor of a combined city and county building as advocated by Mr. Hatton.

Much More Can be Done by Organization of Boosters.

RAILWAYS

Encourage Industries.

Mr. J. J. Turner, Jr,. was in favor of acquiring all public utilities, and encouraging new industries. The Government should be forced to complete the Trent Valley Canal. And he was ready to assist in every way. He wanted the fire department kept up to the highest efficiency.

Mr. A. J. Grant, superintending engineer of the Trent Valley Canal, told of making the trip from Peterborough to Trenton on the tug Bob Hall, which has a draft of five feet nine inches. The bridge at Campbellford was the only sticker. The upper end would be completed when one contract was let and the other two finished. He suggested a motor boat regatta at Lake Simcoe to advertise the advantages of the canal. Orillia and Peterborough would benefit.

Mr. E. G. Patterson was of the opinion that the business men of the city were indifferent to giving their services to the public. Now that the Mayor had started the ball rolling, he hoped for good results.

Mr. Robt. Hicks had fault to find with the financing of the city. He thought that expert advice should be secured, the same as Toronto had done. No debentures should be issued for sums of five or six thousand dollars, and the $60,000 Patriotic Fund grant should have been voted out of current rate. "Get some scheme outlined, and let the city clerk give it the once over," said the speaker.

A General Review.

Mr. S. R. Armstrong, city clerk, gave a general review of the city's business. Out of twenty-five cities, Peterborough stood the sixth lowest when everything was taken into consideration, and second lowest outside of school rate. We have the second lowest debenture rate. The power question was thoroughly covered, but Mr. Armstrong wanted the power invested in the Hydro Commission and not in the Government. He knew of instances where power in Peterborough had cost only $13 per h.p. un-

THE RESOLUTIONS PASSED

Moved by Mr. T. F. Matthews, seconded by Mr. B. F. Ackerman—That an organization be formed, to which those present and other citizens who will unite with them shall be members, to advance the interests of the City of Peterborough, and that the executive of the organization consist of a committee if three members, who will act for the organization in all matters, and call a general meeting when they deem it advisable; that the committee consider the matter of a constitution for the organization and report at a meeting which they shall call, and that in the meantime the organization be known as the Peterbirough Industrial Association.—Carried.

Moved by Mr. E. G. Patterson, seconded by Mr. Robt. Hicks—That this gathering, well knowing the facilities and advantages in Peterbirough for manufacturing industries, and recognizing that united effort will carry the city forward to greater prosperity and success, pledge ourselves individually and as a gathering to do all in our power at all times and to use every effort to advance the city's interests.—Carried.

DR. GRENFELL'S MISSION

The finest expression of our Christian civilization is missionary philanthropy. In this the Church ministers to the needy and suffering of the world, seeking to reveal the spirit of Christ in deeds of kindly ministry. The Saviour of men makes such living the criterion for citizenship in Heaven.

It is therefore a fitting thing that the Christian Church in Peterbirough should seek to minister to the suffering inhabitants of the bleak and inhospitable wilds of Labrador. Dr. Grenfell and his associates are engaged in a noble and heroic service to these people. Amid danger and privation, with sacrificial spirit they seek to relieve their distress and suffering.

This week has been set aside for a special effort on behalf of this exceedingly worthy enterprise. We feel sure the offering will be in keeping with the need which calls for our best effort. Let us make our contributions a thank offering to God fir safety, peace and plenty while millions are suffering and dying for the good of men.

Two recruits were taken on the strength of the 247th this morning: Ptes. Wm. Dixon and Burritt Calvert of Buckhorn. The band took part in a recruiting meeting at George and Simcoe Streets.

BRIGHTEN THE LIFE OF COUNTY REFUGE HOUSE

PLANT SHADE TREES AND SHRUBBERY, GRAND JURY SUGGESTS.

ABSENCE OF CRIME.

In their presentment to Mr. Justice Sutherland, the grand jury, of which ex-Warden W. J. Porter was foreman, reported satisfactory conditions at the different institutions they visited and inspected. The suggestion is made that the bare and bleak appearance of the buildings and grounds of the County House of Refuge would be greatly relieved by the planting of shade trees and shrubbery, which would also serve as a shelter for the inmates, where they could in comfort enjoy the open air under conditions and surroundings that would tend to give the unfortunate homeless a feeling that they had a home in the county.

The presentment says: One satisfactory thing we noted during our

TWO WANDERERS RETURNED HOME

COULDN'T GET ALONG WITH THE POLICE AT PORT HOPE.

Florence Champbeau aged 18 and Lillian Freeburn, aged 15, have returned to the city after a visit in Port Hope, where their conduct brought them under the displeasure of the police and eventually landed them in police court. The girls went to Port Hope on Tuesday, the wealth of the travellers being found to be ten cents, but at that they managed to secure accommodation at a hotel. The following morning they begged meals at restaurants and were arrested.

In police court the girls told a wild story of where they came from and what their intentions were and when the court refused to believe the tale, they gave a more probable story and were taken to the train and brought to this city.

PREFERS JAIL TO $200 FINE

MAN ARRESTED AT STATION HAD LIQUOR IN HIS POSSESSION.

Another $200 fine was registered at the Police Court this morning for a breach of the Ontario Temperance Act.

Ernest Kennedy was found drunk at the G.TR. station last night and a bottle of whiskey was found on him. The magistrate imposed the fine on the major charge of having liquor in his possession and allowed the minor one to be withdrawn.

Kennedy not having the $200, he took the optional three months.

ON ABILITY TO SOLVE TONNAGE SHORTAGE RESTS ALLIED CAUSE

Lloyd George Tells Commons Situation Calls For Drastic Measures and Nation Must Be Prepared to Accept Them.

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

LONDON, Feb. 23.—Lloyd George in the Commons today said that the success of the Allied cause depended on the ability to solve the tonnage shortage which was now affecting the ordinary needs of the nation and the military exigencies. The situation called for gravest measures. The Premier said there was no sure way to victory without hunting submarines from the deep. Enormous sacrifices were necessary for the British public. He stated that the Government proposed to dispense with all non-essential importations to save tonnage.

There was a crowded house to listen to the Premier's statement. Among those in the diplomatic gallery were Sir Robert Borden and many other representatives of the allied nations and dominions.

Before the war, Mr. Lloyd George said, British tonnage had been just adequate, and since that time there had been an enormous increase in the demand for tonnage. More than a million tons of British shipping had been allowed to France, a considerable amount had been set aside for Russia and Italy, and a considerable amount had been sunk. For some time there had been a shortage of tonnage for general needs, and even a slight shortage for military purposes. The nation should realize obsolutely what the conditions were. "If we take drastic measures," the Premier continued, "we can cope with the submarine menace; but if the nation is not prepared to accept drastic measures for dealing with the menace, disaster is before us. The Government is hopeful of finding a means of dealing with the submarine, but we should be guilty of folly if we rested tranquilly upon the expectation of the realization of that hope. We have to deal ruthlessly and promptly with the tonnage problem by measures which will impose great sacrifices upon the country. There are three sets of measures.

First, by the Navy as described by Sir Edward Carson.

Second, the building of merchant ships.

Third, dispensing with unnecessary commodities from abroad and the production of as much food as possible at home."

FOOD STOCKS LOWER.

The Premier said that stocks of food in Britain are lower than ever before, and it was essential for the life of the nation that every possible effort be made to increase home production. As measures to forward this end, the Premier said the Government would guarantee farmers the minimum price of thirty-eight shillings six pence per quarter for oats this year, thirty-two shillings for the two following years, and twenty-four shillings for the subsequent three years. A similar minimum price for wheat would be fixed at sixty shillings, fifty-five and forty-five shillings respectively, and potatoes, for this year only, 120 shillings per ton.

CUT DOWN BREWING.

Brewing will be cut down to ten million barrels annually, and a similar reduction in spirits will effect an annual saving of six hundred thousand tons of foodstuffs. Importation of aerated table and mineral waters, apples, tomatoes and all fruits except oranges and bananas, is prohibited, oranges, bananas and nuts to be reduced 25 per cent. All foreign tea, coffee and cocoa is prohibited, and the amount of India tea is reduced. Importation of paper must be curtailed by a further 640,000 tons. The saving of shipping tonnage by a reduction in imported foodstuffs alone is expected to reach 900,000 tons annually.

WAGES INCREASED.

The wages of agricultural laborers are fixed at 25 shillings a week, an increase of 50 to 80 per cent. over normal.

The Premier said the restrictions named above would be imposed immediately. Steps will be taken to prevent speculative buying, and if necessary a food controller would take control of all commodities. The Premier declared he had not the slightest doubt, if the whole program were carried out and if all those who colud help in production did help, the nation can face the worst the enemy can do.

SURPRISE ATTACKS BY FRENCH GET PRISONERS

PETERBOROUGH, FRIDAY, FEBRUARY 23, 1917

THE CIVIC BANQUET.

THE GUESTS at the dinner given by Mayor Duffus last night are no longer under any misapprehension of what is required of the citizens of Peterborough. The situation with regard to a certain industry was claerly stated. Handwriting appeared on the wall, but the hand that traced it was plainly visible, and no soothsayer was required to translate the inscription. Everything so far as this issue is concerned depends upon the completion of the Trent Canal. To accomplish that purpose seems to be the great duty of the hour.

◆ ◆ ◆ ◆

Capt. Burnham assured the guests that the canal will be opened from Peterborough of Lake Ontario this year, and that the upper end of it will be finished in two years. He has the promise of the Minister of Railways and Canals that this is the program. The assertion was hailed with more or less skepticism, which is justified by the record. There have been so many pledges unredeemed in connection with this public work that the public may be forgiven if they are inclined to be dubious.

◆ ◆ ◆ ◆

Peterborough really has no grievance against the Department. The Trent Valley has been favored in this matter. The appropriation for the Welland Canal this year has been reduced almost to the vanishing point. That for the Trent Canal was placed at about sixty per cent. of the usual estimates, a generous figure in a war year, when the outlay for all public works has been kept to the lowest possible point. As Magistrate Dumble said last night, the canal was started before he was born over eighty years ago. Perhaps he despairs of living to witness its completion. He makes a point of the fact that no contract for the work on the upper end has ever been let, but Capt. Burnham disposed of this by reminding him that the contract was an easy matter once the money was available.

◆ ◆ ◆ ◆

Let it be clearly understood that the canal will be opened this year, or even next, and Engineer Grant encouraged the citizens to hope to this extent— and the fear which now besets the city with regard to Peterborough's industrial life will be dispelled. Capt. Burnham's heart is in the work; the citizens, too, are in earnest, and the recent visit of a delegation to Ottawa established the fact that the Department is friendly. The outlook, after all, is not really dark.

◆ ◆ ◆ ◆

One thing was noticeable last night—the interest taken in the various subjects brought up for discussion and the earnest spirit that prevailed. The work inaugurated last night is sure to have lasting effect. The organization proposed by Mr. T. F. Matthews is just what the city requires to help out the City Council and to take care of matters outside the jurisdiction of that body. Mayor Duffus certainly deserves all the bouquets that were handed him last night. The entertainment and the one planned for Monday night are something more than mere social functions. The interests of the city, the welfare of Eastern Ontario, are always kept in the foreground.

◆ ◆ ◆ ◆

As the dean of journalism in Peterborough, the address of Mr. F. R. Yokome is certainly entitled to more than passing consideration. No man in Peterborough has ever worked more or hoped more for civic progress than he has, especially with regard for the finer arts that make a city beautiful. He sees, unfortunately, only part of his dreams come true. He has been at banquets before, listened to the roseate oratory of the optimist, only to see everything flatten out as before. It is little wonder that he is inclined to believe that the effects of last night's conference will be ephemeral. But perhaps a better day is dawning. The more virile younger generation may take up the work abandoned by others and Mr. Yokome may yet live to see the City Beautiful that he has worked for so faithfully all these years exist outside of dreams.

◆ ◆ ◆ ◆

Speaking of newspapers, the city can never hope to prosper without the co-operation of the press. The fullest publicity is necessary. We have never been able to understand why it is so often considered essential that questions of public interest be kept out of print. A delegation goes to Toronto or Ottawa, and the first intimation the public get of their trip and their conference is gleaned from some outside journal. This is neither fair to the Peterborough public nor the newspapers and really accomplishes nothing in the way of helping the cause in hand. Why should a delegation on a legitimate mission to either capital city in the Province attempt to cover up their tracks and surround their movements with secrecy like a party of bon vivants on a jaunt to Hull or Montreal?

FOR AN INDUSTRIAL SCHOOL.

AS A VETERAN MEMBER of a Board of Education that has given Peterborough a school system that is second to none in Canada, Mr. V. Eastwood was certainly in a position to speak with authority on the subject of education at last night's civic banquet. The educational system of Ontario is vaunted as one of the best in the world, but Mr. Eastwood placed his finger on the outstanding defective feature when he pointed out the lack of technical training.

The object of education should be to fit the child for the duties of life. Here is where the system scores its great dismal failure. There is no attention paid to particular aptness in the pupil. If he is deficient in one branch of study, he is kept back in all, and the energy of the teacher is wasted in a futile endeavor to develop talents with which he has never been endowed by Nature.

The pupil leaving the public or high school in nine cases out of ten does not know, and his teachers are unable to advise him as to the line of endeavor for which he is best equipped. He may lose years of the best part of his life flitting from one occupation to another until he finds his place.

Build the industrial school which Mr. Eastwood suggests, and all this difficulty will be obviated. The merchants, the manufacturers and all classes of business men will get some return for the money they pay out for the support of the schools. They can find recruits all ready to enter the various industrial ranks, and will not be subject to the loss and annoyance of constantly breaking in new hands, many of whom were never designed by Nature for the work at which they are put.

Establish industrial training, find out what a child is fitted for, and develop him along these lines, and the educational system of which we boast will be little short of perfection.

AFTER THE WAR.

THERE WERE after-the-war pessimists and optimists at the Mayor's banquet last night. Some of the speakers seemed to believe that the world, when peace is assured, will flatten out. Others take the more cheerful view that peace will bring in its wake a period of unexampled prosperity, of which Canada will get a full share.

The money that is being spent in the war is not destroyed. When hostilities are over it will still be in existence, and will be diverted again into legitimate channels of commerce and used to make good the awful waste and destruction due to the war. It may require time for affairs to readjust themselves, but, so far as Canada is concerned, the country that adapted itself so readily to war conditions can recover itself and take up the old lines when the munitions factories and others engaged in the manufacture of war material are no longer required.

VEILS AND SHROUDS.

IT IS A POOR CAUSE if the man who espouses it finds it necessary first of all to conceal his identity by a garb of anonimity. When a man writes a letter to a newspaper on a personal question, he only weakens his case if he fails to sign his name. It does not require a very high order of courage to conceal oneself in the bushes and take a shot at someone in the open.

There may be such a thing as veiled attacks, though it cannot be said that many are made in the editorial columns of a newspaper. The anonymous letter that appeared in a local paper yesterday contains something more than a "veiled attack." It is shrouded—not veiled—by the cowardly resort of adopting a fictitious name, which probably is used with the one object of further concealing the identity of the writer and misleading the public.

A CHEERING SIGN.

ONE OF THE SENTIMENTS most heartily applauded at the banquet last night was voiced by Mr. W. H. Denham when he said that all religious agitation should be dropped, that whether a man was of one denomination or another should no longer be made the subject of useless and mischief-making discussion.

No community can ever hope to prosper so long as the people wrangle over religion, the very element that is supposed to unite them in the bonds of brotherhood and make for communal harmony.

A World Without Papers.

ONTARIO HAS SURPLUS OF OVER MILLION DOLLARS

This is the Best Showing Ever Made in History of Province---Temperance Act Amendments.

TORONTO, Feb. 23.— Ontario's surplus for the past financial year is $1,134,000, the largest in the history of the province, according to the statement made by Hon. T. W. McGarry in presenting the financial budget in the Legislature. The total receipts for the year were $13,840,000 and expenditures $12,706,000. The net debt of the Province has been reduced $810,000.

Big Revenue Increase

Mr. McGarry said quite as remarkable as the surplus of $1,134,000 was an increase of $1,462,000 in revenue. Succession duties alone, $2,333,200 had been received, as compared with $1,721,000 in 1915. A loss of nearly $500,000 in revenue to the province had been caused by the putting into force in Ontario of the Ontario Temperance Act, but this loss had been more than wiped out by increased revenues derived from the amusement tax and automobile tax.

Expenditures

The estimated expenditures for the fiscal year total $11,140,653. Apart from the departmental expenditures it is proposed to spend $300,000 in additional buildings at the Hospital for the Insane at Whitby and $200,000 for courthouses, industrial farms, jails, and registry offices in the districts of Temiskaming, Sudbury, Algoma and Thunder Bay.

Amend Temperance Act

Amendments to the Ontario Temperance Act will be brought down by the government this session but they will not affect the principle of that measure, said Premier Hearst, in reply to Mr. N. W. Rowell. These amendments may be expected at an early date, he said.

WAS IT INDIGESTION OR MURDER?

(Montreal News.)

The death of the American General Funston, officially announced as being due to acute indigestion, may or may not be correctly described. It would be a pity to arouse suspicions of foul play that may be unjustified, but many people will recall the sinister death of a famous British soldier almost immediately after the outbreak of the war. In that case, the officially announced cause of death was heart failure, but there was considerable comment on the fact that he was more closely acquainted with the inner working of the German military machine than any man in the British Army.

The late General Funston was the commander in chief of the American Army on the Mexican border. In the probable event of the Germans stirring up trouble in that quarter it would have been his business to lead the forces of the United States against them. It is recalled that he had had an exceptionally brilliant career, having fought in several American campaigns, besides assisting the Cubans against the Spaniards and contributing largely to end the insurrection in the Philippines. He had been more or less in command of the various expeditions the United States has sent into Mexico during the last two or three years, and his knowledge of the country was exceptional. Now, just at a time when there is a prospect that he will be able to put that knowledge to practical use, he dies of acute indigestion. That is not a disease to which hard-living soldiers, who have been on active service for some time, are supposed to be liable. On the other hand, experience teaches that they are liable to some form of sudden military experience and their country is at war with Germany.

SEVENTEEN YEARS AGO

From The Review of Feb. 23, 1900:

General Cronje's surrender is hourly expected, his position being described as a veritable hell.

Lord Roberts, commander-in-chief of the British army, sent a telegram to Governor-General Minto at Ottawa praising the work of the Canadians in the South African war.

HAROLD BURNS DIES AT OWEN SOUND.

Many citizens and particularly the younger people of the city, will be sorry to learn of the death of Mr. Harold Burns, which occurred at the home of his parents in Owen Sound early this morning. Mr. Burns was one of the organizers of the Belmont Club here and for several years held the position of head clerk with Robert Fair & Co., and later was manager for Beatty's drygoods store at Parry Sound.

Five years ago he married Miss Blyth Buller, daughter of ex-Mayor Buller. He took ill two years ago and received treatment from specialists without being improved sufficiently to return to his position, and recently, at the request of his parents, he went to his home. On Monday he took a turn for the worse and death came at five o'clock this morning.

Deceased is survived by his widow, his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Christopher Burns, of Owen Sound, one brother, J. J. Burns, assistant manager of the Merchants Bank at Owen Sound, and two sisters living in Chicago.

The funeral will be held on Sunday, interment to be made at Meaford, where the family resided before taking up residence at Owen Sound.

STEAM PIPE BURST.

A steam pipe in the biller room of the Bonner-Worth Company burst this afternoon. No one was injured, but a number of the employes were allowed to go home, pending repairs.

How to avoid Operations

These Three Women Tell How They Escaped the Dreadful Ordeal of Surgical Operations.

Hospitals are great and necessary institutions, but they should be the last resort for women who suffer with ills peculiar to their sex. Many letters on file in the Pinkham Laboratory at Lynn, Mass., prove that a great number of women after they have been recommended to submit to an operation have been made well by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. Here are three such letters. All sick women should read them.

Marinette, Wis.—"I went to the doctor and he told me I must have an operation for a female trouble, and I hated to have it done as I had been married only a short time. I would have terrible pains and my hands and feet were cold all the time. I took Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and was cured, and I feel better in every way. I give you permission to publish my name because I am so thankful that I feel well again." —Mrs. FRED BEHNKE, Marinette, Wis.

Detroit, Mich.—"When I first took Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound I was so run down with female troubles that I could not do anything, and our doctor said I would have to undergo an operation. I could hardly walk without help so when I read about the Vegetable Compound and what it had done for others I thought I would try it. I got a bottle of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and a package of Lydia E. Pinkham's Sanative Wash and used them according to directions. They helped me and today I am able to do all my work and I am well." —Mrs. THOS. DWYER, 989 Milwaukee Ave., East, Detroit, Mich.

Bellevue, Pa.—"I suffered more than tongue can tell with terrible bearing down pains and inflammation. I tried several doctors and they all told me the same story, that I never could get well without an operation and I just dreaded the thought of that. I also tried a good many other medicines that were recommended to me and none of them helped me until a friend advised me to give Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound a trial. The first bottle helped, I kept taking it and now I don't know what it is to be sick any more and I am picking up in weight. I am 20 years old and weigh 145 pounds. It will be the greatest pleasure to me if I can have the opportunity to recommend it to any other suffering woman."—Miss IRENE FROELICHER, 1923 Manhattan St., North Side, Bellevue, Pa.

If you would like special advice write to Lydia E. Pinkham Med. Co. (confidential), Lynn, Mass. Your letter will be opened, read and answered by a woman and held in strict confidence.

Ald. Smith has the self-satisfied air of the man who possesses a good razor and knows how to keep it in trim and use it. Every day he presents a well-shaved countenance to the world and is able to look humanity in the face with an assurance never worked up by the man careless as to the tonsorial part of his toilet.

Ald. Smith has the true Hibernian spirit and would desert his meat and drink any day to take part in an argument, in which, thanks to Nature's lavish gifts, he is able—and then some—to hold his own. Speech comes easy to him, but he is a worker as well as a fluent talker. The East Ward will miss nothing that energetic effort can secure for it. Let Ald. Smith once make up his mind and set out to get something for his constituents and he is going to land it or go to the bottom with it.

"Astonishing how my came back," says Mr. Inman, a Winnipeg business man, cured by Dr. Cassell's Tablets.

"It was astonishing how [illegible] strength and fitness came back," says Mr. G. C. Mr. Inman continues: "It is about [illegible] years now since I first used Dr. Cassell's Tablets. I was terribly run down and [illegible]. Sometimes I [illegible] I should have to [illegible] off altogether, [illegible] work [illegible] effort to me, I ate little. I had no appetite, and I suffered if I forced myself to eat. "My [illegible] of course were in a bad way, and my sleep very [illegible]. Everything [illegible] and bright." [illegible], pointed to a nervous breakdown. It was then a friend told me about Dr. Cassell's Tablets, and I got some to try. The first result [illegible] that I [illegible] and then my [illegible] appetite improved. It was really astonishing how my strength and fitness came back. "I may add that some time ago my mother was very ill with pernicious anaemia. I urged her to take Dr. Cassell's Tablets, but she would not, so I crushed them down and gave them in food without her knowing. She was confined to bed before she had the Tablets, and now is about again.

Mr. Inman is now in England, having had to return there some little time ago to take control of the well-known firm of A. W. Inman and Son, Printers and Publishers, Leeds. Letters will reach him there.

BEFORE ADAM

By JACK LONDON

Copyright, 1907, by the MacMillan company.

The fire around which they sat was especially attractive. Lop Ear and I sat for hours watching the flames and smoke. It was most fascinating when fresh fuel was thrown on and showers of sparks were flying upward. I wanted to come closer and look at the fire, but there was no way. We were crouching in the forks of a tree on the edge of the open space, and we did not dare run the risk of being discovered.

The Fire Men squatted around the fire and slept with their heads bowed forward on their knees. They did not sleep soundly. Their ears twitched in their sleep, and they were restless. Every little while one or another got up and threw more wood upon the fire. About the circle of light in the forest, in the darkness beyond, roamed hunting animals. Lop Ear and I could tell them by their sounds. There were wild dogs and a hyena, and for a time there were great yelping and snarling that awakened on the instant the whole circle of sleeping Fire Men.

Once a lion and a lioness stood beneath our tree and gazed out with bristling hair and blinking eyes. The lion licked his chops and was nervous with eagerness, as if he wanted to go forward and make a meal. But the lioness was more cautious. It was she that discovered us, and the pair stood and looked up at us silently, with twitching, scenting nostrils. Then they growled, looked once again at the fire and turned away into the forest.

For a much longer time Lop Ear and I remained and watched. Now and again we could hear the crashing of heavy bodies in the thickets and underbrush, and from the darkness of the other side, across the circle, we could see eyes gleaming in the firelight. In the distance we heard a lion roar, and from far off came the scream of some stricken animal splashing and floundering in a drinking place. Also from the river came a great grunting of rhinoceroses.

In the morning, after having had our sleep, we crept back to the fire. It was still smoldering, and the Fire Men were gone. We made a circle through the forest to make sure, and then we ran to the fire. I wanted to see what it was like, and between thumb and finger I picked up a glowing coal. My cry of pain and fear as I dropped it stampeded Lop Ear into the trees, and his flight frightened me after him.

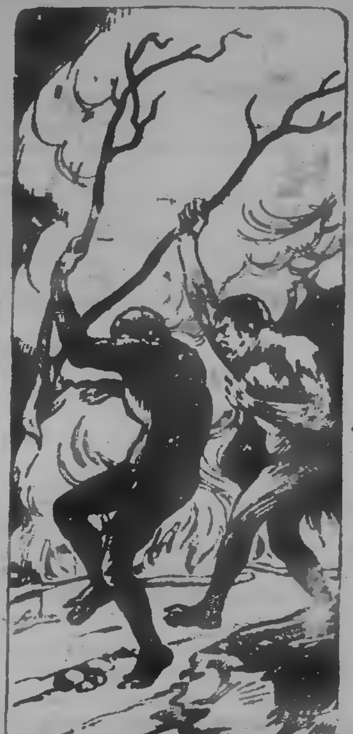
The next time we came back more cautiously, and we avoided the glowing coals. We fell to imitating the fire men. We squatted down by the fire and, with heads bent forward on our knees, made believe to sleep. Then we mimicked their speech, talking to each other in their fashion and making a great gibberish. I remembered seeing the wizened old hunter poke the fire with a stick. I poked the fire with a stick, turning up masses of live coals and clouds of white ashes. This was great sport, and soon we were coated white with the ashes.

It was inevitable that we should imitate the fire men in replenishing the fire. We tried it first with small pieces of wood. It was a success. The wood flamed up and crackled, and we danced and gibbered with delight. Then we began to throw on larger pieces of wood. We put on more and more until we had a mighty fire. We dashed excitedly back and forth, dragging dead limbs and branches from out the forest. The flames soared higher and higher, and the smoke column out towered the trees. There was a tremendous snapping and crackling and roaring. It was the most monumental work we had ever effected with our hands, and we were proud of it. We, too, were fire men, we thought, as we danced there, white gnomes in the conflagration.

The dried grass and underbrush caught fire, but we did not notice it. Suddenly a great tree on the edge of the open space burst into flames. We looked at it with startled eyes. The heat of it drove us back. Another tree caught, and another, and then half a dozen. We were frightened. The monster had broken loose. We crouched down in fear, while the fire ate around the circle and hemmed us in. Into Lop Ear's eyes came the plaintive look that always accompanied incomprehension, and I know that in my eyes must have been the same look. We huddled, with our arms around each other, until the heat began to reach us and the odor of burning hair was in our nostrils. Then we made a dash of it and fled away westward through the forest, looking back and laughing as we ran.

By the middle of the day we came to a neck of land made, as we afterward discovered, by a great curve of the river that almost completed a circle. Right across the neck lay bunched several low and partly wooded hills. Over these we climbed, looking backward at the forest which had become a sea of flame that swept eastward before a rising wind. We continued to the west, following the river bank, and before we knew it we were in the midst of the abiding place of the Fire People.

This abiding place was a splendid strategic selection. It was a peninsula, protected on three sides by the curving river. On only one side was it accessible by land. This was the narrow neck of the peninsula, and here the several low hills were a natural obstacle. Practically isolated from the rest of the world, the Fire People must have here lived and prospered for a long time. In fact, I think it was their prosperity that was responsible for the subsequent migration that wrought such calamity upon the folk. The Fire People must have increased in numbers until they pressed uncomfortably against the bounds of their habitat. They were expanding, and in the course of their expanding they drove the folk before them and settled down themselves in the caves and occupied the territory that we had occupied.



We, Too, Were Fire Men, We Thought, as We Danced There.

But Lop Ear and I little dreamed of all this when we found ourselves in the Fire People's stronghold. We had but one idea and that was to get away, though we could not forbear humoring our curiosity by peeping out upon the village. For the first time we saw the women and children of the Fire People. The latter ran for the most part naked, though the former wore skins of wild animals.

The Fire People, like ourselves, lived in caves. The open space in front of the caves sloped down to the river and in the open space burned many small fires. But whether or not the Fire People cooked their food, I do not know. Lop Ear and I did not see them cook. Yet it is my opinion they surely must have performed some sort of rude cookery. Like us, they carried water in gourds from the river. There was much coming and going and loud cries made by the women and children. The latter played about and cut up antics quite in the same way as did the children of the folk, and they more nearly resembled the children of the folk than did the grown Fire People resemble the grown folk.

Lop Ear and I did not linger long. We saw some of the part grown boys shooting with bow and arrow, and we sneaked back into the thicker forest and made our way to the river. And there we found a catamaran, a real catamaran, one evidently made by some fire man. The two logs were small and straight and were lashed together by means of tough roots and crosspieces of wood.

This time the idea occurred simultaneously to us. We were trying to escape out of the Fire People's territory. What better way than by crossing the river on these logs? We climbed on board and shoved off. A sudden something gripped the catamaran and flung it downstream violently against the bank. The abrupt stoppage almost whipped us off into the water. The catamaran was tied to a tree by a rope of twisted root. This we untied before shoving off again.

Here's a menu which will not add an ounce of flesh to the plump woman—

Boiled fish.
Roast mutton, sauce vinaigrette.
Cauliflower.
Sliced peaches or stewed peaches.
Black coffee, or clear tea.

There is plenty of nourishment in this meal, yet no fat. Starches like potatoes, gravy, fat soup, cream, sugar, are not included at all, the bread to be eaten with the meal is gluten bread, which is not fattening, and sweetening for coffee is saccharine, not sugar.

A good luncheon for the woman who wants to reduce would be—

Sliced cold meat
Stuffed olives
Fruit salad.
And all the gluten bread desired.

Of course butter is not included in any way in a course of diet that is to reduce, for butter is pure fat.

A woman who weighs 190 pounds and who is trying to reduce by taking this scientific diet along with Turkish baths and exercise, complains that she feels hungry between meals. Eating little and often tends to fatten, yet when the system demands food, it is best to give it. An apple eaten between times will not hurt.

Breakfast

Tomato Toast—Boil one cup of tomatoes and half a cup of milk. Thicken with a little dissolved flour and pour over slices of buttered toast.

Virginia Ham — Soak the ham four hours in cold water. Drain, boil until the skin can be removed. Dot with peanut butter, stick well with cloves, and places in a dripping pan fat side down. Add more peanut butter and bake slowly two or three hours. Serve with a sauce made of the drippings from the pan. The peanut butter gives a flavor something like the peanut fed hogs of West Virginia.

Supper

Chocolate Sandwiches — Slightly butter thin slices of white bread and trim off the crusts. Grate bitter chocolate and sweeten to taste. Melt in a small piece of butter and add the chocolate to it. Take from the fire and cool. Moisten with a little cream and spread between slices of bread.

Mock Lobster Salad— Boil eight potatoes without peeling, cool and mash. Chop half a head of lettuce and a few sprigs of parsley. Add two tablespoons of tomato catsup and add to the potato. Chill and serve with a boiled dressing.

HOW TO TELL A LADY

Observe now she treats the clerks who wait on her.

I had a great surprise once upon a time. I met a casual acquaintance from our town and at her request did a few errands with her while waiting for our train.

She is a woman who is delightful to meet; she has excellent taste in her home and her clothes, and charming manners. In fact she has all the appearance of being a lady.

But she isn't one.

And this is how I know.

She lost all her charm the minute she spoke to the clerks. The usually pleasant manner became cold and sharply impersonal.

She Interrupted a Busy Clerk.

Again, she frequently broke in on a conversation between a clerk and a customer.

Only once did she say, "Thank you," after a clerk had served her, though several spent some time in the process.

You, reader friends, who try to be decent to clerks sometimes get out of patience when they seem disobliging and irritable.

But is it any wonder that their patience wears out when one thinks how often they have to deal with women of the class I described, women who think they demonstrate their superiority by being discourteous to those who serve?

Perhaps you think there are not many such women.

An Almost Inconceivable Incident.

I am afraid there are — and worse.

Let me tell you a little incident which a clerk related to me. A question about her being tired came up. "I try to sit down," she said, "but some of the customers can't bear to see us sitting down."

I said I could hardly believe that.

Her eyes blazed. "A woman and her daughter were in the other day," she said, "and I was sitting down for a minute. The woman picked me out from the rest and bore down on me, it made her so mad to see me sitting down. "Busy?" she said. Of course, I sprang up and asked if there was anything I could show her.

She Couldn't Bear to See the Clerk Sitting Down.

"'Yes,' she said 'we want to look at suits and we want to try them on.' 'Oh, mother,' said her daughter, 'we don't want to try them on today.' 'Yes, we do,' she said; 'she needs the exercise.'"

Think of it.

Doesn't it make your blood boil?

Then try not to blame the next clerk whose temper seems frayed. Remember she may have just had to deal with a woman like that.

OATMEAL BATHS

Make a paste of plain oatmeal (Scotch oatmeal is best), with warm water, and rub the paste on your face. Allow it to remain on 20 to 30 minutes. Then wash it off in tepid water, to which a little toilet water has been added.

You will find it has given a fresh, rested look and smoothens your skin.

NUMBER OF PORTIONS

In marketing and cooking economy is effected by knowing into just how many portions a dish will divide. For instance, a quart of soup will serve four or five. By looking over the ingredients of the various soups one can easily determine how many each will serve. A four-pound fish (weighed with the head) would make six or seven portions. A twelve-pound ham would not yield choice portions for twenty-five, but might be made to answer for that number. A fifteen pound roast of beef (rib) weighing about six pounds will make three meals or more for a family of five.

PTOMAINE POISONING WATCH OUT FOR IT

Highly nitrogenous foods decompose very rapidly under the influence of heat and dampness and this produces the dangerous and often fatal ptomaine. Cases have occurred from drinking milk which was just at the turning point. Sour milk can be used as a tonic and is perfectly wholesome. Eggs and milk cooked together, as in the case of custards, and allowed to remain over night have been known to be responsible for fatal ptomaine poisoning. Cream puffs and cakes filled with cream which are exposed in a bakery window for any length of time are dangerous and have caused deaths. About 80 per cent. of these cases are children who spend their pennies after school. Cottage cheese is also unsafe as there is no actual way to ascertain its age.

Meats should be watched very carefully as they are often exposed to several different temperatures before finally used. The animal is killed and the different portions, after the dressing process, hung up in cold storage. It is then sent to the whole change of temperature. The butcher hangs it up in his small refrigerator, where it is allowed to stay for some days. Then the housewife buys her roast and, in many cases, leaves it on the kitchen table for some time before it is cooked. With these changes of temperature the meat has a chance to develop dangerous bacteria. Chickens prepared the day before they are cooked should be soaked in water and immediately placed in the ice box, where they will keep sweet. A good plan is to have small pieces of charcoal to place in the carcasses over night.

SOFTENING FLANNELS

A little glycerine added to the water in which baby flannels are washed will soften them.

Make a strong lather of very hot water and a good white soap and when lukewarm wash the flannels out but do not rub soap directly on the flannels. To whiten flannels, make a solution of 1 1-2 pounds shaved white soap, one-third quart ammonia and 12 gallons of water.

Washing flannel in this will impart a whiteness, even when quite yellow. Never allow flannels to soak or stand, but shake well and dry immediately.

BRAN BREAD

Two cups flour, 1 tablespoon sugar, 1 teaspoon salt, 3 teaspoons baking powder, 2 cups bran, 1 tablespoon lard, 1 egg yolk, 1 cup milk or water.

TO CLARIFY BACON FAT.

Save all bacon fat, sausage fat and all the drippings from roasts with the fat that comes off soups; put all into an earthenware pot with about twice as much cold water; heat and let boil for five minutes. Set away to form a cake of fat. Next day remove the cake of fat and carefully scrape off all the settlings, change the water and put fat back; boil up again and let stand to firm a cake of fat the second time. Now put the fat into an iron kettle without water; melt up, and slice in a raw potato, cut into very thin slices; when potato gets brown turn the fat into a lard pail and it will be pure and fit to use for any cooking purposes.

VANILLA SNAPS

Cream well together 1 1-4 cupfuls of butter and the same amount of sugar. Add three eggs well beaten, then stir in alternately one-half of a cupful of milk and 3 1-4 cupfuls of sifted flour. Flavor with two teaspoonsful of vanilla, beat for a moment put in a pastry bag and press out in rings on greased baking sheets. Bake in a moderate oven.

WORTH REMEMBERING.

When colored clothing is stained with mud, let it dry and brush out all you can. Then apply mixture of salt and flour, letting it remain on several hours; then brush off.

Perspiration stains should be sponged with white vinegar. Then touched lightly with ammonia to restore color.

Ice cream stains should be sponged with gasoline or chloroform.

To whiten and soften the hands use lemon juice and glycerine—two-thirds glycerine, one-third lemon juice. Rub in after washing the hands.

If your pet kitten has fleas, rub coat with a little camphor.

Never take a cold bath when you are fatigued, and never stay in a hot bath after you begin to feel tired. Twenty minutes is long enough for any bath.

An apple cut in half and laid in the bread box will keep the bread fresh.

Potatoes to be $5 a Bag

Hamilton commission men say that within a week potatoes will bring $5 a bag. They are now selling at $3.75. It is claimed that the scarcity of seed potatoes will not permit of the farmers planting an average crop, which will make the situation even worse next year. Onions too, are in the millionaire class. A year ago they sold at a cent a pound. Now they command five to six dollars a bag, and are scarce even at that price.

ARREST OF CITIZEN CASE OF MISTAKEN IDENTITY

Belleville Man Pointed Out Innocent Local Resident to Police Who Put Him Through Third Degree.

The Peterborough Creamery received a telephone order from Belleville for a crate of butter and sent the goods. No trace of the man who received the shipment, and who failed to pay for it, could be found. A Peterborough resident was arrested on suspicion and submitted to the third degree by the police officers. It turned out to be a case of mistaken identity, and the victim of the false arrest, honorably discharged, makes the following statement of the affair in his own behalf:

Editor Review: Allow me a space in your paper. I want to ask the Police Commissioners and the aldermen of this city to imagine themselves in my place on Friday, Feb. 16, also any citizen to be in a like position. A law-abiding citizen to be arrested, put in prison, given no opportunity to make an explanation, and every time I answered one of the questions asked of me, was told by the Chief of Police and detective that I was lying, and was advised by the Chief that my signature was at the express office, and that my lies would be looked after by the court; then to be searched; everything removed from my pockets, put into a cell (which had closed windows) and stifled by heat from a radiator.

Perhaps I had better give the readers an explanation of this scandalous affair. On Dec. 13 a man telephones from Belleville to Mr. Gillespie of Peterborough Creamery to ship a quantity of butter. It is said that Mr. Gillespie shipped butter to Belleville, neglecting to demand cash on delivery. When the money was not forthcoming a search to find the accused began. Our Chief, for some unknown reason, has picked me out from the entire population of the Dominion of Canada, as being the guilty person. He sent for a man from Belleville to identify me, placed him in Mr. Hogan's hotel, and after remaining some hours he is supposed to have returned to the police and told them I was the man, even though he had never seen me in his life and I had never been by Hogan's that day. When going to town after dinner Mr. Meagher arrested me. This man from Belleville whose work it was to identify me, accompanied Mr. Meagher. Now, Mr. Editor, to show you what a blundering crowd the Chief and his assistants are, the day that I was charged with being in Belleville, I was actually summoned and appeared in the police court to give evidence.

Now, sir, when I asked who this villain was that came from Belleville, the answer I received was that he was a God-fearing man, and with a slur from the officer that he knew his business.

Even like a criminal, my fingers were examined. When two of my relatives called to find out the trouble they were curtly refused an interview with me. Only by a stroke of good luck was word given to a friend, so that I was bailed out that night. I thought if God were looking down on this ridiculous state of affairs in a civilised city like Peterborough (?) that He would turn His head away.

Mr. Editor, if a report came out that a man received such treatment in Germany the press would urge the young men, even more, to enlist, and try and put down such tyrannical rule. Now, all I want is that the citizens of Peterborough will see that I receive justice in this case.

THE VICTIM.

PETERBOROUGH INDUSTRIAL

der the hydro system, and generally it was $1.50 per h.p. less than before. Peterborough industries were costing the city only 56-100 of a mill each year, and were the best in the Dominion.

Foster Your Industries

Mr. W. H. Denham advised the city council to pay more attention to other matters than keeping down the rate. Most of it was out of their control, so why waste time on it? The fire department, police, and schools must all be kept up. The assessment should be readjusted on the basis of local improvements made in the last few years. He thought that with an effort the cost of power could be reduced in Peterborough by the conservation of the water of the Trent Valley. He felt that the city should own the city railway and gas plant, particularly as they were paying investments. He advised the City Council to foster their industries and took a neat slam at last year's council over the Mill St. transfer, in which the Quaker Oats Co. was interested. He was glad to see that the citizens were taking an interest in the matter and hoped for other meetings.

Mr. F. R. Yokome advocated drives for the city and the general improvement of the streets of the city.

Mr. V. Eastwood, chairman of the Board of Education, pointed out the necessity for $100,000 for a technical and manual training school and advocated a change in the debenture system. An instalment serial debenture was better than a sinking fund one. It saved the city money.

Civic Improvement

Ald. Stratton said there were many ways of improving the city, and he would start by improving the general appearance of the city—the parks, the street railway, police force, fire department and the finances. The use of the vacant lots as vegetable gardens would supply half the city's demand. The extension of the street railway to Lakefield and Chemong and even to the station of the proposed railway on Stoney Lake was advocated. The government would furnish the money and give the city a chance to pay for it later. The city's financial condition and the advantages of sinking fund bonds were dwelt on. The general debenture debt of the city was $2,341,385.90. The sinking fund accumulation was $520,940.03. The assessment of the city was $11,564,330. The assessment rose 40 per cent. in eight years. The property exempt in the city was assessed at $2,735,770. He figured that with a surplus of $17,000 left over from last year, the rate could be kept to 28 mills, the same as last year.

Ald. Dobbin gave an outline of the government's position with the town in reference to the street railway. Let the city propose the extensions and the government make them. Then the city can take it over and have 40 years to finance it.

Mr. J. J. Hartley, president of the Trades and Labor Council, was for a united effort to keep up the progress of the city.

Mr. Thos. Barrie, president of the Retail Merchants Association, would encourage new industries and have a new system of assessment revision and advocated a free market.

Mr. J. W. Meyers hoped to see the Quaker Oats Co. rebuild and thought the city should do everything in its power to induce them to do so, and he advocated immediate action.

Mr. C. Pennefather was anxious that no stone be left unturned to get the Quaker Oats mill rebuilt.

Judge Huycke was greatly impressed with the earnestness and business of the gathering. He hoped that immediate action would be taken to secure the Quaker Oats Co. to rebuild.

The singing of the National Anthem closed a very instructive evening.

Committee Members

Mayor Duffus appointed Messrs. T. F. Matthews and W. H. Denham as two of the committee and will appoint the others at the gathering of the younger men on Monday night.

SPORTING NEWS

GEORGE STREET TEAM WON CHAMPIONSHIP

Mark Street Scored 14 Goals Against Knox Seven.

The team representing George St. Church in the Junior Church Hockey League, won the league championship last night at Brock St. rink by defeating Trinity-St. Andrew's by a score of 9 to 2, after leading the first two periods by 5-1 and 6-1 respectively. The score does not indicate the play as the Methodists had to fight all along the way, the Trinity-St. Andrews squad being strong in the attack. Often, they had the George St. team corralled at their own nets and it was the good work of W. Rutherford in goal that prevented tallies.

After the game Rev. R. G. Peever took the team to the Boston Cafe and entertained the players to a supper.

The teams:—

George St.—Goal, W. Rutherford; defence, Peever and Elliott; rover, Helson; centre, F. Rutherford; wings Graham and Head.

Trinity-St. Andrews—Goal, Austin; defence, English and Henry; rover, S. Henry, centre, Eaton; wings, Batten and Tuphope.

The second game, between Tom Henry's youngsters from Mark St. Church and the Knox Presbyterian seven was a great scoring bee for the Easterners, who won out by the lop-sided score of 14 to 1. This score indicates the performance very nicely for after the first period, when the count stood 3 to 0, the Mark St. team were head and shoulders above the Scotchmen.

The teams:—

Knox—Goal, Mahood; defence, Rehill and Doughty; rover, Martin; centre, Jackson; wings, Clark and Wright.

Referee—Pte. Jack Adams.

CONSOLATION HONORS FOR SAM RAY'S RINK

Win by Four Shots in Final With Napanee.

Skip Sam Ray's rink won the consolation finals of the open bonspiel at the rink last evening, finishing four shots up against the Maybee rink of Napanee after a grand game of curling that tested the wits and skill of the players to the limit. On the last end Maybee was one shot down, and, had he been successful in the play he anticipated, would have tied the score and forced an extra end.

After it was all over there was no more delighted curler in the rink than Sam Ray. In replying on behalf of his rink, when Mr. George Giroux made the presentation of the prizes, Mr. Ray jocularly remarked that he had disproved the popular expression that "the old men can't come back."

Skip Maybee replied for his rink and said that Napanee players would be back again next season for the bonspiel.

W. M. Lang won the consolation honors of the 1916 bonspiel in the finals with Hare of Oshawa, and W. H. Taylor won the primary against J. E. A. Fitzgerald.

The consolation final rinks and scores were:

Peterborough	Napanee

G. Boucher	J. B. Allison
W. H. Taylor	W. A. Daly
S. Ray	C. J. Maybee

SOME DOPE FOR THE SOLDIERS

ARE SIZED UP AS A TEAM OF INDIVIDUAL STARS.

Says the Hamilton Herald: Some of the critics down east like Peterborough's chances for the championship, but it is learned from an authoritative source that the Soldiers depend largely on individual play to get them their goals. Little or no combination play is attempted. A team of this kind will find it hard trimming either London or Hamilton, as both these teams resort to a heap of team play.

"Sometimes," replied Mr. Dustin Stax, "but there isn't so much use of it unless you get the information well in advance."

HAMILTON TEAM IS CONFIDENT

WILL WIN ROUND WITH THE LONDONERS TONIGHT.

HAMILTON, Feb. 23.—There is an air of confidence in the H.H.C. camp today. The boys all came out of Tuesday night's game in London in good shape and they are quite confident that they can overcome the Cockneys' single goal lead in the return game at the local arena tonight.

Whether there will be any changes in the local line-up other than the return of Harold Parker to the game is not yet definitely decided on.

HOCKEY

Ken Crane, who was a member of the champion Toronto Riverside team last year, and who is living in Windsor, helped his old teammates to defeat Detroit twice. It was Crane's first time on skates since last year.

This absence of minor offences against morality seems to us to be due to the absence of popular access to strong drink, one great cause of crime, through the effects of the prohibition enactment now in force.

RED ROSE TEA is good tea

Enemies of Tea

If tea is left open near oranges, soap, spices, matches, etc., the tea will take on the flavor of any of these articles.

In fact, tea absorbs odors as readily as does butter. This is because of the high temperature at which it is "fired" during the drying process, which makes the tea very sensitive. It thus quickly loses flavor and strength, and goes "flat" if left exposed to odors, dust or air.

To Protect the Consumer

When you buy a package of Red Rose Tea at your grocer's you get the benefit of the great care we take to protect the consumer, as the sealed package is an armor that keeps out odors, dust and air. It keeps the tea pure, clean, fresh and full strength.

The price printed on the package protects you against overcharge. It is the lowest price for which a tea of Red Rose quality can be sold—a price which allows the grocer only a fair profit.

You will enjoy the distinctive flavor, rich strength and splendid economy of Red Rose Tea. TRY A PACKAGE.

EX-ALD. EDGAR'S CLAUSE OUT OF PRIVATE BILL

HEALTH ACT PROVIDES FOR ASSISTANCE TO PROPERTY OWNERS.

TO INSTAL PLUMBING.

Ex-Ald. Edgar's pet scheme for installing plumbing on the instalment plan did not meet with the approval of the Committee of the Whole last night. The clause was ordered to be taken from the city's private bill now before the Legislature.

The Utilities Commission wrote the committee, enclosing a copy of a report by their solicitor, who thought the Public Health Act covered the scheme sufficiently. It gives the Board of Health power to instal sanitary plumbing when they think it necessary, and if the owner is not in a position to pay for it, then the cost is paid by the municipality and collected in five annual instalments at the same time as the taxes, and appears as a first lien against the premises.

Some of the aldermen thought that with the present cost of pluming very high it would be a good idea to stretch the payments over a period of ten years.

LIBERALS STAND NO CHANCE TO HOLD ON TO SEAT IN PROVINCIAL LEGISLATURE

NOW BELIEVED TO HAVE DIED IN THE FIGHT

FOUR LOCAL MEN WHO HAD A PART IN ACTIONS OF LAST JUNE.

ALL MOUNTED RIFLES.

Official notifications from Ottawa this morning state that four Peterborough soldiers previously reported missing after the fighting in the early part of June of last year, are now believed to have been killed in action.

The soldiers are:

Pte. Joseph M. Saunders, Mounted Rifles.
Pte. Robert B. Smith, Mounted Rifles
Pte. Leonard Blake, Mounted Rifles
Pte. Ira Bradley, Mounted Rifles.

GUNNER HOLLY HULL
Son of Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Hill, Union street, who is in the Toronto Convalescent Home, and will shortly return to the city. He was severely wounded at the front, having enlisted in the 33rd Battery.

Possession and Transmission

"The glory which Thou gavest me I have given them—John. 17:22.

The above is one of the words of Jesus. It indicates two kinds of glory; the glory of possession and the glory of transmission The first is in a way fictitious, the second real.

The dark lantern has a light within. It keeps its radiance to itself. Suddenly a slide is moved. Out pours a flood of light. The real glory of the lantern is the glory of transmission.

The telephone has a little film called the transmitter. It receives the message but does not keep it. Any empty vessel can do that. Out the vibrations go to be received a thousand miles away. Transmission is the glory of the telephone.

A man like Dr. Grenfell goes to college or sits at the feet of Jesus. His real glory is not in getting an education or in attaining self-mastery. It is rather in giving to his fellows a gem of scholarship or a lift toward holiness.

Every human life is a receiver. Nature, the Bible and humanity are constantly giving their messages to it. It does not always pass them on and hence much of its failure. There never was a truer word than that of Joaquin Miller: "All that you can hold in your cold dead hand is what you have given away." The world today lays stress upon the glory of possession. Tomorrow it will emphasize the glory of transmission. The change will mark the passing of unrest from the heart of discord from the home, of impotence from the church and of warfare from the world.

Have you sent to The Review or The Examiner your mite for Dr. Grenfell's Mission? Do it at once and convert a glory of possession into a glory of transmission.

"If any little word of mine
May make a life the brighter,
If any little song of mine
May make a heart the lighter;
God help me speak the little word
And take my bit of singing,
And drop it in some lonely vale
To set the echoes ringing."

Hearst Government is Stronger Than Ever And All Criticism is Silenced---Record in Finance.

WHAT VOTES FOR WOMEN MEANS

What chance have the Liberals in West Peterborough to hold the prize they captured three years ago when Mr. G. A. Gillespie was elected to the Legislature? Will the popularity and the probity of Mr. Gillespie be sufficient to carry him successfully through another election? The signs of the times all point to the contrary. In West Peterborough as well as throughout the province generally, the Hearst Government is stronger, the party more in public favor, than it was even in the days when the late Sir James Whitney was in the heyday of his success.

The Ontario Temperance Act alone was sufficient to strengthen a government that took its life in its hands when it passed the measure. It was a new phase of Canadian politics, this dealing with a public question on its merits and ignoring anything like party expediency.

LIBERALS CLAIM CREDIT.

The very fact that the Liberals are attempting to appropriate the credit for the war-time temperance measure is the best assurance of its popularity. The record of the Opposition is, however, against this assumption of honor. To go no further back than the election of 1914, Mr. Rowell and his followers came out of that contest battered and scarred, with a numerical strength that was insignificant compared to the members on the Government side of the House. That such a remnant of a once great party should be able to force the Government into taking any particular stand is a claim too absurd to be seriously considered.

NICKEL QUESTION SETTLED.

One of the trump cards played by the Opposition since the adoption of the Ontario Temperance Act has been the nickel question, and this has failed them They claimed that Ontario nickel, refined in the United States, was being shipped to the munitions factories of Germany. There was no more possibility of this being done than there was for any foodstuffs from Canada finding their way vai the United States to an enemy's country through the blockade established by the British Navy. Canadian nickel, so far as exportation to Germany was concerned, was in exactly the same class as Canadian flour or beef.

The argument that if nickel were refined at home there would be no chance for it to reach Germany was specious. That would really have made no difference any more than it would have made a difference whether Canadian wheat is ground at home or abroad. The safeguard in all these cases was not any legislation that Canada could adopt, but the British blockade.

FINANCES AND WOMEN'S VOTES.

Ontario, at the end of the third financial year of the war, is able to show the largest serplus in the history of the Province. It is as good as settled that the women of Ontario are to be granted the legislative and municipal franchise on the same terms as men, and this reform, this response to a popular demand, cannot fail to further strengthen a Government that has already so many good works to its credit.

The question now arises whether, if women really get the vote, they are to be placed on the same footing as men in all respects. Is she to be made to assume all the responsibilities as well as the privileges of citizenship? Will she be required to pay poll tax, to put in statute labor or provide a substitute; can she sit as a member of the Legislature, and is she to be called upon to do jury duty? These are all questions to be decided. Amendments to the existing statutes will be necessary to effect such changes, and the wording of the law which specifies male persons must be changed. No one need be surprised if the Ontario Legislature adopts the example of some of the Western States and goes the full length in this matter. In British Columbia there is at present an agitation in progress to elect a woman to the Legislature, and that case will be watched with interest from every part of the Dominion.

WOMEN IN CONVENTIONS.

The right of women to sit as delegates in a party convention to nominate candidates for the Legislature is another moot matter. This will depend upon the various political organizations, but the association that first admits women as delegates will certainly establish an interesting precedent. There is already a movement in local circles to introduce such an innovation.

WOMEN AND CANNED GOODS.

If women had a direct part in the making of the laws, certain matters now neglected would be sure to receive attention. The price of foodstuffs would be one of these. The public are being victimized these days beyond all question, getting it both coming and going. The canners of corn and tomatoes are the chief of offenders in this regard. The price of a can of either of these commodities has not only gone up, but the contents are limited. Some of the cans are only two-thirds filled, and this in itself means an increase in cost of over thirty-three per cent. The masculine legislator, if he is aware of conditions, does nothing about it, preferring to shift all household responsibilities upon his wife or daughters. Women would, if given seats in our legislative halls, devote their attention especially to all matters associated with social life and the home.

TWENTY PER CENT INCREASE IN TAX

Germany's Finance Minister Says the Next Budget Picture Will Be Serious

STILL PUTTING UP BLUFF

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

LONDON, February 24.—A Reuter despatch from Amsterdam says taxation in Germany has been increased twenty per cent. in the budget presented yesterday by the finance minister, who announced a new war credit of fifteen billion marks. The war expenditure of the world, the finance minister said, exceeded three hundred billion marks, and not more than one hundred billion was Germany's share. The cost in the next few months would not relax, and therefore he asked for a war credit of fifteen billion marks.

Next month Germany must issue another war loan, and this budget picture was certainly serious. But Germany's economic life gave no reason to look to the future less confidently than hitherto. "Against the demands of our enemies for reparation we shall be able to put the word indemnity."

IS SLATED FOR SUSPENSION

DEFECTIVE WORK PASSED BY PLUMBING INSPECTOR THOMPSON!

Plumbing Inspector Peter Thompson is in the limelight again and is slated for suspension. The following resolution was passed at a meeting of the committee of the whole council last night.

Moved by Ald. Dobbin, seconded by Ald. Duncan—

That a complaint is made by Mr. Edward Manning, 710 George St., that work in connection with the installing of sewage connection and plumbing in his house is insufficient and that the same was properly passed as sufficient and correct by the plumbing inspector, that the official be suspended from both duties and salary until this complaint is investigated and a report satisfactory to the owner and property committee is submitted.

RESIGNATION OF LT. COL. BEATTIE

AS MINISTER AT COBOURG PRESBYTERIAN CHURCH.

COBOURG, Feb. 24—Lt.-Col. Wm. Beattie, C.M.G., senior chaplain of the 2nd Canadian Division, who was pastor of Cobourg Presbyterian Church before going overseas, has handed in his resignation to the Peterborough Presbytery as pastor of the church. Lt.-Col. Beattie believes on account of his absence from here for such a period the church should have a regularly appointed pastor, and it is for this reason he has resigned, as he feels he should either relinquish his chaplaincy in France or return here. It is hardly likely the resignation will be accepted, as when Lt.-Col. Beatie went overseas he was given leave of absence by the church for the duration of the war.

PETERBOROUGH, SATURDAY, FEBRUARY 24, 1917

MORE PAY FOR THE FIREMEN.

AT THE CIVIC BANQUET given by Mayor Duffus on Thursday night, enough was said to convince the aldermen, that the popular sentiment is in favor of increasing the efficiency of the Fire Department both as to equipment and personnel. Mr. J. J. Turner was the chief spokesman on this subject, and the gathering seemed in unanimous accord with his remarks.

The members of the police force from the Chief down have recently been granted an increase of pay, and no serious objections have been offered, at least none have been heard of. It is an open secret that Chief Howard will ask for a raise of salary and that he will put in a similar demand on behalf of his men. The brigade has been seriously demoralized during the past year, so many men leaving for other callings in which the compensation is higher.

As for Chief Howard, no one questions his efficiency. He has built up a modern department and has always made it his aim to surround himself with a capable and well-disciplined brigade. The place which he holds in the estimation of the underwriters and the fact that the insurance rates have been twice lowered in Peterborough since he took charge of the department is recommendation enough. The aldermen should be satisfied by this time that his services are satisfactory to the manufacturers and other large property owners. Such a man is certainly entitled to compensation commensurate with his efficiency. The life of the fireman is not altogether an enviable one. He is on duty constantly. Even when he goes to his meals, he is expected to forsake the table and get back on duty if an alarm is sounded. On his days of leave he is at liberty so long as the fire-bell is silent, and he can never lie down to sleep with the assurance that he will be allowed to slumber in peace until morning. Always while actively engaged in the duties of his calling his life is in danger.

It is to be hoped that the aldermen will not repeat the mistake of last year and strive for a lower tax rate at the expense of the civic employes. It is not a very high order of financing that essays to save expenditure in that way. Any private employer of labor could add to his surplus by making a levy on the pay envelopes of his staff, but in time of prosperity especially he could hardly hope to retain them for any length of time. Economy should not be practised with the wage-earner as the victim.

HARMONY.

THE TRADES AND LABOR COUNCIL had a difference of opinion with Alderman Dobbin, who appeared before the delegates by invitation and discussed the question. His statement was so satisfactory that the misapprehension was immediately cleared up and the best of relations established between the city fathers and the labor men.

The Trades Council delegates have decided to invite other public officials to address them. This policy, if followed out, cannot fail to work for the general good. Each party can then learn the views of the other, and friction, which often exists without the slightest reason, will vanish.

The workingmen should post themselves in public matters and make a close study of municipal questions. They have an excellent monitor in their president, Mr. J. J. Hartley, an ex-alderman himself, a public-spirited citizen and a former candidate for the mayoralty.

AN IMPERIAL PARLIAMENT.

SIR JOHN WILLISON, at a public gathering in Toronto, revived his arguments in favor of an Imperial Parliament when the war is ended. Sir John objects to being called a "professional loyalist." He goes so far as to express a preference for the Lord's Prayer over the National Anthem, but he feels cramped and wants a larger space in which to exercise the rights and privileges of citizenship.

An Imperial Parliament, in which representation was based on the present ratio of population would be a large and unwieldy affair. No matter, however, how large or how small it was, the Canadian representation would always be in the minority. Even a combination of the members of the overseas dominions would not be strong enough to prevail against the representatives from the central portion of the Empire.

It would avail little to have a voice in an Imperial Parliament if Canada could hope for nothing better than to be voted down on every important question, whether with regard to trade or defence.

If Canada had been represented at Westminster prior to 1914 that would not have kept this country out of the war. This conflict would have been forced on Britain just the same, and Canada, for her own safety, would have taken a hand. All this high-sounding talk of "rushing to the rescue" of the Motherland has, happily, been abandoned. Canadians these days are speaking in the language of grown-up men, not lisping like babies. This is Canada's war, just as much as it is France's, England's or Italy's, or that of any of the other allied nations. Canada is in it as a nation, not as a colony doing the bidding of a feudal lord.

The two great matters to be considered by the Motherland and the Dominions after the war will have to do with the questions of commerce and national defence. The British Isles cannot expect preference in trade with the outlying sections of the Empire without reciprocity in kind.

The burden of providing adequate defence on land and sea must be fairly distributed among the various members of the Imperial family, the details of which proposition can be arranged by a council of representatives from home and abroad. A general parliament would waste more time in debate and accomplish less than a body made up of the elected heads of the several countries.

SACRIFICE BY PROXY.

HARTLEY DEWART raised a storm of indignation when he declared in the Legislature that he was not going to allow the Ministers to take shelter behind their sons in khaki. When he was challenged he hastened to declare that he gave place to no man in devotion to the Empire's cause. Nearly all of his office staff had gone to the front.

Which recalls the devoted patriotism of Artemus Ward, who was so ready to sacrifice all his wife's relatives on behalf of freedom in the Civil War.

THE STREET RAILWAY.

WHILE SOME of the leading taxpayers of Peterborough are of the opinion that the city should take over the street railway system at once, others hold that it should be left in the hands of the Hydro Commission until the war is over, all extensions and improvements to be made by that body. The question is as broad as it is long.

The Hydro Commission agrees to sell the system to the city, taking municipal ten-year bonds, these not to be sold, but to be held in the provincial treasury. Easy terms of payment for extensions can also be secured. If the system is extended by the Commission, the cost will be added to the price of the utility. In the meantime there is no danger that the railway will ever be acquired by another corporation, the Commission having given a pledge to this effect. This is one municipal matter in which there is no reason for haste and no cause for worry on the part of the people or aldermen.

TURNING OUT THE REPORTERS.

THE REPORTERS of the city newspapers were turned out of a meeting of the Committee of the Whole last night, the reason given being that matters were to be discussed that public interest demanded should be suppressed for the present. Such a step serves no purpose, except that of putting the representatives of the press to unnecessary trouble. They can get the result of the deliberations from any alderman after the conference by a little extra exertion.

It is hardly fair for the aldermen to attempt to hamstring the newspapers. It is a question, too, whether such high-handed action is legal. The business of the public is supposed to be transacted in public, not in the dark behind closed doors. The newspapers can surely be depended on to do nothing to injure the reputation or credit of the city. They are in possession of information now which they refuse either to publish or discuss in any way because silence is the course dictated by the public welfare.

It seems that with all their secrecy the aldermen did nothing last night the publication of which would work any civic mischief.

HOW CHILDREN CAN HELP.

MINISTER OF EDUCATION PYNE has addressed the following circular to the school inspectors and teachers of the province:

In order to assist in meeting the shortage of foodstuffs, due to war conditions and the unfavorable season of 1916, those teachers who are now giving instruction in agriculture and horticulture in the provincial schools should arrange as far as practicable to grow plants of food value in school gardens and to reduce correspondingly the space hitherto devoted to flowers and decorative shrubs. With the same object in view, the home garden projects should be enlarged and modified and extensive use made of vacant lots and other unoccupied areas. In this way advantage might be taken of the potential labor of boys and girls from eight to fifteen or sixteen, much of which in the ordinary course of events is not utilized.

Inspectors might also take advantage of present conditions to enlarge the scope of agricultural education in Ontario and to demonstrate more fully the important bearing which agriculture has upon the welfare of the people, by using their influence to induce school boards which have not yet established classes in agriculture to undertake this work and to utilise the school garden or home garden as recommended above.

If, indeed, the urban municipalities in Ontario having a population of from 1,000 to 9,000 would double the present production of their gardens and poultry yards, and use, as recommended above, the vacant lots and other unoccupied areas, it would increase the food products of Ontario by $10,000,000 at a very conservative calculation.

Boys and girls cannot be expected to fight, but by assisting in increasing the supply of foodstuffs, they also can be of service.

Education as a Polish.

(Port Rowan News.)

Is a high school education of any benefit to a farmer? It will not help him to plow, but it ought to enable him to read with better understanding. It will give him some polish also, and polish opens the doors to social and political success.

LESSONS IN RIGHT LIVING.

There are many people who wake in the morning almost as tired as when they went to bed. Naturally, this disquiets them. If it continues for any length of time it is likely to fill them with all manner of panicky ideas.

And, as a matter of fact, to wake feeling exhausted is certainly a sign that some condition is present which ought to be corrected. Fortunately it usually is a condition easily corrected.

The trouble may merely be lack of sufficient sleep. The time that should be devoted to sleep varies with individuals. He who wakes tired should ask himself if he is getting enough sleep.

Some people need as much sleep as nine hours every night. Most people, under present conditions of life, need at least eight hours. The six or seven hour sleeper who wakes with a tired feeling had better go to bed earlier.

In order to sleep well people need fresh air just as much as they need it to work well. The human organism at all times reacts badly to the poisonous influence of stale air. Keep the bedroom well aired all night, and the chances of waking "too tired to get up" will be greatly lessened.

Sometimes, too, the habit of eating and heavy supper is responsible for morning tiredness. In such cases the obvious remedy is to eat little or nothing late at night.

Again, the exhausted feeling may be symptomatic of a general nervous condition. Nervous people, in fact, usually wake feeling more or less tired, dreading what the day will bring them, and reluctant to leave their beds.

If they yield to this desire to remain abed they will only, by self-suggestion, make themselves feel more tired. What they should do, unless really ill and under a doctor's care, is to force themselves to get up at a fixed hour every day, or as soon as they awake.

They should not dawdle over dressing but dress briskly. This will improve their circulation, and of itself help the tired feeling to disappear.

By the time they have bathed, dressed and eaten breakfast, things will not seem so bad for them. They will face the day with more courage and will be surprised to find how much better they feel than they did on awaking.

To be sure, abundant sleep, ample ventilation, dietetic precautions and energetic action are not always enough to overcome the tendency to wake tired. But usually they are quite enough.

ROUSE THE LOCAL BOY SCOUTS

Mr. H. G. Hammond, Provincial Secretary of the Boy Scouts Association, is ready at any time to come to Peterborough to present the aims of the movement to the citizens and to help on the work in any way possible.

It is almost unnecessary to speak on behalf of the Boy Scouts. One of the problems facing the nation today is the boy and how to help him become a good citizen.

The Boy Scouts Association is a name well known, and its activities are helping the boys become good, manly, resourceful citizens for Canada. By helping take care of him and filling in his slack hours with healthy activities, you are assisting the boy to become alert, active, resourceful, and to take an added interest in the community in which he lives. A boy must have play hours, if this play is guided along lines that help to lay a foundation for the lad's future, physically, intellectually and morally, is it not the right activity?

There are 7,200 boys in Ontario alone engaged in these activities. There are 164 towns with Boy Scouts organized. During the present crisis within the Empire, the boys have not been found wanting.

Hundreds of Scout officers and senior boys have donned the King's uniform, and splendid reports are received, telling of the sterling qualities of the fellows.

The smaller boys have assisted nobly in all undertakings that are assisting the Empire during the present crisis.

Quietly, yet solidly, has the organization been built. An endeavor is being made to place the privileges of the Association before a greater number of boys.

In a few cases there has been a slackening off through lack of men. A few hours a week spent in behalf of boy life in this community is one of the greatest investments men can make. Will you help?

The motto of the Boy Scouts is "Be Prepared," and one of its outstanding ideals "To do a good turn daily."

Here again the opportunity is offered for all to help lay the foundation for the future manhood of Canada.

Wit and Wisdom

On the new brakeman's first run there was a very steep grade. The engineer always had more or less trouble to get up this grade, but this time he came near sticking altogether. Eventually, however, he reached the top.

Looking out of the cab, the engineer saw the new brakeman and said, with a sigh of relief:

"We had a hard jobbing getting up, didn't we?"

"We sure did," assented the new brakeman; "and if I hadn't put on the brake we'd have slipped back."

A gentleman dining at an hotel, where the servants were "few and far between," despatched a lad among them for a cut of beef.

After a long time the lad returned, and was asked by the faint and hungry gentleman:

"Are you the lad who took away my plate for some beef?"

"Yes, sir."

"Bless me," resumed the hungry wit, "how you have grown!"

A little girl was dipping her dolly's pinafore in a basin. So her father, who had been watching her, said:

"What are you doing, Nellie?"

"I'm trying to dye dolly's pinafore red, papa."

"Red! And what are you dying it with?"

"Beer, papa."

"Beer! Why, whoever told you beer was a dye?"

"I heard mamma say it was beer that made your nose so red, so I thought ——"

"Here, Mary, take this child away!"

It flatters a married man to tell him he doesn't look it.

EDITOR'S MAIL

Editor Review: At the seed fair held at Bobcaygeon, Ont., on Saturday, Feb. 17, an important discussion was led by Mr. Scriver, an expert judge from Western Ontario, upon the methods of growing corn. As possibly there is nothing in the line of farming that is interesting to the farmers of the county of Peterborough more than growing corn for ensilage purposes, I would like to make public to them a few of the points that were brought out.

Preparation of Soil

Alfalfa or clover sod to be manured lightly during winter and then ploughed early in spring to a depth of about 4 inches, disking and working well until seeding time. If stubble land was used, plough late in the fall, disking in the manure in the spring, working the land down firmly so as to protect the moisture bed.

Selection of Seed

The very best seed of the best strain from the point of grain, tonnage and early maturity should be selected without consideration of the price. The price of the seed is a small matter in connection with growing a crop.

Testing of Seed

A simple plan is to take a piece of flannel and lay it on a piece of tin, putting a hundred kernels upon the flannel and then covering with another piece of flannel, spreading 1-2 inch of earth over it and keeping moist and putting it in a warm place until germination starts.

Seeding

Best results have been given in planting in check rows 42 inches apart with a kernel about every 8 inches or in hills thirty-six inches each way, leaving three or four stocks in each hill. The planting should be done upon ground that has been rolled down solid before planting so as to give a uniformity of depth. Seed should be planted as shallow as possible to be all covered and rolling should be done immediately after planting to bring up the moisture, and then harrowed with a light harrow or steel rake immediately after rolling to form a mulch on top to conserve the moisture. There should be thorough cultivation for the first three or four weeks of the growth of corn, cultivating deep and close to the rows, at first getting shallower and farther away from the row as the corn develops.

The Silo is King

It was brought out that the silo was the only proper way of keeping corn. Upon personal conversation with Mr. William Hickson, one of the field crop judges for the province of Ontario, I learned that in the county of Halton, where he has been judging the field crops, that there was a variety largely grown which was known as "The Big Crop," and which is producing a very heavy tonnage, and is also well cobbed and matures in from 90 to 100 days. Mr. Hickson says it is a marvel to stand hardships as it will stand upright when other varieties will go down by the wind.

We would suggest that more of the farmers of the county of Peterborough would enter into the field crop and farm seed competitions that are being put out through this province.

PETERBORO' COUNTY'S PETER PAN

Mr. J. B. Pearce, postmaster at Norwood, says he is 77 years old, and as his reputation for veracity is firmly established there is nothing for it but to accept the statement at its face value. No one would ever suspect the truth if Mr. Pearce elected to remain silent. He is another of the Peter Pans of Central Ontario, one of the men who refuse to make any apparent advance in age.

Mr. Pearce has a history that reads like a chapter from a romance. In the first place, he was the first paid subscriber to The Review when the publication of this paper was started in 1853 and has never missed a copy of the weekly edition in all those years. He was elected reeve of Norwood when that thriving village was incorporated. He was in municipal life for twenty-six years, and was elected warden of the county in 1895 and again in 1897.

The wardenship seems to have been a family trait with the Pearces. The father of the subject of this sketch, the late Peter Pearce, was the first warden ever elected in this county, and two of the brothers attained the same distinction in Hastings. These were J. W. Pearce and the late T. P. Pearce, both of whom served in the council from Marmora.

Mr. Pearce was for eighteen years the president of the East Peterborough Liberal-Conservative Association, and was one of the best campaigners the party ever had in that riding, treading the wine-press with every candidate of his faith who offered himself to the people. Twice he has declined parliamentary honors, once when he was offered the nomination for the Legislature, and again when his friends asked him to carry the standard in a contest in the Federal field.

In 1874 Mr. Pearce was appointed a justice of the peace. There was no county magistrate in those days, so that the position was anything but an empty honor, as there were plenty of cases brought before him. He has always done a large business in conveyancing, and it has been said that he has drawn up some documents of this kind than any other man in the county, as the records in the registry office will show. He has yet to hear of the first defect in any instrument which he prepared.

Mr. Pearce was postmaster in 1896 when the Laurier Government came into power, and there were a host of hungry patriots looking for his shoes, but they were never able to find anything against his administration of the office, so he was not disturbed. Anyway, while he is postmaster he cannot run for Parliament, and he is the one man in East Peterborough whom the Liberals most dread.

In connection with the office Mr. Pearce runs a general store, and is also president of the Pearce Company, Limited, of Marmora.

BOWLING

In the City Bowling League at the Water Street Alleys last night the Business Men and the De Laval played the protested game from last week. The De Laval won out by a margin of 13 pins, the final score being, Business Men 732, De Laval 745. Carter for the De Laval was high man with a 189 count and Webber was high for the Business Men with 180.

If the Business Men had won the game they would have been tied with the Printers and an extra series would have been necessary, but as it stands now the Printers win the championship.

Mr. Solomon, the proprietor of the alleys, is getting medals for each individual player of the winning team. These medals are handsome silver watch fobs with a bowling pin and ball attached. Other prizes will be given for individual high average, high score for three games, high single score, and high individual average for each team. The Printers capture all the prizes but the individual high averages. The standing of the teams and averages will be published later.

DAIRY ACT WILL NOT BE PUT IN FORCE THIS YEAR

Premier Hearst Says Time Has Been Too Short For Education of Farmers in Measure

TORONTO, Feb. 24.— Sir Wm. Hearst yesterday introduced an amendment to the Dairy Standards Act to provide that it shall go into force only on proclamation of the lieutenant-governor-in-council and not on March 31, as provided in Hon. J. S Duff's bill passed last session.

The Act provides that milk bought at cheese factories shall be judged by quality not by quantity, by test and not by bulk, and that all whey shall be pasteurized.

A number of resolutions opposing the bill had reached him, said Sir William. They had not had time enough to educate the people. Details remained to be arranged. Vendors were afraid they would not get just tests. It was argued that the measure would tend to make farmers take advantage of the high prices prevailing and sell their cattle. They desired to avoid this in the interests of increased production.

It had been submitted to him that this was an inadvisable time to enforce the pasteurization of whey, as it would take a great deal more coal, and coal was exceedingly difficult to get.

There had not yet been sufficient time for so radical a change, said the Premier, who, in answer to Mr Rowell, said that he did not expect the measure would be put in force for at least a year.

Dairymen Divided

The Western Ontario Dairymen's Association was in favor of the measure, while Eastern Ontario dairymen urged that the legislation be deferred.

STATEMENT BY SIR SAM ON 109TH BATT. COLORS

"I was asked by the officers whether it would be the right thing to have the colors placed in one of the English Cathedrals (the same as other Canadian soldiers), the idea being to have the colors of the 109th placed as an ornament and to recall to all who gazed thereon the glory of the Canadians. I replied by no means. Why should Canadian colors be stored in England — send them back to Canada. I also stated that most certainly the wishes of Lady Eaton should be consulted. The colors, of course, belong to the Canadian Government, but owing to the fact that they never went into battle and that Lady Eaton had been so generous in supplying them, as well as the band instruments, she should be consulted as to the disposition of the same."

Continuing General Hughes said: "I never heard anything more about the colors until some two weeks ago when I was told that they had been brought back to Canada by Col. Ballantyne and that he was going to place them in the Methodist Church at Lindsay. I was surprised and remarked, 'You mean at Omemee,' but it seems that Lindsay was decided on by Col. Ballantyne. Knowing Lady Eaton's desire in the matter I could not understand the situation.

"On top of this comes the printed statement of Rev. Mr. Going, which was uncalled for, and at least very unkind. Lady Eaton had nothing whatever to do with the 'bungle' and instead of Col. Ballantyne being treated badly, she is the one who seems to have been shown little courtesy and less respect. Omemee, Haliburton or any other place in the county are as equally entitled to the colors as Lindsay—perhaps more so when it is considered how many brave boys from both places have made the supreme sacrifice."

INSPECTED BRIDGES.

Warden Brown, County Clerk Elliott, Reeve Anderson and Reeve Darling returned last evening from a trip in Asphodel and Belmont, where they inspected several bridges that require repairs or rebuilding.

SAND WALKS

At the meeting of the Committee of the Whole Council last night Ald. Dobbin fathered a resolution which will tend to a better sanding of the city sidewalks in the future. Ald. Smith seconded the motion, which carried. The resolution reads:

That the city engineer be instructed by the chairman of the Board of Works to procure an ample supply of sand, to make provision for the service of as many men and vehicles as required, and that when a change of weather threatens a slippery state of sidewalks, to at once have the streets in all dangerous districts thoroughly sanded. That no excuse be acepted for non-performance of this work, to the end that the city may so far as opsible avoid a recurrence of claims for damages resulting from falls of persons to the sidewalk, until such time as other efficient means to remedy the danger be provided

Sidewalk Scorer.

A sidewalk scorer, such as is in use in Montreal, will be purchased by the Board of Works. This machine will do away with the necessity of sanding the sidewalks.

Old Favorites

During the past two weeks many kind words of appreciation have been heard concerning the series of old favorite hymns as sung by the choir of Murray St. Baptist Church. Such simple selections as Jesus Lover of My Soul touch a chord in the human heart that fails to vibrate to the strains of the more difficult classical music. Tomorrow night the choir is rendering that familiar old Jubilee hymn, Steal away to Jesus.

Bringing up Father

It doesn't matter how often you see Gus Hill's production of George McManus's Bringing Up Father, because it will be new every time you see it. It is the Hill policy to offer an entirely new show every year. This does not mean that the old stuff is re-vamped, but an entirely new production from stern to stem every time the play is announced at The Grand.

Bringing Up Father in Politics offer a new story, scenes, music and some new faces. Of course, the characters that have made the cartoons famous in more than 500 newspapers throughout the United States and Canada, are retained. Father, managed by Mother in her usual skillful way, has been elected Congressman [illegible]. You can easily imagine the hilariously funny situations that will be offered under this apropos title. A rapid succession of screams of laughter is the description of Father in Politics. The new production will be offered for the first time at The Grand next Friday, March 2. It is absolutely safe to bring the children to see any Gus Hill production and a special admission of 25c for children has been arranged for the matinee performance at 2.30.

ALDERMEN TURN DOWN GOVERNMENT BY COMMISSION.

City government by commission does not appeal to the members of the City Council. At the meeting of the Committee of the Whole last night the city of Kitchener requested the city to co-operate with a number of municipalities in getting legislation passed, permitting government by commission. The committee decided to take "no action."

Annual Banquet Held At Oriental Hotel.

Mr. R. F. Sedgwick, assistant superintendent for the Prudential Life Assurance Co., was eleceted vice-president, and Mr. Thomas Mark, district manager for the Manufacturers Life was elected secretary. The annual meeting and banquet was attended by forty members of the association, who listened with [illegible] interest to an address on insurance law given by Mr. G. N. Gordon. A hearty vote of thanks was tendered to Mr. Gordon for his kindness in appearing before the association and the speaker was also complimented on the excellence of his address.

Matters of import to the association were discussed by the meeting, practically all of the members expressing their opinions on how to promote the welfare of the association and the interests of policy holders.

ACTIVITIES AT THE Y.M.C.A.

(By the "Y." Scribe.)

The Y. M. C. A. meeting Sunday afternoon at 4:15 o'clock will be addressed by Mr. A. Mowat, inspector of schools. Mr. Mowat has prepared an address of special interest to the young men.

The meetings of the past month have had an attendance of forty, the record meeting being last Sunday, when sixty-eight young men listened to an excellent address given by Lt. A. B. Brittain.

The clubs that are taking up the standard efficiency tests were jointly addressed on Wednesday afternoon by General Secretary Meserve on the subject "The Growth of Altruism in the Individual."

Mr. A. D. Hone addressed the Senior Collegiate Club Friday evening on the subject, "What Is a Chemical Engineer?" There has been a good increase in the attendance at this club during the past month, there being twenty-eight men present last evening. Mr. Hone described a chemical engineer as one connected with some large manufacturing plant whose duty it is to test materials and to conduct experiments seeking to improve the product of his company. Mr. Hone gave one instance of a man holding such a position who, as the result of one experiment, saved his firm a million dollars a year. He spoke of firms who employed large staffs of chemical engineers such as the Eastman Kodak Co. and the Canadian General Electric, and he said that opportunities for young men who would seek to master chemistry were greatly increasing. He said that Germany's rapid development in science was due largely to her chemists. He gave several illustrations of the high degree of efficiency obtained by German chemists, especially in the dyeing business. He stated that it was a patriotic duty for young men of Canada and Great Britain to enter this field at the present time to guarantee that Germany will not renew the monopoly in some of the lines which she held before the war.

Boys' Secretary Galley and several intermediate members took the train to Lakefield this morning and plan to snowshoe from there to Stoney Lake. They expect to follow the ice on the lake route.

The late J. W. Bennet, who was honorary president, kindly donated to the Y. M. C. A. an auto knitting machine, which has been installed in one of the class rooms on the second floor. Any committee or society of ladies who desire to use this machine for knitting socks for soldiers will find it freely at their disposal. The Mothers' Club members are taking instruction from Mrs. W. H. Dunsford, and plan to use the machine two evenings a week. As there are several other organizations of women who hold regular meetings at the Y. M. C. A., it is thought that a schedule can be arranged so that the machine will be in constant use. Mr. Bennet's generosity is certainly appreciated.

STEADY SUBSTANTIAL PROGRESS BY DOMINION LIFE ASSURANCE CO.

The Dominion Life Assurance Co. of Waterloo, Ontario, the details of whose annual report appear in another section of this paper, has had many successful years, but we doubt if any year has surpassed 1916 in productive results. One of the strong features of the company is its steady substantial progress in every department. It has no weak "links." In the last fifteen years its assets have jumped from $615,000 to $4,308,000, an increase of 700.4 per cent.; its payments to policyholders have advanced from $33,000 to $307,205, or 830.9 per cent.; its gross surplus from $131,146 to $1,037,999, or 791.4 per cent., and other gains show the same splendid proportions. The public is recognizing the Dominion Life as one of the best policyholders' companies in Canada, and we predict a great future for this sound Canadian institution.

Mr. P. A. Ferguson, manager for Central Ontario, has been connected with this company for fifteen years

172 HUNTER ST. PETERBOROUGH

Death of Mr. J. W. Bennet, Active Friend of Many

FUNERAL WILL BE HELD MONDAY WITH SERVICE AT ST. PAUL'S.

Mr. J. Williams Bennet died yesterday afternoon at his residence, 558 Gilmour St. He was born at St. George, New Brunswick, 56 years ago, the eldest son of Rev. Wm. Bonnet, and was educated in the Collegiate Institute, Peterborough, and Osgoode Hall, Toronto. He was called to the Bar in 1888, from which time he practised alone until 1897, when he entered into partnership with G. M. Roger, now Judge Roger, of Cobourg, and subsequently with E. L. Goodwill and J. F. Strickland. He took a very large part in the founding of the congregation of Knox Church, where he was elected an elder. Later he was elected to the same office in St. Paul's Church.

Y.M.C.A. Worker

The late Mr. Bennet was prominently connected with Y.M.C.A. work, and was chairman of the building committee in connection with the erection of the present building and for several years prior to his death he was hon. president of the association. He was one of the founders of the Local Children's Aid Society of Peterborough and had been for several years a member of the board of management of Nicholls Hospital. For several years he was solicitor of the Protestant Home for the aged and gave material assistance in securing its present charter. He was intimately identified with the National Sanitorium Association of Canada and occupied the position of president of the Peterborough Health Association until compelled by failing health to withdraw from the office.

He was a prominent member of the Ontario Bar Association and for upwards of ten years was secretary of the Peterborough Law Association and was afterwards president of that body. In politics, Mr. Bennet was a Liberal.

He was distinguished among the legal fraternity for his thoroughness and his attention to detail, as well as for his uniform courtesy to the members of his profession, by whom he was invariably held in the highest esteem.

In spite of the handicap of impaired health which covered a numbe of years, he adhered tenaciously to his business and the various welfare projects that were dear to his heart.

Deceased is survived by one sister, Miss A. K. Bennet, and by one brother, Rev. Orr Bennet, of Calvin Church, Ottawa.

The funeral will be held on Monday at 2 p.m. from the late residence to St. Paul's Church, where service will be conducted at 2.30 by Rev. R. Pogue. Interment at Little Lake Cemetery.

Peterboro Girl Delights Toronto With Wonderful Singing Powers

Miss Myrtle Sucee of Peterborough proved to an audience of seventeen hundred people at Bond Street Congregation Church, Toronto, on Sunday evening, Feb. 18, that she is one of Canada's coming sopranos. Miss Sucee displayed wonderful talent and delighted Dr. Harvey Robb, the choir leader of the church, who congratulated her on her exceptionally sweet voice, and added that she w the sweetest singer that he had had the pleasure of hearing. Dr. Robb predicted a great future for her if she continued to progress the way she was doing now. Musicians in the audience expressed the wish to hear her soon again.

SOLDIERS OF THE KING MILITARY NOTES

ARE AT A CONVALESCENT HOSPITAL IN ENGLAND.

LATTER COMING HOME.

PTE. C. L. JONES

From a Canadian convalescent hospital in Bear Wood, Berks, England, Pte. C. L. Jones, one of the 93rd men wounded in action, writes to his father, Mr. John Jones, postmaster at Hall's Bridge, that he is getting on fine. "I met Jack McFadden (Lakefield) here today," he adds, "for the first time since leaving the battalion, and we were mighty glad to meet one another. I helped to dress his wound at a place called Albert about the first of October. He has had a tough time, but he will soon be all right, and I think he will be invalided to Canada, as he won't be fit for service for another six months. They should keep some men there to shoot all the Germans and such like in Canada, to prevent them from destroying buildings.

"This is a fine place on a big estate. The hospital was formerly a mansion, and the buildings and grounds are valued at about five million pounds. There is plenty of game in the woods, and if I were well I'd be tempted to take a hunting trip, even though they might send me back to France by the first boat."

WOULD LIKE TRIP AT THE THROTTLE

PTE. G. MIGHT IN FRANCE—HAD NOT FORGOTTEN OLD NO. 2650.

Pte. George Might, son of Mr. Wm. Might, George street north, and a brother of Lieut. P. Might, of the 93rd Battalion, sends a letter from France to Mr. W. J. Fee, transportation foreman for the G.T.R., in which he thanks Mr. Fee and the boys for a parcel which he received in good condition. "I have been out here sixteen months," writes Pte. Might, "and, believe me, it has seemed a long time to spend on a job like this, in this country and in the way we live, to say nothing of the 'Jack Johnsons,' gas shells and a thousand other things. Officers were looking for engineers recently, and I may be transferred to the transportation service. It would make quite a change.

TRADES & LABOR COUNCIL

Notes by The Official Scribe.

The Trades and Labor Council started its new year under President Hartley in an auspicious manner, and the meeting on Wednesday was a 'bumper" night from start to finish.

Ald. F. H. Dobbin, the executive officer of the Peterborough Patriotic Club attended and gave an exhaustive description of the workings of the fund, and the multitudinous duties of an executive officer.

Mr. Dobbin surprised most of the delegates present with his information about the amount of work that is on his shoulders, and the varied lines that his duties take. It had been in the minds of the delegates that the position of executive officer of the fund was an easy one and one that should be filled by a returned soldier, now that they are coming back in such numbers, but after hearing Mr. Dobbin's resume of the duties of that office, it was the unanimous opinion of the council that the position, taking everything into consideration, could not posibly be filled better, or anything like as well, by any returned soldier —or civilian.

It would be much better if people would make enquiries and ascertain facts before criticizing public officers such as Mr. Dobbin. A great many misconceptions were cleared up by him and he is now assured of the hearty co-operation and support of the Peterborough Trades and Labor Council in his arduous duties.

For the information of those who were not present on Wednesday last, it might be stated that to properly carry out the work of executive officer of the Patriotic Fund it is necessary for a man to be an expert accountant, an experienced stenographer, and to have a knowledge of human nature that only comes with years of experience of dealing with the public in every walk of life. On top of this, the man must have the patience of Job, the zeal of a true patriot, and sympathies almost superhuman.

◆ ◆ ◆

Thanks, Mr. Dobbin. Instructive, and enlightening. Come again. And yet again. Pleased to hear you. And before long, too. You have our support; hearty support. Keep up the good work. But don't forget the Trades and Labor Council. Again, many thanks.

◆ ◆ ◆

The council was honored by the presence of three international organizers who are in the city on behalf of their locals, viz. Organizer C. E. Kinskey, of Buffalo, representing the International Typographical Union; Representative H. W. Harper, Toronto, of the International Machinists; and F. W. Vick, special organizer for the Metal Polishers, Buffers, Platers, Brass and Silver Workers' Union of North America.

◆ ◆ ◆

Representative Harper brought up a matter for discussion which is of vital interest to the City of Peterborough, as well as to the machinists. He stated that at the present time, the Lundy Shovel and Tool Works, which has one of the best equipped plants in the Dominion for the making of shovels, is lying idle. From a patriotic standpoint, when every other man in the trenches needs a shovel as much as a rifle, this is a shameful and useless waste.

◆ ◆ ◆

Some of the delegates mentioned that there was talk of the works being under lease to the Metal Products Co., but nothing definite was known. However, Chairman Crowe and members of the municipal committee will take the matter up with the City Council to see if something cannot be done to have this fine plant set to producing instead of lying idle. Shovels are just as important as munitions to the boys in the trenches.

◆ ◆ ◆

When this matter was being discussed President Hartley startled the delegates with a statement made by Mr. Flavelle, of the Munitions Board, re the local munitions factories. Mr. Hartley stated that he was a member of a local deputation that went to Ottawa recently to interview the Government and to see what were the chances of having another munitions factory in Peterborough. Mr. Flavelle refused to entertain the idea, and when pressed for a reason stated thet munitions factories here were not making half the production that factories of the same size elsewhere were making, and that they should be making.

◆ ◆ ◆

What is the explanation? Are the munitions workers of Peterborough "slackers," or is it, as Representative Harper stated—and he should know—that the cause for this is the chopping and changing of men about, and one man cannot be expected to pick up a job where another man has left off and go on with it as well as if he had been on it all the time. Again, there are whispers of lack of equipment here that other places possess. This is a serious question, and one which the Machinists would do well to take up in their local and with the Trades and Labor Council.

◆ ◆ ◆

Organizer Vick reported that there were not sufficient metal polishers in the city to form a local branch, but that he was making progress with the brass and silver workers.

◆ ◆ ◆

Representative H. W. Harper stated that the International Association of Machinists were making considerable progress in the city and it now promises to be one of our strongest locals. Machinists "out of the fold," take note: a word to the wise is sufficient.

◆ ◆ ◆

To get in closer touch with municipal affairs, it was decided to invite at every other meeting of the Council, some member of the City Council, or head of civic department, and members of the Utilities Commission etc., to address the council on matters under their charge. This should give delegates an insight into every phase of municipal work, and will help the Council to formulate ideas for the better government and management of the city, and the welfare of the workers.

◆ ◆ ◆

If delegates from the different locals who cannot attend regularly would resign and have others elected in their place who can and will attend, they would be doing a great deal more for the cause of labor than holding the office of delegate and failing to attend. There is work to be done, and unless you are prepared to take your share of it, make discretion the better part of valor, and get out, so that those who will work can get in.

◆ ◆ ◆

Next meeting March 7, at eight o'clock—sharp.

WAR SERVICE ACCEPTED BY MANY SALVATIONISTS

Salvation Army Chaplains Are Popular With Rank and File---Peterboro Corps Has Done Well.

"I know of no organization in the world," recently declared General Sir Francis Lloyd, commanding the London (England) district, "that has been more unselfish than the Salvation Army in this war."

That is true of the Salvation Army, not only in England, but everywhere else, says the Toronto Star Weekly. It has freely spent and been spent in the service of the Empire and of humanity in this war—in Canada, as elsewhere. Last year a very generous and noble gift was made by Salvationists in Canada, in the form of five motor ambulance cars, which they donated for service at the Russian front. The presentation was made at the London Guildhall. The then Russian ambassador, Count Benckendorff, who has since died, was too ill to attend to receive the cars on behalf of the Czar of Russia, but he sent a very grateful letter, and one of his staff acknowledged the gift in a very impressive speech.

The number of Salvationists that have joined the army from Ontario would be anything between 2,000 and 3,000. From Toronto they have contributed about 1,000 enlisted men, including twenty-six Salvation Army officers, who enlisted in the ranks.

There are a number of Salvation Army chaplains with the Canadian forces overseas. The senior of these is Chaplain-Captain Penfold of Toronto, who left for overseas in November, 1914, and who has shown exemplary energy and zeal, and has met with great success in his special work, both in England and in France. He is now attached to the 2nd and 3rd entrenching battalions, and has established a Soldiers' Rest Hut for the benefit of the soldiers right up to the trenches. His is the only Salvation Army institution close to the firing lines, most of them being at the various bases. It is heartening to learn that he pays a high tribute to the fidelity and zeal of the Salvationists with the Canadian forces, both in France and in England.

Toronto Chaplains Overseas.

Another Toronto Salvation Army officer who is an overseas chaplain is Chaplain-Captain C. B. Robinson, whose activities lie in the Shorncliffe area. In that area, about ten miles in extent, there are about twelve camps, and nearly all of these camps are visited by him every week. He writes very gratefully of the excellent impression for God and the Salvation Army which the Salvationists have made on the authorities and on their comrades-in-arms.

Chaplain-Captain Alfred Steele is another Toronto Salvationist. After doing duty for three months at the Exhibition Camp, Toronto, he was attached to the 19th Battalion, and went to the West Sandling Camp, England, in May, 1915. His work in connection with this battalion has been spoken of in highest terms by the colonel.

Chaplain-Captain Kimmins was in charge of the Salvation Army work at Camp Borden as assistant camp chaplain, having previously been stationed at the camps at Niagara-on-the-Lake and at Exhibition Park, Toronto. It was estimated that at Camp Borden the Salvationists and adherents together numbered something like 1,500.

An officer killed in action recently was Charles Milton, who was formerly chaplain at Barriefield Camp. He was a chaplain in the Salvation Army and a member of Col. Hemming's staff. He went to Barriefield, where, by the way, he was presented to the Duke of Connaught, from Ingersoll, where his last appointment with the Salvation Army lay, and qualified there as a lieutenant. He was an old soldier, however, and wanted to be with the men, and, consequently, enlisted. He went to the trenches and was killed in action almost immediately. The veterans of Kingston are erecting a marble memorial tablet to his memory.

Sergeant Barsby of Toronto was chief of the men's wing of the Salvation Army Training College. Now he is employed as drill sergeant on special service, visiting different centres.

The Home League

Much—perhaps most—of the good work that the Salvation Army does among Canadian soldiers is never heard of by the general public. But that it has ever at heart the soldiers' truest welfare is daily evinced in countless ways. Soldiers are visited and talked with freely and with the kindliest and most genuine interest. The families of those who have left are the recipients of much practical help and interest. Salvationists and adherents at the front are regularly corresponded with, and to these, we may be sure, a "War Cry" is not the least welcome item in their mail. And many a touching story could be told of self-denial in Salvation Army circles for the benefit of the lads in khaki.

There has recently been started in Canada an organization under the auspices of the Salvation Army which, while not specially for war-time purposes, yet finds in this time of war a wide scope for its activities. This is the "Home League," the object of which is to show how the humblest of homes may be turned into a "home beautiful," the centre of love and happiness. It aims at helping the mother to the end that

To City, Town and Village Dwellers in Ontario

"A vegetable garden for every home"

IN this year of supreme effort Britain and her armies must have ample supplies of food, and Canada is the great source upon which they rely. Greater production is a vital necessity. Everyone with a few square feet of ground can contribute to victory by growing vegetables.

Four Patriotic Reasons for Growing Vegetables

1—It saves money that you would otherwise spend for vegetables, thus being an effective means of thrift, leaving your money free for purposes more directly helpful to the cause.

2—It helps to lower the "High cost of living."

3—By increasing production your vegetable garden helps to enlarge the urgently needed surplus of produce for export to the motherland and her allies.

4—Every dollar's worth of vegetables you grow saves several hours' labor of some worker somewhere whose effort at this critical time should be expended upon producing food for export, or upon other vital war work.

Multiply your effort by the number of available garden plots in cities, towns and villages all over Ontario and the significance of vegetable production as a form of patriotic thrift becomes one of startling importance to the country!

The Ontario Department of Agriculture will help you

The Ontario Department of Agriculture appeals to Horticultural Societies to devote at least one evening meeting to the subject of vegetable growing. Manufacturers, labor unions, lodges, school boards, etc., are invited to actively encourage home gardening. Let the slogan for 1917 be, "A vegetable garden for every home."

Organizations are invited to arrange for instructive talks by local practical gardeners on the subject of vegetable growing. In cases where it is impossible to secure a local speaker the Department of Agriculture will, on request, endeavor to send a suitable man.

The demand for speakers will be great. The number of available experts being limited, the Department urgently requests that arrangements for meetings be made at once; if local speakers cannot be secured, send applications promptly. Address letters to "Vegetable Campaign," Department of Agriculture, Parliament Buildings, Toronto.

The Department suggests the formation of local organizations to stimulate interest by offering prizes for best vegetable gardens. It is prepared to assist in any possible way any organization that may be conducting a campaign for vegetable production on vacant lots. It will do so by sending speakers or by supplying expert advice in the field.

To the Boys and Girls of Ontario

Boys, here is a splendid chance to help in the war. Grow vegetables this summer. What a fine way to spend some of your spare time. Ask your parents for the use of the ground, and their help; they will gladly give it, knowing how valuable the experience will be to you—and to the Country.

Send for Literature To every one interested in vegetable growing the Department of Agriculture will, on receipt of request, send literature giving instructions about implements necessary and methods of preparing the ground and cultivating the crop. A plan of a vegetable garden indicating suitable crop to grow, best varieties and their arrangement in the garden will be sent free of charge to any address.

Write for Poultry Bulletin The waste from the average table would support a small flock of hens. They are inexpensive to keep, and you will be highly repaid in fresh eggs. Write for free bulletin which tells how to keep hens, and deals with the results of experiments conducted at the Ontario Agricultural College.

WAR SERVICE ACCEPTED BY

she may train her young ones to b good and capable citizens and (more than that) God-fearing men and women.

The League, which originated in a suggestion of Mrs. Booth, by means of social meetings, practical talks, demonstrations of sick nursing, thrift clubs, working parties, and so forth, endeavors to point the way to making the home an abode of order, love and peace. It is doing a great work, and the comfort its practical and kindly interest is proving to many soldiers' homes is beyond question. Moreover, it has been responsible for making a very large number of children's clothes and other useful garments and articles for the soldiers' near and dear ones. To numerous soldiers' homes it is carrying the message of solace and consolation in trouble.

Mrs. Commissioner Richards has the oversight of the League for the whole Dominion. There are over fifty branches, and these are increasing at the rate of five or six a week. The members belonging to each branch number anything between twenty and fifty or sixty. There are some fifteen branches at present in Toronto, and the good work that is being done at these is worthy of high commendation.

Service, sacrifice and self-denial—such things are familiar enough with the Salvation Army. And in this war it is finding and proving adequate to abundant opportunities for the exercise of these virtues. It should be mentioned that in France and in England the Salvation Army maintains no fewer than 600 huts for the soldiers.

The Peterborough Corps has given eighty-six of its members to the various services of the war—a fine showing for the ranks here. A branch of the Home League has been organized and is doing good work.

FRETFUL BABIES

Mrs. John M. Weaver, Blissfield, N. B., writes: "I can speak very highly of Baby's Own Tablets. I have used them for my children and find they are the best medicine a mother can give her little ones. I would strongly recommend them to all mothers who have fretful babies." The Tablets regulate the bowels and stomach, break up colds and simple fevers, expel worms, cure vomiting and indigestion and make teething easy. They are sold by medicine dealers or by mail at 25 cents a box from The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

RAWLINSON, HAIG'S SOMME LIEUTENANT

Character of General Who Seconded Commander's Great Effort--- Trusted by Kitchener.

[illegible] names [illegible] divisional commanders stood out pre-eminently in Field Marshal Haig's despatch in the first Somme battle—General Sir Hubert Gough and General Sir Henry Rawlinson. Their job was to hold the Huns along the whole Somme front, to harass them and drive them, and give them no rest or respite anywhere, leaving General Haig free to push home his main attacks. How well they succeeded let Sir Douglas say: "Their thorough knowledge of their profession," he writes, "and their cool and sound judgment, tact and determination, proved fully equal to every call on them. They entirely justified their selection for such responsible commands."

Served Under Kitchener

Of the two men General Sir Henry Rawlinson is probably the best known by name to the man in the street. "Senacherib" Rawlinson they call him in the army a nickname reminiscent of his Eton days, when his father, Sir Henry Creskick Rawlinson, the well known traveler and Oriental scholar, unearthed the burial place of that famous Assyrian monarch. Like so many commanders who have won fame in the present world war, Rawlinson is a "Kitchener's man." He served under him in Egypt, in South Africa, and elsewhere, and "K. of K." trusted him and believed in him implicitly.

Antwerp and Ypres

General Rawlinson began his army career in the King's Royal Rifles in 1884, afterwards exchanging into the Coldstream Guards. His first job in the present war was in connection with the evacuation of Antwerp, when Lord Kitchener sent him out from London at a few hours' notice to take command of the force detailed to cover the retirement of the Belgian army from that city. Later he fought under French at Ypres, and he commanded the Fourth Army Corps at the stubborn but indecisive battle of Neuve Chapelle.

"KAISER IS FRIGHTFUL"

German Ruler Could Humanize the War

HIS GUILT

The following indictment of the German Emperor, Wilhelm the Second, is by Prof. T. G. Masaryk, the exiled Austrian member of parliament: The Kaiser could humanise the war. He is responsible for the regime of frightfulness. The crime of the drowned women and children in the Lusitania is as much his crime as though his was the hand that directed the torpedo. He is responsible for the innocent victims of the Zeppelin raids over England. A word from him and death from the air making a shambles of defenceless villages and cities would have stopped.

On his head must the shades of Louvain, Malines, Termonde, Arras, and Rheims shed their imprecations. The murder of Nurse Cavell lies heavily on his conscience. He was the author of these atrocities. Frightfulness was born in his brain and history will not fail to apportion to him the blame.

Frightfulness is the Kaiser's theatrical way of expressing the determination of the German people to win the war. His uneven mind suggests it is a means of shortening the war, and there are only a few voices in Germany with the courage to give him the lie—the voice of Maximilian Harden, telling him with such frankness as he may that thereby the Kaiser only lengthened the war, inasmuch as he spurs on the allied nations to still greater effort to smash Prussian militarism, of which this frightfulness is a characteristic manifestation.

PRUSSIAN PRINCE'S PANIC

How the Kaiser's Son Was Driven From "Home"

Prince Eitel, the Kaiser's second son, (according to Le Journal) at one time held the command on the northern front of the Somme, and his General Headquarters were in the chateau of the little village of Temple La Fosse. One evening a big naval gun was trained on the chateau, distant only ten miles. The aim was so exact that every one of the shots hit the mark. In less than two hours all that remained of the chateau was a heap of flaming ruins.

The curiosity of the French gunners as to the fate of Prince Eitel was satisfied by German prisoners taken next day, who reported that the first shell struck the right wing of the chateau a few yards from the room which served the Prince and his Staff as a map room.

Seized with panic, the Kaiser's son and his suite fled downstairs, jumped into motor cars, and made off at full speed, not stopping until they were a dozen miles behind the lines. The Prince's terror, which soon became known to the whole army, was severely commented on by the Kaiser's soldiers.

Clear, Peachy Skin Awaits Anyone Who Drinks Hot Water

Sparkling and vivacious—merry, bright, alert—a good clear skin and a natural, rosy, healthy complexion are assured only by pure blood. If only every man and women could be induced to adopt the morning inside bath, what a gratifying change would take place. Instead of the thousands of sickly, anaemic-looking men, women and girls with pasty or muddy complexions; instead of the multitudes of "nerve wrecks," "rundowns," "brain fags" and pessimists we should see a virile, optimistic throng of rosy-cheeked people everywhere.

An inside bath is had by drinking each morning, before breakfast, a glass of real hot water with a teaspoonful of limestone phosphate in it to wash from the stomach, liver, kidneys and ten yards of bowels the previous day's indigestible waste, sour fermentations and poisons, thus cleansing, sweetening and freshening the entire alimentary canal before putting more food into the stomach.

Those subject to sick headache, biliousness, nasty breath, rheumatism, colds, and particularly those who have a pallid, sallow complexion and who are constipated very often, are urged to obtain a quarter pound of limestone phosphate at the drug store, which will cost but a trifle but is sufficient to demonstrate the quick and remarkable change in both health and appearance awaiting those who practise internal sanitation. We must remember that inside cleanliness is more important than outside, because the skin does not absorb impurities to contaminate the blood while the pores in the thirty feet of bowels do.

End of a Brave French Boxer

Bernard, the French middleweight boxing champion, who fought many of the best British, American, and Australian boxers, was killed at Pau while attempting a trick flying feat.

ENGLISH IS TERSEST

The phrase "Wait and see" bothered the French newspaper correspondents in London. No account of the crisis would have been complete without it, yet only one correspondent, M. Coudurier, of the Journal de Geneve, attempted to translate it. His version is: "Attendez, et vous verrez ce qui arrivera." Thirteen syllables against three! It is a curious fact, always brought out, for instance, by the polyglot versions of the resolutions of international societies, that English is the tersest language in Europe. The English version on such occasions is always much shorter than the French or Italian. At the beginning of the war, when all cables had to be in English or French, the Italian and Russian correspondents in London chose English, and found their cabling expenses much reduced.—Manchester Guardian.

HOW TO KEEP WELL

INFANT WELFARE—ARTICLE No. 4.

HAVING DEALT with the subject of artificial feeding by means of modified cow's milk, let us return to what has already been pointed out to be the best and most convenient food for the baby, viz., Breast-milk. The mother's milk is the best in every way. It is fresh, clean, and always on tap. It is the least expensive food which can be given. It prevents certain diseases such as diarrhoea and cures these diseases when they occur in babies who have not had breast milk. It increases the resistance of a well baby to disease, and it helps a sick baby to recover from all kinds of illness.

The Nursing Mother. The mother should remember that the nursing of her baby is her most important business in life for the time being. Everything else must be secondary to it. Food, exercise, and outdoor air are all important to the supply of breast milk. Her food should be of the best quality, easily digested, and in addition to three regular meals a day she should have a lunch in the middle of the forenoon, afternoon, and at bed-time. These lunches should consist of milk or gruel. She should have about a quart of liquid food daily in addition to the three regular meals. In some cases it is of advantage for her to take a slice of bread and butter and a glass of milk during the night. As a rule, ordinary simple foods taken by the mother will not upset the baby, but if any are found to do so she had better avoid them. Certain drugs are excreted in the breast milk, so it is advisable not to take drugs except on the advice of a physician. Nothing upsets a baby more quickly than a nervous, irritable, or angry mother. Fatigue of mind or body reacts upon the infant. If mentally upset the mother should give the baby one teaspoonful of lime water mixed with one teaspoonful of boiled water before the next nursing.

The Mother's Nipples. The nipples should receive attention. In order to prevent cracking it is useful in the last month of pregnacy to apply the following mixture each night:—

Bismuth Carbonate—One drachm.
Caster Oil—One ounce.

These ingredients should be thoroughly rubbed up together in a clean glass mortar and kept in a wide-mouthed glass-stoppered bottle.

The nipples should be washed before and after each nursing with boracic acid solution. The nipples sometimes crack at the top or at the base where they join the breasts. The danger of cracks in the nipple itself is that they may lead to infection and abscess in the breasts. The base cracks are very painful. The best preventive of cracks I have found to be "Wansborough's lead shields." These are little hats of pliable lead resembling more than anything else the type of low-crowned hat worn by some Anglican clergymen. They should be washed in hot water, and after nursing one placed over each nipple. The inventor claims that their value rests in the formation of a lactate of lead which is antiseptic (that is a destructive agent to germs). While this may be so, I am satisfied that the protection against the friction of the clothing and the action of dirt is quite important. In a long experience I have found the use of these shields a sure preventive against the cracking of the nipples with the attendant pain and infection. If cracks do occur it is useful to wash them with 70 per cent. alcohol and paint with compound tincture of benzoin (Friar's Balsam) twice a day. Until the cracks are healed the baby should be nursed through a rubber-topped nipple shield, which must be carefully washed and cleansed with boiling water and bicarbonate of soda before and after each nursing.

Composition of Breast Milk. Breast milk is composed of fat 4 parts; sugar, 7; proteid (or albumen), 1.50; salts, .20, and water, 87.30, making up 100 parts. The best indication that the breast milk is suitable is that the baby thrives upon it. If the mother is underfed and tired, she should have more fatty food such as the yolk of eggs, cream, and a little bacon. If the mother is too fat, the amount of meat and fatty foods should be lessened and the exercise increased. The quantity of milk is increased by frequent nursing, but the interval should not be less than three hours after the second month. It is also increased by adding fluid to the diet. Malt extract, stout, beer, or porter are of no value in improving the mother's milk and should not be used.

When Breast Milk Should Not Be Used. Breast milk should not be discontinued for trifling causes. Too many doctors are prone to allow the mother to begin artificial feeding. Unless there is some real good reason the mother must continue to nurse her baby. A short acute illness is not a sufficient reason.

In Tuberculosis and chronic wasting diseases, nursing from the breast should be stopped.

By the time we had paddled well out into the current we had drifted so far downstream that we were in full view of the Fire People's abiding place. So occupied were we with our paddling, our eyes fixed upon the other bank, that we knew nothing until aroused by a yell from the shore. We looked around. There were the Fire People, many of them looking at us and pointing at us, and more were crawling out of the caves. We sat up to watch and forgot all about paddling. There was a great hullabaloo on the shore. Some of the fire men discharged their bows at us, and a few of the arrows fell near us, but the range was too great.

It was a great day for Lop-Ear and me. To the east the conflagration we had started was filling half the sky with smoke. And here we were, perfectly safe in the middle of the river, encircling the Fire People's stronghold. We sat and laughed at them as we dashed by, swinging south, and southeast to east, and even to northeast, and then east again, southeast and south and on around to the west, a great double curve where the river nearly tied a knot in itself.

As we swept on to the west, the Fire People far behind, a familiar scene flashed upon our eyes. It was the great drinking place, where we had wandered once or twice to watch the circus of the animals when they came down to drink. Beyond it, we knew, was the carrot patch and beyond that the caves and the abiding place of the horde. We began to paddle for the bank that slid swiftly past, and before we knew it we were down upon the drinking places used by the horde. There were the women and children, the water carriers, a number of them, filling their gourds. At sight of us they stampeded madly up the runways, leaving behind them a trail of gourds they had dropped.

We landed, and of course we neglected to tie up the catamaran, which floated off down the river. Right cautiously we crept up a runway. The folk had all disappeared into their holes, though here and there we could see a face peering out at us. There was no sign of Red Eye. We were home again. And that night we slept in our own little cave high up on the cliff, though first we had to evict a couple of pugnacious youngsters who had taken possession.

The months came and went. The drama and tragedy of the future were yet to come upon the stage, and in the meantime we pounded nuts and lived. It was a good year, I remember, for nuts. We used to fill gourds with nuts and carry them to the pounding places. We placed them in depressions in the rock, and, with a piece of rock in our hands, we cracked them and ate them as we cracked.

It was the fall of the year when Lop Ear and I returned from our long adventure journey, and the winter that followed was mild. I made frequent trips to the neighborhood of my old home tree, and frequently I searched the whole territory that lay between the blueberry swamp and the mouth of the slough where Lop Ear and I had learned navigation, but no clew could I get of the Swift One. She had disappeared. And I wanted her. I was impelled by that hunger which I have mentioned and which was akin to physical hunger, albeit it came often upon me when my stomach was full. But all my search was vain.

CHAPTER XI.

LIFE was not monotonous at the caves, however. There was Red Eye to be considered. Lop Ear and I never knew a moment's peace except when we were in our own little cave. In spite of the enlargement of the entrance we had made it was still a tight squeeze for us to get in, and though from time to time we continued to enlarge, it was still too small for Red Eye's monstrous body. But he never stormed our cave again. He had learned the lesson well, and he carried on his neck a bulging lump to show where I had hit him with the rock. This lump never went away, and it was prominent enough to be seen at a distance. I often took great delight in watching that evidence of my handiwork, and sometimes when I was myself assuredly safe the sight of it caused me to laugh.

While the other folk would not have come to our rescue had Red Eye proceeded to tear Lop Ear and me to pieces before their eyes, nevertheless they sympathized with us. Possibly it was not sympathy, but the way they expressed their hatred for Red Eye. At any rate, they always warned us of his approach. Whether in the forest, at the drinking places or in the open space before the caves, they were always quick to warn us. Thus we had the advantage of many eyes in our feud with Red Eye, the atavism.

Once he nearly got me. It was early in the morning, and the folk were not yet up. The surprise was complete. I was cut off from the way up the cliff to my cave. Before I knew it I had dashed into the double cave—the cave where Lop Ear had first eluded me long years before and where old Saber Tooth had come to discomfiture when he pursued the two folk. By the time I had got through the connecting passage between the two caves I discovered that Red Eye was not following me. The next moment he charged into the cave from the outside. I slipped back through the passage, and he charged out and around and in upon me again. I merely repeated my performance of slipping through the passage.

He kept me there half a day before he gave up. After that when Lop Ear and I were reasonably sure of gaining the double cave we did not retreat up the cliff to our own cave when Red Eye came upon the scene. All we did was to keep an eye on him and see that he did not cut across our line of retreat.

It was during this winter that Red Eye killed his latest wife with abuse and repeated beatings. I have called him an atavism, but in this he was worse than an atavism, for the males of the lower animals do not maltreat and murder their mates. In this I take it that Red Eye, in spite of his tremendous atavistic tendencies, foreshadowed the coming of man, for it is the males of the human species only that murder their mates.

As was to be expected, with the doing away of one wife Red Eye proceeded to get another. He decided upon the Singing One. She was the granddaughter of old Marrow Bone and the daughter of the Hairless One. She was a young thing, greatly given to singing at the mouth of her cave in the twilight, and she had but recently mated with Crooked Leg. He was a quiet individual, molesting no one and not given to bickering with his fellows. He was no fighter anyway. He was small and lean and not so active on his legs as the rest of us.

Red Eye never committed a more outrageous deed. It was in the quiet at the end of the day when we began to congregate in the open space before climbing into our caves. Suddenly the Singing One dashed up a runway from a drinking place, pursued by Red Eye. She ran to her husband. Poor little Crooked Leg was terribly scared. But he was a hero. He knew that death was upon him, yet he did not run away. He stood up and chattered, bristled and showed his teeth.

A DOCTOR'S RECIPES FOR KEEPING WELL

Some Paragraphic Hints for the Home, Covering Matters of Both Diet and Clothing.

A bedroom without sunlight will be safer if it has plain walls, without moldings or shelves, doors and windows without projecting frames, rounded corners, hardwood floors and very simple furnishings. The room should be aired out a part of each day. The windows should be open during sleeping hours.

People living in cities having an infected water supply cannot depend on filtration through paper. They must heat the water or filter it through some kind of properly kept porcelain filter. This filter must be kept clean or it is worse than no filter at all.

It is better to wear heavy dresses and light underwear than heavy underwear and light dresses. There is such a difference in the temperature from day to day and between outside and inside that clothing should be changeable. The outer wrap should be the adaptable one.

Sore throat in young or old should not be neglected. The first principle of treatment is not to get it. Avoid overcrowded and overheated places, mouth breathing and coddling. Avoid contact with people who have sore throat.

Worry will cause insomnia, indigestion, loss of weight and loss of good looks. It makes people prematurely old and seldom brings profitable results. Think out a situation and then act. Don't worry and re-worry it along from day to day.

Fruit is a good adjunct to the diet. Do not depend upon it to build up the body or to replace the daily wear and tear. Eat it moderately. Take it early in the morning or with the meals and remember that dirt and filth are no more æsthetic nor less harmful because they are perched on the red cheek of an apple.

Good ventilation is the speed boss in the home, the school room and the office. Get the indoor thermometer habit. Don't let the temperature go above 68. High temperatures are harmful. Cool air is the essence of good ventilation.

Look on health matters with ordinary, every-day horse sense. Physical welfare is a matter of public interest as much or more than politics. Give the subject a little time now. It may save a lot in the future.

The prevention of obesity rests on regulation of diet, habits and exercise. No more food should be taken than can be used up by the body. The real burning up of the food is not accomplished in the stomach, but in the lungs and muscles. Keep them both active.

The three important factors in the treatment of tuberculosis are food, rest and fresh air. Meat, eggs and milk in generous quantities are the stable articles of diet. The process of overfeeding must be carefully watched and indigestion prevented.

Diphtheria infection may locate on the gums, the nose or the tonsils or in any one of several places. Diphtheria located on previously healthy tonsils requires less antitoxin, is more easily cured than diphtheria anywhere else. Try to keep the tonsils clean and healthy.

Biliousness is produced by improper digestion of food which results in the formation of injurious substances which enter the blood and give rise to headaches and other symptoms of the complaint. People who have torpid livers should eat plain food, slowly, and exercise daily.

The Door of Health

Is Through the Rich, Red Blood Dr. Williams' Pink Pills Actually Make.

The blood is responsible for the health of the body. If it is good disease cannot exist. If it is bad the door is shut against good health, disease is bound to appear in one form or another. One person may be seized with rheumatism or sciatica, another with anaemia, indigestion, heart palpitation, headaches or backaches, unstrung nerves or any of the many other forms of ailment that comes when the blood is weak and watery. There is just one certain, speedy cure — Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. They make new, rich red blood and this good blood strengthens the whole system and brings good health and happiness. Thousands owe their present good health, some life itself, to the pills. Mrs. Charles Goddard, Chatham, Ont., says: "Four years ago my nervous system was so run down that life seemed nothing but a burden. I doctored for two years with little or no benefit. I could neither work, eat nor sleep well. While in this condition a friend advised me to try Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. Before doing so I thought I would consult my doctor, and he told me he knew of no better medicine for building up the nervous system. I started to take the pills, and after a short while found they were helping me. I took the pills for nearly three month, and am thankful to say that they completely cured me. Ever since I have kept a box of the pills in the house, but have not found it necessary to take them."

You can get Dr. Williams' Pink Pills through any dealer in medicine, or they will be sent by mail postpaid, at 50 cents a box or six boxes for $2.50 by writing The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

Mix thoroughly, fold in the stiffly beaten whites, turn into a buttered mold, surround with hot water and bake until firm in the center. Unmold and serve with white or caper sauce.

AUTOINTOXICATION OR SELF-POISONING

The Dangerous Condition Which Produces Many Well Known Diseases.

HOW TO GUARD AGAINST THIS TROUBLE

"FRUIT-A-TIVES" — The Wonderful Fruit Medicine — will Protect You

Autointoxication means self-poisoning, caused by continuous or partial constipation, or insufficient action of the bowels.

Instead of the refuse matter passing daily from the body, it is absorbed by the blood. As a result, the Kidneys and Skin are overworked, in their efforts to rid the blood of this poisoning.

Poisoning of the blood in this way often causes Indigestion, Loss of Appetite and Disturbed Stomach. It may produce Headaches and Sleeplessness. It may irritate the Kidneys and bring on Pain in the Back, Rheumatism, Gout, and Rheumatic Pains. It is the chief cause of Eczema — and keeps the whole system unhealthy by the constant absorption into the blood of this refuse matter.

"Fruit-a-tives" will always cure Autointoxication or self-poisoning — as "Fruit-a-tives" acts gently on bowels, kidneys and skin, strengthens the bowels and tones up the nervous system.

50c. a box, 6 for $2.50, trial size, 25c. At all dealers or sent postpaid on receipt of price by Fruit-a-tives Limited, Ottawa.

New Arm Bags.

The new arm bags have quite superseded those of leather for every one but the most tailored of women. They are often entirely made of beads. These if imported are very expensive. The ones you really want are disconcertingly expensive. But there are other styles which may be made by the milliner or dressmaker or any woman who embroiders. These are made of velvet in square or pear shape and are drawn up at the top by a chain or by ribbon passed through little metal rings sewed to the bag tops.

UP TO DATE.

Popcorn Balls.

Put into saucepan one cupful of granulated sugar, two tablespoonfuls of vinegar, one-half teacupful of water and butter the size of a walnut. Boil until the mixture drops from the spoon like wax. Have the popped corn ready in a large pan or bowl. Pour the candy into the corn, stirring all the time with a large spoon until corn and candy are thoroughly mixed. Dip the hands into cold water, and while the mixture is hot press tightly into round balls. The above recipe will make fourteen balls as large as baseballs. It will improve the flavor if the corn is popped in hot lard, to which a little salt has been added.

MARKET PRICES

Business was quite brisk on the market this morning; prices were good and supply fair in all departments.

Beef and pork sold readily at slightly higher prices than last week and the farmers all report a shortage of stock of all kinds.

Several feeders from other towns were looking for yearling calves and short keep cattle.

The price of hogs remains steady although the market may turn either way.

Eggs dropped a few cents with a good supply. There were lots of them sold at 43c, this morning but it was hard for some of the farmer ladies to come below the 50c mark.

Butter was unchanged at 45c.

Fowl of good quality were scarce and prices high. One lady asked $1.50 for a common barnyard chicken that weighed 5 pounds.

Honey sold at 25c a comb.

ANECDOTES OF THE FAMOUS

As is well known, the Bishop of London, although himself a bachelor, is an advocate of early marriages and large families.

But improvident marriages are far too common, he says.

"Shortly before the war, when work was not so plentiful as it now is, a youth of nineteen applied to me for relief. He was out of a job, he said, married, and the father of two children.

"'You married?' I said. 'What induced you to marry so early and under such circumstances?'

"'Well, you see, sir,' he said, 'I was out of work at the time and hadn't anything particular to do!'"

Mr. Herbert Price tells some good stories of Lord Beresford, who visited the front as chairman of the British Ambulance Committee.

The distinguished visitor was invited to inspect a French regiment and at the conclusion of the ceremony the band played "God Save the King."

"In the silence that followed," writes Mr. Price, "the Admiral, in token of his admiration of the fitness and renewed valor of the troops, said:

"'Well men, after inspecting you, all I can say is, Pauvres Boches!'"

A day or so later, when Beresford's quarters—fortunately he had just before quitted them—were wrecked by an enemy shell, his first impulse, says Mr. Price, was to send the Kaiser a telegram—"Bad shot, Bill!"

SEED GRAIN IS ASSURED.

Last fall, owing to the large amount of rust in the West, there threatened to be a serious shortage of good seed grain for this year. The situation was worse even in the United States. American buyers were invading Western Canada and the outlook was serious. The Government decided to take action, and a commission was appointed to buy up seed grain. No publicity was given to the commission; publicity would have killed the project. Working quietly and co-operating with the municipalities, the commission purchased large quantities of good seed grain.

Today they have stored in the Government elevators in the West a quantity which it is estimated is sufficient to meet all the requirements this spring of the Prairie Provinces. The Government advanced the money for the purchase, and the grain will be sold at cost. The prompt action of the Government has meant millions of dollars to the country, for if it had not been taken Western Canada might have been without seed or else have had poor seed for this year's crop, so vitally needed for the Empire and the Allies.

This is only one example of the many ways in which the Government is acting in the public interest at the present time, publicity to which is not given.

Aliens in Medieval Times.

Medieval England had a rough and ready way of insuring the good behavior of aliens. According to the Saxon law of frankpledge, which remained in force until 1270, no "hosteler" might entertain a foreigner longer than a day and a night unless he undertook to answer for his guest's behavior. No foreigners were allowed to keep hotels in London. Some became naturalized in order to qualify for this privilege. Even these were not suffered to compete on equal terms with the natives, being required to keep their houses "in the heart of the city" and rigidly excluded from the more profitable regions near the Thames

LONDON, Feb. 26. — German destroyers bombarded Broadstairs and Margate early this morning. One woman and one child were killed and two persons were injured. Two houses were damaged.

PLUCKY FIGHT AGAINST ODDS.

Sir Edward Carson told the Commons that one of the four British destroyers on patrol in the channel last night engaged several German destroyers, and, though for a short time under heavy gun and torpedo fire, escaped damage. The German vessels were finally lost sight of, and in the meantime in the darkness another group of German destroyers bombarded Broadstairs and Margate.

WILSON ASKS CONGRESS FOR ARMED NEUTRALITY

Must Uphold Right to Sail the Seas Unmolested

Arm Ships and Convoy Merchantmen by War Vessels

Wants Peace But Not At Price of Lives and Rights

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

WASHINGTON, Feb. 26. — President Wilson will address a joint session of Congress at 1 o'clock today. He will ask Congress to empower him to use the forces of the United States to protect American rights on the high seas. To ask for authority to use the forces to protect American rights is not in any sense to ask for a declaration of war, nor is it an act of war. It is to prepare the United States for what may be warlike acts by any other nation. In his address the President will point out that Germany's acts since the break in diplomatic relations indicate her determination to go forward with her campaign of ruthlessness, despite the protests of neutrals whose rights are invaded.

President Wilson will ask for authority to establish a state of "armed neutrality." He has made full and detailed plans for protecting American ships desiring to enter the German war zone.

The President will point out that while he desires peace, there is something greater than peace—the protection of sovereign rights of Americans, and that the untrammeled right of American ships to sail the seas unmolested by a foreign nation must be upheld.

TO RESIST SUB. MENACE.

President Wilson appeared before Congress at 1 o'clock this afternoon and asked for authority to place the United States in a state of armed neutrality, to resist the German submarine menace. The continued invasion of the plain rights of neutrals on the high seas, the further sacrifice of American lives and ships, the intolerable blockade of American commerce, almost as effectual as if the country were at war, have taken the place of the dreaded "overt act" which was expected to shock the world and to have forced the President into the next step towards war. President Wilson, in asking to be empowered to take hwatever steps are necessary, which includes the arming of ships, convoying of merchantmen by war vessels, or what other steps are necessary, made it plain again that he wanted peace, but not at the price of American lives and rights or by driving the American flag from the seas.

TO PROVIDE MONEY.

Congress is expected to not only authorize the President to use the armed forces of the country, but also to provide the money.

News of the sinking of the Laconia with Americans aboard was received here as the President was on his way to address Congress. Although without details, it is a grave possibility and it added emphasis to the President's words.

ANOTHER APPEAL FOR DR. GRENFELL'S WORK IN LABRADOR

Last week was "Grenfell Week" in Peterborough, when the attention of our citizens was called to the famous work of Dr. Wilfred Grenfell among the deep sea fishermen of Labrador. For several years, as the result of such concerted appeals, the people of Peterborough have contributed liberally to the support of the mission, and it will be of interest to many to recall that last year the sum of $210 was realized. Thus far this year only $57 has been received, leaving $153 to be made up if we are going to maintain our standard of giving. It is to be hoped that the simple statement of the above fact will appeal to many who may be disposed to pass by this work at a time when, so many demands are being made upon them, and that it may also serve to remind those who have neglected to hand in their contributions.

The work of Dr. Grenfell is not connected with any denomination, and is one worthy of generous and hearty support. May it not suffer in its efficiency through any failure of ours.

The subscription lists will be kept open until the last of the present week, during which contributions may be handed to either The Examiner or The Review, or to Mrs. James Wood, secretary of the local branch, Box 990.

KUT EL AMARA IN BRITISH HANDS

Turks on Tigris River Are in Full Retreat Toward Baghaila With British Cavalry in Pursuit

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

LONDON, Feb. 26. — Kut el Amara has been captured from the Turks by the British forces, according to a statement made in the Commons today by Andrew Bonar Law, member of the British War Council.

The Turks on the Tigris River are in full retreat toward Baghaila, 24 miles to the west of Kut, says the official statement issued by the War Office. The fleeing Turks are being engaged by pursuing British cavalry.

Bonar Law announced in the Commons that as a result of the operations on the Tigris front all Turkish positions from Sannalyat to Kut have been secured and that the town of Kut el Amara automatically passed into the hands of the British.

ACTION FOR DAMAGES FOR FLOODED PROPERTY ABOVE BUCKHORN DAM

Test Case Before Mr. Justice Audette is Underway.

Mr. Justice Audette of the Exchequer Court is today at the City Council Chamber presiding over the case of Hopwood vs. The King, an action for damages arising out of injury to his property at Stoney Lake, alleged to have been caused by reason of the water having been raised when construction work was in progress at Buckhorn dam.

Mr. G. W. Hatton, Crown Attorney, is acting for the Crown. The action is a test case. Capt. J. H. Burnham, M.P., is assisting the plaintiff in the presentation of his case. A number of other property owners claim damages for injury to their properties, due to the land having been flooded.

Wm. J. Hopwood described the property alleged to have suffered damage as the result of action taken at the dam. His property, situated 20 or 25 miles from the dam, was purchased by him in 1900 from Alex. Elliott and others. In low water it was possible to communicate from the island to the mainland on dry sand. Witness told of improvements made at the island up to 1908. The water was raised and on making investigation he was informed it was due to work at the Buckhorn dam. He saw G. H. McClellan, then superintendent of the canal, the result being he was awarded $150, upon which he executed a release. The release provided that no further claim for damages would be made so long as the water was no higher than in 1907, 1908 and 1909.

On the advice of the Government appraiser he raised the stone work protection at his land 18 inches. In the spring of 1912 he found the water had risen 22 inches above the mark he made in 1908 or 1909. It was two inches above the stonework. It was in respect to the damage caused that he made his claim. The damage claim was made up as follows: Bridge, $50; trees and vegetable garden, $50; ice house, $25; ice and sawdust, $10; boat house, $5; making a total of $140.

The cross-examination of the plaintiff by Mr. Hatton was in progress this afternoon.

BREAK INTO FOE LINES

French Destroy Some Shelters and Get Prisoners.

3 PLANES DOWN

Enemy Points Bombed By Squadrons of Aviators.

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

PARIS, Feb. 26.—Late yesterday French detachments broke into German lines near Ville sur Tourbe, 25 miles west of Verdun, destroyed a number of shelters and brought back prisoners and materials, says today's official announcement. Two surprise attacks by the enemy on one of our trenches north of Beauline, northeast of Soissons, the others on one of our posts north of Avocourt were broken up. We took prisoners, including an officer.

There was intermittent cannonading at some points on the front.

Yesterday our pilots brought down three German airplanes. One of these machines fell in our lines near Mersy, in the vicinity of Rheims, a second south of Pinon in the Aisne, a third southeast of Altkirch. Our squadrons threw numerous projectiles on bivouacs and munition depots near Spincourt, where a number of explosions were heard; on aviation grounds and hangars at Faxanoy, on railways at Sars sur Moselle and on railway stations at Bouse Willer and Woelfling, in the region of Wissembourg.

Galt has set a record for giving to the Canadian Patriotic Fund among Canadian cities with a contribution of $7.15 per head. The grand total will reach $26,000. The objective of the campaign was $75,000.

PETERBOROUGH, MONDAY, FEBRUARY 26, 1917

THE LIGHTNING STRIKES NEW BRUNSWICK

IN THE PROVINCIAL ELECTION held in New Brunswick in 1912 the Conservative party captured forty out of the forty-two seats. The party leader at that time was J. K. Flemming, and he was unable to stand fast under the prosperity of an almost unanimous following. Two years ago he was driven from public life discredited. It was proved beyond a doubt that he had personally profited by the sale of the resources of the province, and he was cast out.

Saturday another general election was held in the province down by the sea. The returns to hand at the time of writing show that the Government has been defeated by one seat and that the Opposition are almost sure to win four ridings in which elections will be held today. The drop from a majority of forty to an even break cannot be regarded as anything but a disastrous defeat for the Conservative party in New Brunswick.

There is not a prominent Conservative in Peterborough who, while he deplores the conditions that existed under ex Premier Flemming's regime, will not rejoice at the result of Saturday's vote. It proves that the party will not stand for the grafters and that the people have reached a stage of development in which they insist upon the same standard of morality for public men as they look for in the private affairs of life. Whatever may be his politics, the crafty boodler has no place in popular favor today. The electors can be duped no longer. They will not extend the same charitable consideration to wrong-doing that they exercised only a few years ago. The grafter must efface himself or the people will dispose of his case when opportunity offers.

The history made by Manitoba and British Columbia has been repeated in New Brunswick. There is always danger when any government is given a practically free hand. The lack of a virile opposition will corrupt the public morals of most political leaders. But the day of reckoning comes at last, when the polls are thrown open and the people are called upon to record their verdict. However low political morality may sink, so far as the leaders are concerned, that of the people as a whole seems to improve as the years pass.

The lesson to be learned from the New Brunswick election is such that any man can understand. When Flemming was forced out of the premiership the party failed to purge itself entirely of his presence and that of some of his associates in wrong-doing. Cast out of the leadership and read out of the provincial party, he was taken up by the Federal wing and groomed for a place in the Dominion Parliament. This is where the mistake was made, where evil-doing was condoned. Flemming appeared as the champion of Conservative candidates in bye-elections, and in each case his interference meant disaster. That fact should have prepared the party for the fate that overtook them Saturday. It is no punishment for a man to be deprived of one honor only to have another thrust upon him.

Manitoba, British Columbia and New Brunswick in turn speak out in no uncertain terms. Alberta and Saskatchewan are yet to be heard from, and, in the light of present events, the result in each of the two provinces last mentioned is not hard to forecast. Let the party spirit be dropped and let there be universal gratitude that the people of Canada are concerning themselves more with the morality of legislatures than they are with their political complexion.

Flemming was still nurtured by the party he dragooned. Had he been cast out completely, that party might have survived the exposure. But with the Jonah still on board the ship foundered.

The Conservative party in Ontario jettisoned the single war grafter who brought dishonor upon it. Two members of the Dominion Parliament who sought to enrich themselves by war profits were promptly read out of the party and expelled from the House. There are hidebound partisans who still try to condone the faults of the discredited public servants and to reinstate them. Let the verdict of New Brunswick electors be put up as a finger post on the political highway.

It was the rugged honesty of the late Sir James Whitney that gave him his strength. The party he left behind him is still free from even a suspicion of scandal. In the Federal field all efforts to bring reproach on the integrity of the Administration have broken down, although the country has come through a crisis in which the opportunities for high-handedness were never greater. So long as that record is maintained, so long will the party be safe in Province and Dominion. When either departs from that record, it cannot hope to escape the fate of the governments defeated and discredited in three of the provinces of the Federation.

THE WRONG HORN OF THE DILEMMA.

IT IS QUITE POSSIBLE to lay hold of the wrong horn of a dilemma or to take up the consideration of a problem [illegible] end to. In the struggle for existence the first essential is that the people be taught how to make money. That accomplished, training in the art of saving will be in order. To attempt to teach the latter first would be simply so much time wasted in theoretical instruction. There would be little sense in lecturing the pupils in the public schools on the beauties of English literature before they were able to read even a nursery story. Instruction to be thorough must be logical in sequence.

The members of the School Board show the wisdom of practical business men when they deal with essentials rather than with finely-spun theories. An industrial school for the practical training of the young is of vastly more moment than a crude and unnecessary system of banking in the public schools, a clear misplacement of a legitimate business that can be just as effectively carried out in the regular channels. Giving a child pennies to place in a savings bank does nothing towards instructing him as to how the money is earned. The child rarely places the true commercial value upon a gift. Train him for the life struggle that lies before him, find out with what gifts, mechanical or artistic, he has been equipped by nature, and develop them.

Find work for the masses, and the prosperity of any community is assured. Preaching thrift will avail nothing so long as the wolf keeps up his wierd howling at the door. We have banks in plenty now, every one of them willing to encourage thrift, and we have life insurance agents devoted to the same altruistic mission. The one thing lacking in Peterborough's educational plan is an industrial school. It is idle to grasp at straws while there is a life-preserver within reach.

THE SONGS OUR MOTHERS SANG.

PERHAPS THEY ARE sadly lacking in musical culture and modern artistic taste, yet there are large numbers of church worshippers who still prefer—and have the courage to say so—the sacred songs, crude as they may be in metre and wierd in tune, that the stern Covenanters sang at their conventicles, to the most sublime anthem that any choir can render. The songs and hymns that our mothers sang have not lost their charm even though the tendency of modern days is to exalt melody over sentiment.

One local choir, one of the best trained and most efficient in the city, recognizes and caters to the taste of this class in the congregation. Every Sunday evening the musical program contains at least one selection that carries the hearers back to the days of their youth and revive memories of those whose voices are silent forever. Last night's special selection was that old plantation melody, "Steal Away to Jesus," and those who had the pleasure of listening to it will agree that it was one of the finest musical treats ever enjoyed in this city. The old Fisk choir of colored singers who first made the hymn famous years ago never rendered it with more taste or feeling.

In musical talent Peterborough ranks second to no city in Ontario. The church choirs are especially fortunate in talented and enthusiastic directors. It may be that in this respect the people fail to fully appreciate their privileges. High-class musical performances put on at infinite pains after months of careful training are often poorly patronized. Some day a director will catch the true spirit of the time and prepare a program of old favorite songs. When he does a surprise will await him in the throng that will turn out to hear it.

THE MOVE FOR BETTER HIGHWAYS

The prospects are exceptionally bright for the success of the Fourth Canadian and International Good Roads Congress, to be held under the auspices of the Dominion Good Roads Association. The scene of this year's congress is to be the capital city, Ottawa, and the convention and exhibition will be held in the horticultural Building in Lansdowne Park, on Bank Street, twelve minutes from the centre of the city by street car.

The congress will assemble on Tuesday, April 10, the day after Easter Monday and will continue until the following Saturday. The Horticultural Building, which has been placed at the disposal of the congress by the city authorities, is especially adapted for the purposes of such a gathering, being of brick construction with concrete foor, the interior being spacious and bright. The downstairs portion will be given up to the annual exhibition of road machinery, materials and accessories, while upstairs there is a large convention hall, together with committee rooms, and accommodation for the registration bureau. Freight sidings give unusual facilities for the unloading and reloading of heavy exhibits, while the street cars pass within a few yards of the building.

An interesting program is being prepared, with papers and addresses by Canadian and outside experts, while practical road builders from Canada and the United States will be present and take part in the informative discussions which are an important feature of every congress. Profiting by the experience of the past, it is the intention to have the different lecturers and speakers simplify their deliverances as much as possible, so as to make them clear to to the non-technical delegates, especially those from the rural districts, of whom there are each year an increasing number.

In conjunction with the congress, the fourth annual good roads exhibition will be conducted on a bigger scale than ever. Leading Canadian and United States manufacturers of road machinery and materials have announced their intention of placing on view a full line of their products, ranging from the simplest tools to the most modern inventions. Materials, both in the form of samples and constructed sections, will be shown in great variety, and there will be miniature models of roads, and a wide range of engineering instruments and other accessories for the making of good roads.

"This is My Own, My Native Town"

"Let me give you a tip on a little matter of wisdom," remarked the travelling salesman, as he pulled his chair close to that of the wise-looking man in the barber shop.

"Let's have it" said the wise man "I am inured to hardship."

"Well," continued the salesman, "you heard those last two customers getting into that argument while they were paying the cashier, didn't you? You saw them begin as friends and end as if they were going to head for the nearest alley. That all came from their getting personal about their old home towns."

"I heard them talking about the respective merits of Bumperville and Yazoo and some more jerkwater places. They can't have much on their minds or they wouldn't waste their time on such trivialities. Especially that town of Yazoo. Of all the forsaken jumping off places that was ever put on the map it is Yazoo. Yazoo is——"

"See here, sir, if it's all the same to you, I wish you wouldn't pass any uncomplimentary remarks about Yazoo."

"Why? What's Yazoo to you? I know what I'm talking about. Yazoo is the limit. The people who have to live in Yazoo ough to get a house from the Dominion Government for doing it."

"So that's what you think of Yazoo, eh? Yazoo is the prettiest little burg that ever had a postoffice and a siding. What did they ever do to you in Yazoo that you should talk that way about it? I wouldn't care if you panned a town like Pickleford, Lindsay, Dogwood or Sidville."

"That's where we differ about towns. You see, I travel a great deal. And when I make Yazoo I have to put up at the gosh durndest one horse institution with a rotten front porch full of men whose mouths bulge with quids and a livery stable on one side of the place and a feed store on the other."

"You've described it, sir; you've described it, but I wouldn't call that a blemish. That's Tibbins' livery, isn't it? Gosh, when I remember the fun we had sitting among those old coaches and riding on the back of Old Chief to the water-trough in the yard, and cracking Bill's whips. Why, when I think of it——"

"Say, you talk as if you know the place."

"Yes, sir, I do. It's my home town. That's why I love it."

"Well, it's mine, too. That's why I went away."

EDITOR'S MAIL

Editor Review: As a constant reader and a close student of the policy of your paper, I am sorry to see The Review, generally on the right side of every question, running with the mob of fanatics who call themselves equal suffragettes— or suffragists if the latter term is insisted upon—and who are certainly dragging Ontario to perdition. I have come to the conclusion that owing to the war, the high cost of living, or for some other reason not so apparent, the majority of the Canadian people have gone mad and that our legislators are becoming infected with the same malady. There was a time when our public men had backbone enough not to be influenced by every puff of popular breeze.

History is all we require to prove that when a country goes at cross purposes to the plan of the Almighty that country seals its own doom. The Divine plan never took into consideration votes for women. Man was created to fill one place in the economy of the world while woman was intended to remain supreme in another. Upon man devolves the duty of providing the home, upon woman that of keeping the house in order. It is a fair division of the labor of living. Woman, too, has been entrusted with the task of raising children, moulding the character and the destiny of future generations as she rocks the cradle and hums gently the lullaby to her offspring.

What class of women are agitating for the right to vote? It is not the home lover or the one with the maternal instincts, but those who would shirk the responsibilities of maternity. Let them have their way and all human and Divine plans will be overturned and national decay will inevitably be the result.

ANTI-SUFFRAGIST.

We regret that the author of the above refuses to let his name go into print with his letter. It is no breach of confidence, however, to say that he is a prominent citizen and a politician of note, possessed of both talent and ambition, and though this latter may not yet have been attained, there is ample time as he is comparatively young in years. As to his talent and his fidelity to his party, both have been proved to a demonstration. So sincere is he in this matter that he declares that if the women of Ontario are given the vote he will retire from active participation in politics, abandon his own right to exercise the franchise, and smother all his hopes for a public career. Those who know him well are convinced that he will keep his word. The Review will welcome all discussion of this subject, anonymous or otherwise.—Ed.

"I suppose you built up your colossal fortune by attending strictly to your own business?"

"Yes," replied Mr. Dustin Stax, "but I made it my business to keep informed as to what the other people were doing."

A little girl about five or six years old was sent by her sister to post a letter. As the letter was heavy, she was told to have it weighed and, if necessary, to buy and affix another stamp.

To the surprise of her sister, she returned triumphantly with the penny

"Didn't you get it weighed?" said the sister.

"Oh, no," said the wee mite; when nobody was looking I popped it in."

EXTREME WEAKNESS AND SUFFERING

Read How Mrs. Goodling got Relief and Strength.

York, Pa.—"I have used Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and found it to be all you say it is. I was so sick that I could not stand at my sink to wash dishes and I could not sit without a pillow under me. I had the doctor every few days but since I have taken the Compound I don't have to send for him. I have had three children and could not raise any of them, but since I have taken the Compound I have a bright baby boy. I advise every suffering woman to try it and get relief. It has done wonders for me."—Mrs. CATHARINE GOODLING, 138 E. King Street, York, Pa.

When a medicine has been successful in bringing health to so many, no woman has a right to say without trying it, "I do not believe it will help me." There must be more than a hundred thousand women in this country who, like Mrs. Goodling, have proven what wonders Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound can do for weak and ailing women. Try it and see for yourself.

If there are any complications you don't understand, write Lydia E. Pinkham Medicine Co. (confidential), Lynn, Mass.

Found the Hidden Force

A country school teacher, in endeavoring to explain to his class what compressed air was, brought his bicycle into the room and leaned it up against the wall.

"Now," he remarked, "under the outer covering of that back wheel there is a hidden force. What is it?"

"Injy rubber," said one smart youth.

"No, try again."

The boy tried again, as did nearly every member of the class, but without success. At length one of the youngsters, who had been making a close inspection of the machine turned on the teacher with a beaming face.

"I have it!" he exclaimed. "It's wind—jest wind!"

After commending the youngster the teacher asked how he discovered the "hidden force."

"Why," was the astounding reply, "I've jest stuck my knife in to see!"

A Sordid View

"Do you know that our bookkeeper is short in his accounts?"

"Yes, a few hundred bones. Consequently he works every night and never wants a vacation. Let him alone. We're ahead of the game."

Nobody ever ran a successful corner in happiness.

Red Eye roared with rage. It was an offense to him that any of the folk should dare to withstand him. His hand shot out and clutched Crooked Leg by the neck. The latter sank his teeth into Red Eye's arm, but the next moment, with a broken neck, Crooked Leg was floundering and squirming on the ground. The Singing One screeched and gibbered. Red Eye seized her by the hair of her head and dragged her toward his cave. He handled her roughly when the climb began, and he dragged and hauled her up into the cave.

We were very angry, insanely, vociferously angry. Beating our chests, bristling and gnashing our teeth, we gathered together in our rage. We felt the prod of gregarious instinct, the drawing together as though for united action, the impulse toward co-operation. In dim ways this need for united action was impressed upon us. But there was no way to achieve it because there was no way to express it. We did not turn to, all of us, and destroy Red Eye, because we lacked a vocabulary. We were vaguely thinking thoughts for which there were no thought symbols. These thought symbols were yet to be slowly and painfully invented.

We tried to freight sound with the vague thoughts that flitted like shadows through our consciousness. The Hairless One began to chatter loudly. By his noises he expressed anger against Red Eye and desire to hurt Red Eye. Thus far he got, and thus far we understood. But when he tried to express the co-operative impulse that stirred within him his noises became gibberish. Then Big Face, with brow bristling and chest pounding, began to chatter. One after another of us joined in the orgy of rage, until even old Marrow Bone was mumbling and spluttering with his cracked voice and withered lips. Some one seized a stick and began pounding a log. In a moment he had struck a rhythm. Unconsciously our yells and exclamations yielded to this rhythm. It had a soothing effect upon us, and before we knew it, our rage forgotten, we were in the full swing of a beehee council.

These beehee councils splendidly illustrate the inconsecutiveness and inconsequentiality of the folk. Here were we, drawn together by mutual rage and the impulse toward co-operation, led off into forgetfulness by the establishment of a rude rhythm. We were sociable and gregarious, and these singing and laughing councils satisfied us. In ways the beehee council was an adumbration of the councils of primitive man and of the great national assemblies and international conventions of latter-day man. But we folk of the younger world lacked speech, and whenever we were so drawn together we precipitated babel, out of which arose a unanimity of rhythm that contained within itself the essentials of art yet to come. It was art nascent.

There was nothing long continued about these rhythms that we struck. A rhythm was soon lost, and pandemonium reigned until we could find the rhythm again or start a new one. Sometimes half a dozen rhythms would be swinging simultaneously, each rhythm backed by a group that strove ardently to drown out the other rhythms.

In the intervals of pandemonium each chattered, cut up, hooted, screeched and danced, himself sufficient unto himself, filled with his own ideas and volitions to the exclusion of all others, a veritable center of the universe, divorced for the time being from any unanimity with the other universe centers leaping and yelling around him. Then would come the rhythm—a clapping of hands, the beating of a stick upon a log, the example of one that leaped with repetitions or the chanting of one that uttered, explosively and regularly, with inflection that rose and fell: "A-bang, a-bang! A-bang, a-bang!" One after another of the self centered folk would yield to it, and soon all would be dancing or chanting in chorus. "Ha-ah, ha-ah, ha-ah-ha!" was one of our favorite choruses, and another was, "Eh-wah, eh-wah, eh-wah-hah!"

And so, with mad antics, leaping, reeling and overbalancing, we danced and sang in the somber twilight of the primeval world, inducing forgetfulness, achieving unanimity and working ourselves up into sensuous frenzy. And so it was that our rage against Red Eye was soothed away by art, and we screamed the wild choruses of the hee-hee council until the night warned us of its terrors, and we crept away to our holes in the rocks, calling softly to one another, while the stars came out and darkness settled down.

We were afraid only of the dark. We had no germs of religion, no conceptions of an unseen world. We knew only the real world, and the things we feared were the real things, the concrete dangers, the flesh and blood animals that preyed. It was they that made us afraid of the dark, for darkness was the time of the hunting animals. It was then that they came out of their lairs and pounced upon one from the dark wherein they lurked invisible.

Possibly it was out of this fear of the real denizens of the dark that the fear of the unreal denizens was later to develop and culminate in a whole and mighty unseen world. As imagination grew it is likely that the fear of death increased until the folk that were to come projected this fear into the dark and peopled it with spirits. I think the Fire People had already begun to be afraid of the dark in this fashion, but the reasons we folk had for breaking up our hee-hee councils and fleeing to our holes were old Saber Tooth, the lions and the jackals, the wild dogs and the wolves, and all the hungry, meat eating breeds.

Lop Ear got married. It was the second winter after our adventure journey, and it was most unexpected. He gave me no warning. The first I knew was one twilight when I climbed the cliff to our cave. I squeezed into the entrance and there I stopped. There was no room for me. Lop Ear and his mate were in possession, and she was none other than my sister, the daughter of my stepfather, the Chatterer.

I tried to force my way in. There was space only for two, and that space was already occupied. Also, they had me at a disadvantage, and, what with the scratching and hair pulling I received, I was glad to retreat. I slept that night, and for many nights, in the connecting passage of the double cave. From my experience it seemed reasonably safe. As the two folk had dodged old Saber Tooth, and as I had dodged Red Eye, so it seemed to me that I could dodge the hunting animals by going back and forth between the two caves.

I had forgotten the wild dogs. They were small enough to go through any passage that I could squeeze through. One night they nosed me out. Had they entered both caves at the same time they would have got me. As it was, followed by some of them through the passage, I dashed out the mouth of the other cave. Outside were the rest of the wild dogs. They sprang for me as I sprang for the cliff wall and began to climb. One of them, a lean and hungry brute, caught me in mid-leap. His teeth sank into my thigh muscles and he nearly dragged me back. He held on, but I made no effort to dislodge him, devoting my whole effort to climbing out of reach of the rest of the brutes.

WHO'S WHO IN WOMEN'S BRITISH SHELL WORK

How Women Work And Are Paid--Inspection Important--Some Useful Facts.

An English writer gives the following explanations of terms used in munitions plants: The trucker is a laborer who pushes the shells on low-wheeled trucks from one "street" to the next. Each trucker has a note book in which she writes the number of finished shells she carts away. Truckers do not work on the bonus system, but receive a fixed wage, varying from 20s. to 30s. a week.

The machinist is the girl in the khaki overall and cap who operates the lathe. She does not require any mechanical knowledge, for the machine works automatically. Nevertheless, because the steel varies in substance some judgment is required, and so the machinist's work is classed as semi-skilled. She is paid a minimum wage of £1 a week for the day and 25s. a week for the night shift, both of which are of twelve hours' duration.

Measured by Shells

In addition she can earn a bonus paid on the principle of overtime. To her time does not mean hours, but shells. For example, in rough-turning 18-pounders, four shells are equivalent to one hour. If at the end of her days' work (ten hours in length, because her meal time is deducted) she has completed sixty shells, fifteen hours' work will be registered on her work card; so she will receive 3s. 4d. standard money and 1s. 8d. bonus for her additional five hours' work.

Many Are the Viewers

The viewer is the person who passes the shells on from one process to the next, having first tested them by accurate guaging. Should the shells be faulty they are marked with yellow, red, or green paint, and are "trucked on" when possible to correcting machines. Viewers are paid at the same rate as machinists, earning a bonus according to the number of shells viewed per hour. This viewer must not be confused with the final viewer, whose work is exceedingly responsible, and who is paid at a considerably higher rate; nor with the Government viewer, who is sent by the Ministry of Munitions and is responsible to it for the finished work of the firm.

GENERALS' NICKNAMES

Corporal writes: Most of our generals are known to Mr. Atkins by nicknames, some complimentary, others not. Thus, Sir Douglas Haig is known to his men as "Lucky Haig," or "Haig the Thruster"; Sir William Robertson is "Old Any Complaints," so called from his invariable question, "Any complaints, men?" General Gorringe is "Orange" to the soldier in Mesopotamia; Sir Archibald Hunter is "Fighting Archie"; General Townshend is beloved as "Tommy"; Sir John Maxwell is "Conky Maxwell"; General Birdwood is either "Birdie" or "Lean Birdwood."

TOMMY COMPARED WITH JACQUES AND BEPPO

Neatness and Coolness of New Armies Strike Lord Northcliffe---What He Found in Italy.

Lord Northcliffe, from somewhere in Italy, writes: To speak of our British Tommy—with whom, of course, I include his Australasian and Canadian cousins—the French Jacques, and the Italian Beppo as the three chief Allied fighters on the western front is not to overlook that other heroic figure, the Belgian Jean. Tommy has proved an altogether unexpected character, even to those who thought they knew him. He is not in the least like Kipling's soldiers, who represented a past generation. One essential in which he differs from all the soldiers of the world is his neatness and smartness. Neatness and smartness are akin to physical well-being, that is to say, to health, and with armies as with cities health comes first.

For sheer coolness and bulldog tenacity there is no one to approach him. In the horrible days of the early part of the war, when we were practically unprovided with shells or guns, he stood the appalling German artillery bombardment in the trenches round Ypres for days in a manner that made the Huns think him almost superhuman. Now that he is provided with guns of all kinds and especially with bombs, in throwing which he is a master, he has come into his own.

Gaiety of Pollus

Jacques' habits are altogether different from those of our men, and in many ways his character does not resemble ours. In such homely, simple matters as a chanson or a fragment of [illegible] the differences in national characteristics may often be revealed. The songs of the French soldier are quite different from ours. The French march with a quicker step, and very good marchers they are, and throw out their jokes right and left to every passer-by, and especially when a pretty girl is in sight. I once drove behind a very fat chauffeur through the French lines, and the poor man was almost chaffed off his seat by the pollus. All the strength, energy and jocularity is largely produced by soup and bread, with a comparatively small modicum of wine.

Beppo a Worker

Beppo, the typical Italian soldier, wears a steel helmet similar to that of the French, very smart grey clothes, and is immensely strong. He has done most of the heavy work in the Western hemisphere for the last quarter of a century. Come of a nation that has given the world some of its best masons and quarrymen, we are not surprised to find him a wonderful trench builder and road maker. He is able to withstand heat that neither the Englishman nor Frenchman could endure for long. And he can, and does, endure for seven months in the year a degree of cold rarely felt in any part of the United Kingdom. He has been patient for years. He comes of patient stock, and he is fortunate in the possession of one of the greatest generals of the war. He means to get rid of the Austrian menace once and for all.

PATROLLING THE SEA

Life in a Trawler Rounding up "Suspects"

Writing in the London Daily Mail, J. B. Chapman says: Our indicator points to "slow, ahead." We have begun our vigil, and for a week our speed, unless the abnormal happens, will not exceed four knots. To all appearance, and especially in the dark, we are a small vessel crawling along in an aimless way. In reality we are as watchful as an old cat at a mouse hole. The crew above deck is divided into two, for the purposes of the watch, each watch being in charge of a second-hand. With him are three other members of the crew, one of whom takes the wheel for an hour, and the two others spend two hours on the lookout. Thus each of the trio has one hour steering, two on the lookout, and one on deck.

The lieutenant is never actually off duty and most of his repose is taken in the afternoon. At night, in the inky darkness—and darkness at sea is always intense—he generally shares the watch with the second-hands. Through the night glasses he searches here, there, and everywhere. With the naked eye the sailor can see an object long before the landsman, but aided by binoculars nothing escapes him. The night watch is a time of acute tension; huge vessels on our bows are going or coming like fast-moving shadows. Not only must we avoid them, but it is also imperative to ascertain who they are.

In this work we see the officers of the patrol service at their best. They know the jib and boom and hull of every merchant vessel worth knowing. Absolutely fearless, they round up all suspects and "go for" the enemy if he shows up. With our fires banked down when dusk appears, and the propeller only just revolving to keep "way on," we seemingly drift along. But let danger threaten, and a sudden signal galvanizes apparent apathy into fighting activity. How we should do it must be left unsaid. But let me say that two days after leaving our base we were told by wireless that another flotilla in an adjacent section had "bagged" a U-boat and sent it and the crew to the bottom.

Repairing Battleships

So satisfactory is the organization of ship-building and repairing, that after the Battle of Jutland, within ten days, even the most seriously damaged warship was able to return to sea. Before even the ships reach their base, the Admiralty are fully informed of the extent of the damage to each particular ship. By the time that ship reaches her base, plates and new parts of machinery were already in progress of construction. Most of the ships came out of the action without a scratch, though they had inflicted tremendous damage on the enemy. In no case was there disclosed any defect in the machinery.

HELP TO CULTIVATE THE VACANT LOTS.

"Will you see to it that every member of your society and all those over whom you have an influence will take part this coming spring in not only utilizing your own gardens but every vacant lot in your locality for the purpose of producing the products that are so necessary to maintain our people at home and our armies at the front?" asks J. Lockie Wilson in a letter to the Secretary of the Ontario Horticultural Society.

The Department of Agriculture is prepared to co-operate in any manner with the society in this necessary undertaking, and asks that it promptly call a meeting of its members to arrange details of the work.

HOLD MEETING ON WEDNESDAY

TO HEAR MAJ. CAMPBELL, CHIEF RECRUITING OFFICER.

Major Campbell, chief recruiting officer for this district, is in the city preparing for the meeting of the citizens at the recreation rooms of the Armories Wednesdya.

He has an important announcement to make which will be of great interest to those who are interested in the success of the 247th Battalion. If sufficient support is not forthcoming, it would not be surprising if the Peterborough battalion was absorbed by another unit, while, if a united effort is made to convince Major Campbell that the city is ready to help in every way possible, the 247th may take in another unit that is not up to strength

LIBERALS WIN BY CLOSE LEAD IN NEW BRUNSWICK

Indications Are That Conservative Party Has Been Turned Out of Office---Four Seats to Decide.

ST. JOHN, Feb. 26.—The Murray Government of New Brunswick was defeated Saturday. The Liberal opposition, going to the country with three seats in the Legislature, carried 23 out of 44 seats balloted for, and, on the strength of north shore returns, have prospects of taking all four in Gloucester today. This would give them 27 seats in a House of 48, or a comfortable working majority of five, after election of a Speaker. Should the Murray Government carry Gloucester, which appears unlikely, they would have but one of a majority after electing a Speaker and two ministers with portfolios among the defeated Saturday would have to be immediately replaced. This is regarded as an impossibility, so whatever the result in Gloucester the Government seems doomed.

Should the Opposition win in Gloucester the victory will be complete. Out of 17 ridings the Government carried but six, with a split in St. John City.

Defeated Ministers

Hon. D. V. Landry, a member of the original Hazen Government of 1908, and for some years provincial secretary, was soundly beaten, with his ticket, in Kent. Hon. A. R. Slipp, Minister of Lands and Mines since Feb. 1, fell with his colleagues in Queen's. Hon Arthur Culligan, member of the government without portfolio, ran even behind his defeated colleague in Restigouche. Hon. C. W. Robertson, former Liberal Premier, finally disposed of Dr. O. B. Price, the aspiring federal candidate in Westmoreland, with a popular victory in Moncton City. Dr. W. F. Roberts of the Opposition ticket in this city, defeated Philip Grannan, one of the old members.

Restriction of Imports May Mean Decline in Potatoes

Said to be Immense Supply in the Dominion.

OTTAWA, Feb. 26. — The announcement of Premier Lloyd George of the restriction of British imports and the regulation of prices of wheat, potatoes, oats, etc., created a profound sensation in Ottawa, and the importance of the measures from the point of view of their effect upon prices in Canada was at once realized. It has ever been a business creed that the prices of certain commodities in Canada should be regulated by the Liverpool market, and now that these prices have been fixed by the Imperial Government, not only for the Liverpool market, but every other market in Great Britain, it seems certain that there will be an immediate effect shown in prices in this country.

Potatoes are selling around $3 a bag in Ottawa, and the British price is $1.17. It is said that there is an immense supply of potatoes in the Dominion, especially in New Brunswick, and that these were being held for an increase in price. If this is so, the anticipated increase can hardly materialize, and the prospect is that there will be a sharp decline in the price of potatoes in this country, with a plentiful supply on the market. The wheat markets of Winnipeg and Chicago at once showed the effect of the $1.80 per bushel price fixed by the British government, and fell to $1.75.

Relief to Consumer.

This seems to indicate coming relief to the consumer in the direction of prices of farm produce, and if this is the case where commodities will be sure to follow the downward trend. Salmon, the importation of which has been cut in half, is certain to be cheaper. The price of apples will be lower. This was the first admission made by dealers, for Great Britain is Canada's largest apple market, and importation is entirely prohibited. The exclusion of lumber will make the supply available in Canada very plentiful, but whether that will make prices easier is difficult to say at present.

There is another side of the question to be considered. The prohibition of certain imports will increase the ocean tonnage available for the transportation of other commodities, and this may cause a scarcity in Canada in other directions. The situation is now being thoroughly canvassed, and the next few days will show the result.

Al. Wilson's Songs Were Favorites

Mr. Al Wilson and his capable company were given a very cordial welcome at the Grand on Saturday, when "My Killarney Rose" was presented before large audiences. Mr. Wilson delighted everybody with his singing and his portrayal of Tom Casey, the happy rover, who by accident became embroiled in a love affair and showed himself equal to the ordeal. All the characters were in able hands.

THE DAY FOR SHAMGARS

Men Who Act Quickly in the Hour of Emergency.

"Take time by the forelock, is a principle so necessary in these modern days," said Rev. R. G. Peever, B.D., in the course of his sermon at George St. Church last evening when he placed the story of Shamgar the farmer boy who stepped into the breach in the time of emergency, slew the Philistines and saved Israel before a large congregation. Mr. Peever pointed out how important it was that quick action be taken in the time of emergency. With many lives it had been the difference between success and failure, and when opportunities had been seized in the hour of emergency, success had been attained.

Mr. Peever told of how the Rothschilds' fortune had had its foundation in the quick action of one of the family, who, hearing of the defeat of Napolean at Waterloo hurried to England and bought up securities before the news of victory reached there

The defeat of the Asquith Government because of inability to meet the emergency and act quickly was given as an illustration in contrast to the deed of the youthful Shamgar.

COSSACKS ENTERTAIN WAR CORRESPONDENTS

The "Little Colonel" Could Foot it With His Men---Novel and Jolly Experience With Fine Russians.

A special correspondent with the Russian army writes: I little thought, when I heard "Tipperary" sung by the British troops of the "first seven divisions" on the road between Cambrai and Le Cateau, that I should ever join in singing it at a Cossack officers' mess in a Polish village just behind the Russian front. Yet that is what happened.

It was not a long dinner so far as the dishes were concerned. We had caviare and pickled herrings; soup with a huge meat pasty; Caucasian "shashliks," which are small pieces of mutton grilled on a skewer and served on it with small pieces of ham in between; Crimean bottled fruits. We could have got through easily in half an hour. But that is not the hospitable Cossack way. From the very start there were toasts, each one with what old-fashioned writers still call "musical honors," contributed by the officers themselves. To do us honor they had composed a number of little verses, which they sang from scraps of paper, passing these about from one to the other with jolly schoolboy smiles and amused glances at us. This kind of thing:

We are glad to see you;
  You represent the Press.
We drink to you and your efforts
  To make the world progress.

Clinking and Dancing

Every now and then there was a kind of "General Post." We all rose, walked about the room, and did not sit down again until we had clinked glasses with every other person present. Dinner at last over, we went outside and watched the dancers, and suddenly we saw the little colonel in his full-skirted riding coat reaching almost to the heels (the Cossack unform) rush into the ring formed by the soldiers, the front row kneeling and clapping hands to beat time, and begin to shake a leg himself. Very neatly and nimbly he footed it, skirts flying, spurs jingling, the expression on his face quite serious, as he pirouetted and spun.

Helps Discipline

I can see the astonishment of British officers, especially colonels, when they read this. I can hear them ask, "How the blazes can discipline be kept up in such a regiment?" Well, strange as it sounds to those who wear King George's uniform, the discipline of a Cossack regiment is kept up by these very practices which [illegible] horrify them. The men see nothing undignified in the singing and dancing of their officers. They are not tempted to be unduly familiar. They respect and admire their colonel all the more because he can dance as well as any of them. No one can lead Cossacks save a man who makes them feel "he is one of us."

HUMORS OF THE "TANKS"

Iron Caterpillars Can do Everything But Fly

In the Daily Chronicle Mr. Gibbs said: A tank is walking up the high street of Flers with the British army cheering behind. Some other achievements of "the tank" mentioned by Mr. Gibbs are as follows:

It "leaned" against a broken wall until it fell, and then crawled over the debris. It went irresistibly through High Wood, the trees smashing like match sticks before it. It went up to machine gun emplacements, "crushed the gun under its ribs," and passed on, spitting death at the demoralized Germans. It "stamped" down a dug-out as though it were a wasps' nest. It "sat on" heaps of ruins and fired down a village street. It went right through the old German trenches. It crashed through broken barns and houses, "straddled" a dug-out and fired enfilading shots down German trenches.

They can do nearly everything that you expect them not to do. The Germans know that they can cross trenches and navigate a crater-pitted field as successfully as they roll along the Albert road, and as for rifle and machine gun fire, they like it!

If you lashed one of them to the muzzle of a giant howitzer, it would be more than dented, but the direct application of big howitzer shells is a contingency that is extremely remote.

Trees do no bother it—they are mowed down like corn. The worse the obstacle, the more persevering the "tank." If you saw one at a distance you would think of the pictures of prehistoric monsters; at close range you would marvel at the ingenuity and security of its shell. But it has its limitations. It cannot fly.

PRICE OF MUNITIONS

Tragedies and Queer Incidents of a London Explosion

When London had its great munitions factory explosion, killing forty, early in 1917, there were many peculier incidents. A few are as follows: The station officials at Reading, 36 miles from Paddington, heard the rumbling and telephoned to Paddington to learn the cause. The door of the council chamber at Acton was blown open while the council was sitting. A woman whose home was destroyed saved a wreath of immortelles and a girl carried a stuffed cockatoo under a glass shade. More than 200 people were treated at one hospital alone. In Camberwell a boy had the light of his bicycle lamp blown out. A Streatham resident resident said the explosion "seemed to lift the houses up." Domestic pets suffered greatly. Pet birds showed themselves peculiarly susceptible to shock. A child was sleeping in a kitchen when the wall and window collapsed on top of her, but she was uninjured.

"The house fell away from me, leaving me unhurt," said a woman who was standing at her front door when the explosion came. To calm the women in the store of Messrs. Jones and Higgins, Peckham, an assistant said a crate of crockery had fallen, while another said, "It's all right—workmen have dropped a ladder through the glass roof."

A boiler weighing three or four tons was shot into a field a quarter of a mile from the explosion, and a piece of metal weighing about a ton was flung through a shop front 200 yards away, killing the proprietor, who was attending to his work within.

POWER OF SUNLIGHT

Sun Creates Bone and Loosens Shell Fragments

A Swiss doctor in attendance on wounded soldiers writes as follows. What doctor a few years back would have imagined that the sun could reform lost bones? Yet this miracle is actually being performed in the case of British soldiers interned here. The process of bone formation by the sun is extremely slow, but the fact remains that bones shattered by shell or surgically removed are being replaced by new bone substances.

Splinters and minute particles of shell whose presence in the body had defied detection by the Rontgen rays are not only detected but actually loosened and eventually removed by the sun, while defective blood circulation, frequently occasioned by bullet wounds, is remedied. An Irish soldier arrived at Chateau d'Oex with a fracture in one of the principal bones of the left arm which had defied treatment by several eminent German surgeons. Examination at Chateau d'Oex showed that portions of the bone were missing, and to-day a new bone has been formed, and save for a little stiffness the arm is almost normal.

A Scotsman arrived with his right side paralysed—a condition due to nervous shock. Daily exposed to the sun during the month following arrival entirely removed the paralysis. An officer who lost a shinebone "somewhere in France" is watching the interesting process of the formation of a new bone. The doctors believe that the leg will be entirely restored before long.

In the Heintzman's tonal range each note of the human voice finds its perfect complement, sustaining it with sympathetic sweetness and flawless purity. This is why Tetrazzini and so many other world-famous singers insist on having a Heintzman at their concerts on their Canadian tours. And the beauty of it is that this tone is permanent—it does not deteriorate with age.

CAN ANY MAN THESE DAYS LIVE A CHRISTIAN LIFE?

Calebites Discuss Question and Workingmen Declare no Man Can be a True Christian and Earn His Living.

Dr. M. McClelland was expected to address the Calebites at St. Andrew's Church yesterday afternoon on the subject The Relation of Mentality and Spirituality to Health, but just before the hour of meeting he was called out of town to attend a patient. The address will be given next Sunday. On the invitation of Mr. G. W. Gilman, the class leader, Mr. R. J. Todd, Christian Science teacher, delivered an interesting address on the precepts of the cult which he represents.

Two of the questions sent in for discussion raised a warm debate in which a number of members took part, and more would have spoken but for lack of time. These questions were as follows:

"Is it possible for a man to lead a Christian life under present-day conditions, nad what is the standard by which he should be judged?

Is it possible for a man to obey the Divine command and love his enemies?

It was the first query that received the most attention from the various speakers. It was made apparent that there is Socialism firmly implanted in Peterborough. One employe of the largest manufacturing concern in the city flatly declared that no man can work in a shop these days and be a Christian.

"He would be fired quick if he tried that role," broke in another workingman in the class.

The first speaker does not believe that leading a Christian life is impossible, but maintains that it all depends on environment. For example, he sees nothing to prevent a minister of the Gospel from living up to the letter and the spirit of the Divine law.

"We hear a good deal these days about cultivating the land," said another speaker, "and yet there are so-called Christian men in this city who are holding their real estate at a price that will not be realized in fifty years. If any man is selected by the employers to make trouble in a shop, or to do something mean, the choice always falls upon a professor of religion."

W. Stevens, secretary of the Trades and Labor Council, valiantly asserted that a man can be a Christian and a bricklayer or while following any other honest calling.

Mr. W. I. Chisholm, of the Normal School staff, invited the speakers to attend next Sunday, when the discussion will be renewed. The debate yesterday was almost entirely one-sided, no one taking up the cause of the ministers or the employers.

The regular monthly week-night meeting of the Calebites will be held tomorrow night, when Mr. G. W. Gilman will discuss the American form of Government. Mr. Gilman is perfectly familiar with his subject and his address is sure to be instructive as well as interesting. All men are invited.

GERMANS GIVE UP POSITIONS BRITISH IN PETIT MIRAUMONT

Also Advance on Line One and a Half Miles Southeast of Serre---French Make Surprise Attacks.

LONDON, Feb. 25. — Germans vacated more important points on both banks of the Ancre. British troops made further progress south and east of Miraumont and entered the village of Petit Miraumont, and also advanced their line on a front of over one mile and a half southeast of Serre. Considerable artillery activity on both banks of the Somme is the official statement of last night.

PARIS, Feb. 25. — "Last night our reconnoitering parties made two successful surprise attacks on German posts in the forest of Apremont and north of Badonviller," says an official statement his afternoon.

HUNS RETIRE TO NEW POSITIONS

Ancre River Scene of Backward Movement by Germans Which Takes British Closer to Bapaume

British Headquarters in France, Feb. 25 (via London, Feb. 26.) — On one portion of the British front at least, the war today became a war of movement. Under cover of fog and mist, which have been particularly heavy in the past forty-eight hours, the Germans carried out the greatest retirement they have made on the Western Front in the last two years, and the British have swept into possession of Pys, Serre, Miraumont, and Petit Miraumont, including the famous Butte de Warlencourt, which has been the scene of some of the fiercest fighting of the war, and in places is deep with the bones of dead men.

The exact extent of the German retirement is not known tonight, but it is estimated that it approaches a depth of three miles at some points. British patrols are out in all directions, harassing the Germans and keeping in touch with their movements. Until they report it will not be possible to say just where the Germans have determined to fix their next line of resistance.

To Force Bapaume.

Nevertheless, it can be stated that the British now, or soon, will be in a position possibly to force the evacuation of Bapaume, which has been the key to the German position since the beginning of the battle of the Somme. The points which already have fallen into British hands have stood out in the history of the fighting on this front and have been most stubbornly defended. Only a week ago, when the British attacked on a two-mile front east and south of Miraumont and Pys, the German resistance was bitter and the high ground desired was won only after desperate hand-to-hand encounters and the taking of more than 800 German prisoners.

The British had been waiting for a clearing of the foggy weather before pressing the advance, but meantime it is apparent that the German high command decided to retire without any further fighting to stronger positions prepared well to the rear. Friday night fires were observed in the German front line trenches. They were only dimly visible through the thick mist of the particularly black night, but it was discovered that the flames issued from burning dugouts. Patrols sent forward reported the evacuation of the German outposts. Similar reports came from north of the Ancre, and by nightfall yesterday the British had established themselves in Petit Miraumont and advanced all along the line, meeting only with sniping resistance here and there. Today the British patrols pressed forward, keeping in close contact with the Germans, who had retreated a further two thousand yards during the night. Thus the way was opened to the ground which for months had been contested.

Explode Mine in Miraumont.

There were bursts of stiff resistance from German obstructing uarties which had been scattered in the rear of the retiring columns. Early today a big mine was exploded in the main street of Miraumont just before the British advance patrols entered.

It is evident now that the Germans, taking advantage of the last days of the recent heavy frost and hard ground, moved a great many of their guns well to the rear, leaving others forward to keep up a show of resistance. This they had been valiantly doing for the past three or four days, firing more rounds than any German guns in recent months. The reason for this is considered probably a desire to shoot up stores of ammunition which there was not time to remove.

The foggy, misty weather was ideal for the beginning of the Germans' retirement, as it completely hid the purpose of the movement from the prying eyes of the aeroplanes, which otherwise would have daily searched out the German positions.

Germans made prisoners yesterday and today said they had been left behind to walk about and fire their rifles and make as much noise as possible. They were delighted to be relieved from their thankless task.

HAS MEANING FOR CANADIANS

SPEECH BY LLOYD GEORGE IS NOT ALONE FOR THE PEOPLE OF ENGLAND.

OTTAWA, Feb 26. The Minister of Finance said that the speech of Mr. Lloyd George was a wonderful epoch-marking utterance, one of the greatest, if not the greatest, in parliamentary history. "There can be no doubt," said the Minister, "that the principles laid down by the British Premier are thoroughly sound and essential, having regard to the situation with which Great Britain is confronted at the present time. Two conditions have been chiefly responsible for the drastic action proposed. The first is the shortage of ocean tonnage, and the second is the state of sterling exchange.

"From the latter, which is a financial standpoint, it is the true policy of Great Britain to import only those essential things which she must have and cannot produce at home in sufficient quantity for herself and her Allies, whom she is helping to finance. These things will be found to be principally foodstuffs and munitions. She must find money abroad to pay for such of these as she purchases abroad. That is to say, for example, she must find money in Canada and in the United States to pay for the munitions, grain and other foodstuffs which she needs from this continent. She cannot pay for these imports, which have become so greatly increased over the normal, by her exports.

On This Side of the Ocean

The balance must be paid for in gold or from the proceeds of loans made on this side of the Atlantic. To ease the drain of gold and improve sterling exchange conditions, as well as to conserve cargo space in ocean merchantmen the importation of such commodities as Great Britain can supply herself, and of luxuries which are non-essentials, is to be banned."

Lines are Sound

The Minister said further, that the general lines of the policy laid down by the British Prime Minister were as sound for Canada today as for Great Britain. There is great need for increased production, especially of agricultural production. There is great need for the abolition of waste, and the rigid limitation of luxuries' expenditure. In connection with the question as to whether an embargo should be placed against the importation into Canada of luxuries, it is pointed out that many of these articles come from France and Italy, and are covered by treaties between Canada and these countries. For example, the convention between France and Canada, of 1908, provide for fixed rates of customs duties upon a range of articles of luxuries expenditure, includes table luxuries, wines, embroideries, velvets, ribbons and manufactures of silk

"The problem for Canada," said the Minister, "is to greatly increase production and cut down luxurious expenditures. The need for national saving is imperative. It is war expenditures that are increasing, and Great Britain must have money here for her purchases of foodstuffs and munitions in Canada. Every citizen should save his money and have it available for the Dominion's war loans. If this is done to the extent of Canada's ability, we shall be able to finance our own war expenditure in Canada and find for Great Britain every dollar she needs to expend here. Putting the matter another way, we can get orders from Great Britain for all the munitions and other supplies we can produce in Canada, providing we can lend Great Britain the money to pay the purchase price to the Canadian producers. This can be done only by national saving. It is a time for self-sacrifice and a time for self-denial.

BOOSTING PRICES WILL NOT BE TOLERATED.

LONDON, Feb. 25.—Baron Davenport issued the following today:

No buying or cornering of food supplies with the view to raising the existing level of prices will be permitted or tolerated. Should such attempts be made, the food controller will take immediate steps to protect the interests of consumers.

BURIED TREASURE IN VICTORIA COUNTY AND MANVERS TOWNSHIP

There are more potatoes in Victoria County than most people are aware of and when the weather becomes warmer they will not prove the scarce edible folks anticipated, says the Lindsay Warder.

A north country farmer stated that many farmers stored potatoes in pits last fall and cannot interfere with them until the advent of spring weather. The township of Manvers that bears a record for years of producing not only large quantities of tubers but the choicest quality, has been heard from. No less than 400 bushels, it is stated, are snugly stored away in one farmer's cellar, all in first-class condition. The above-mentioned party lives in the north-east part of the township and he expects to realize sufficient capital out of his store to purchase a nearby farm.

SELECT BOOKS AS CAREFULLY AS COMPANIONS

COLONEL D. WALKER ADDRESSES TRINITY SUNDAY SCHOOL.

OFFERING OF $40.

Yesterday was library day at Trinity Sunday School. Mr. R. J. Kidd and Dr. M. A. Morrison, formerly superintendent and assistant superintendent, were present. Mr. Kidd occupied the chair and in opening he pointed out the great value of education and the benefit of good books in this regard

Col. Walker delivered a splendid address on Books and Reading. He traced the gradual development of books, engraving on wood and stone to the present printing age. The benefit of books as companions, entertainment and teaching was dwelt on by the speaker. He also stated that they made us dwellers of the past, as companions of the great of other ages. Rules for the selection of books, emphasizing variety and care in choice were suggested. Books should be selected as carefully as companions or friends. As an educationalist Dr. Walker stated that the schools cannot teach reading, only the mechanicism of reading and he advocated that parents encourage their children to read aloud.

The test of proper reading, in the opinion of the speaker, is the ability to reproduce and retell the story, to be able to state the lesson the writer intended to convey

Dr. Morrison moved a hearty vote of thanks to Col. Walker, which was seconded by Mr. Hope.

Other items on the program were solos by Mrs. Turner and Miss Logan, and a selection by the school orchestra.

The offering amounted to $40, which will be devoted to the purchase of new books for the library.

ALSACE FRENCH ALWAYS

Her People, Speaking German, Yet Dreaded the Return of Kultur.

In the early days of the war, a great fear brooded over the mountains and valleys of the smiling land of Alsace that is once more France. The dread was that Alsace would become Elsass again. As months turned into years and blue devils of Alpine chasseurs still held the peaks against the Kaiser and the Krupp batteries, the agony of that fear grew less acute. The Alsatians plucked up courage, wiped the dust off their French vocabularies, took down their German signs, helped French officials administer local affairs—and tried to forget their forty years of vassalage. Not France alone, but the nine nations allied with her, solemnly assured these Alsatians who want to be French that before this war is ended they will have ceased forever to be a part of Germany. So now hope has changed to faith among this folk, whose speech after forty-six years is Germanic but whose hearts belong always to France. To them the reply to Wilson which Premier Briand handed to Ambassador Sharp was a covenant than which only one thing is of deeper moment—the roar of new artillery on the crests of the Vosges.

Writes a correspondent: "If it is difficult to know what is taking place in a military sense in the snowbound fastnesses of the Vosges it is still more difficult to discern clearly beneath the veneer of Teutonic speech what is going on in a psychological sense among the Alsatian people. I have seen almost every section of the French front and nowhere have I found modern warfare more impersonal and harder to grasp than in wintry Alsace. The same thing holds true for the opinion of the civilian population. They suffer more silently than any other folk directly oppressed by the war, these Alsatians, and their aspirations, except in the broadest sense, are unrevealed. I only know that their preference for France as against Germany remains unchanged.

NON-COMBATANT ABSENTEE

Won't Fight or Work, But Will Give 'Some Free Service'

Percy J. Morris, a private in the Non-Combatant Corps, of Lower Cross road, Hampstead, was charged at Marylebone with being an absentee. Morris, who had refused to rejoin his regiment, although he had received a railway warrant, said that while serving a sentence of 112 days' hard labor at Lewes he was taken before a central tribunal at Wormwood Scrubbs. It was decided that his conscientious objection to both combatant and non-combatant service was genuine, and he was released for work of national importance. After trying that for nine or ten weeks he could not see his way to continue it, and he had been ordered to rejoin his corps, which, he admitted, was quite legal, but morally indefensible, in view of the decision of the central tribunal.

He was willing, he said, to perform some free service to the community, but, apart from that, he believed there was a greater work to be done in preserving a balanced temper when the world was in danger of being ruled more [illegible] than by judgment.

Many a man's idea of comfortable clothing is the kind his wife won't let him wear.

"American" Attack Upon British Papers Was by a German

The 1917 German hate campaign included special series of attacks on Lord Northcliffe. The Cologne Gazette opened by featuring a special attack made by R. I. Orchelle (whose real name is Hermann Scheffauer) in the Continental Times, who describes Lord Northcliffe as "one of the greatest criminals of the human race" and as chiefly responsible for all the misery of the war owing to his "dark and shameful work." The Times, The Daily Mail, and other journals were described as "a terrible battle row of papers, whose efforts have throttled the sound common sense of the British people." Lord Northcliffe was asked if he does not hear "the threatening murmur of the coming storm which may annihilate you." The Cologne Gazette added: "We could wish that this damning verdict, passed by an 'American' upon Northcliffe, might be echoed by the entire neutral Press."

Convicts' Fine War Record

All except a very few convicts who were of military age voluntarily enlisted within a few days of their liberation, said the Commissioner of Metropolitan Police in an annual report. Many had risen to non-commissioned rank, one gained the Victoria Cross, and another was awarded the Medal of St. George by the Czar.

Accidental death was the verdict at the inquest on Ida Barry, thirteen, a girl guide, who died through breaking her larynx by falling over a form in All Saints' Schoolroom, Overbury street, Clapton, on the same day as her wounded brother died in hospital.

LONDON DROPS PROTEST NOTION AGAINST HAMS

HAMILTON, Feb. 26.—The London Hockey Club has dropped all thoughts of protest against Hamilton, on the grounds of professionalism. The London manager was reported as having collected information which incriminated one of the players on the Hamilton team, it being stated that he played pro. hockey in New Ontario.

The Hamilton Club has a clean slate and would have been able to clear away all suspicion had the London club taken the matter before the O.H.A.

All the members of the team are local boys, with the exception of Colr, who is a soldier in the Mounted Rifles. Bob Parker, president of the club, and Harold Parker, the Hams' sturdy defence player, are old Peterborough boys.

For the first semi-final game in Peterborough on Tuesday night, the locals will leave here in the morning at 11.30, arriving in the Lift Lock city at 5.35.

MERCANTILE CUP KEEPS MOVING

One week seems to be the limit that a winner can hold the Mercantile Curling Cup. On Saturday night Ross Dobbin tried to hold the trophy against C. C. Parsons, but was down one shot at the finish. It was a close game all though and a good one for a spectator to watch.

Vice-Skip E. G. Patterson will try for it next Saturday evening.

The rinks and score on Saturday night were:—

G. Copping	J. H. Parsons
L. A. Turner	G. Benor
T. F. Matthews	W. H. Taylor
R. L. Dobbin	C. C. Parsons
(Skip)—11	(Skip)—12

Tonight will see the finish of the scheduled inter-rink games, when the following will be decided:

Dela Fosse vs. Campbell.

Waddell vs. McDermid.

Dr. Wightman is the winner of Group 2, with R. G. Sturgeon second.

In Group 1 Ray Best is leading, but a win for McDermid tonight will give him a small lead.

SPORTS OF ALL SORTS

Aladdin and His Wonderful Lamp have been eclipsed. Listen to the birds:—

Oshawa Reformer: It is alleged that a conspiracy to put Walter Fair, Oshawa's star hockey player, out of the game at Peterborough, was hatched in a hotel in that town before the game Tuesday night. A traveller who happened to be there at the time, claims to have heard the "frameup" and that Flanagan was to do the dirty work. It was Flanagan who put Fair out of business. From the first bell Flanagan was after Fair until he got him, by slitting an artery in his foot, which required three stitches to close, in the first period, putting our best player out of the game for good this season, disorganizing the team, making it little use to enter a protest, as the team could not win without Fair. If this is the way games may be won, it is about time there was a change in the rules of the O.H.A.

Hamilton Herald: Just like every other O.H.A. team, the 247th Batt., Peterborough, has seven men. But, as is the case on almost every club, there is one chap who sticks out. With Peterborough, Armstrong, at centre, is the star. He can stand the bumps and still go on as if he had plain sailing. The Petes, it is said, depend considerably on individual play, and so far their single efforts have been successful. Halpin and Pat Flanagan on the defence, are known as the "Gold Dust Twins." They are a hard pair to beat. The opinion, based on the form shown by the locals in last night's game with London, is that Hamilton is the team to beat. The London boys believe that Kitchener will fall under the local attack, and advices from Peterborough are also encouraging to the local team. Kitchener, according to George Arthurs, rover of the London club, have a well perfected system of team play, but they are not fast skaters, and can't touch the Hams in this respect. He believes that the locals' checking will break up the team play.

This from the Port Hope Times:

There doesn't appear to be very hard times in Ontario. Between two and three thousand dollars changed ownership in Peterborough on Tuesday night, as a result of Peterborough's win over Oshawa in the third round of the O.H.A. intermediate series. Money seemed to flow freely from a never ending stream and while Oshawa had higher hopes by reason of a four goal margin, the sight of money was followed by some more money, and then some, and the Petes were game and backed up their heroes to the limit. The 247th Batt. team commenced to show the Oshawans how they play hockey in Peterborough and before the game was half gone, those who attended knew that the Petes had forgotten all the Oshawa seven had ever learnt. They dazzled the crowd with their speed and stamina. For sixty minutes they launched an incessant attack upon the Oshawa citadel and the glory goes to Peterborough, for they emerged from the fray with a 7 to 0 score in their favor. Every man's middle name is "Speed" that represents the Batt. and when the West meets the East for final honors we hope to see the silverware change to this part of Ontario.

Miss Young—I warn you against marrying that man dear. I'm sure he will lead a double life.

Miss Older—Well, if I don't marry him, I'll have to lead a single one myself, and that's worse.

Don't gouge other people while carving out your fortune.

THE UNBEATEN KING OF ALL HARNESS HORSES

Dan Patch Never Lost a Race--- Did Mile in 1.55 With Shield and Pace-Maker

Dan Patch's death was recorded in light harness history as the passing of the greatest horse ever produced in sulkydom. At the ripe old age of 20 years the son of Joe Patchen paced his last race at the International Stock Farm in Minneapolis. M. W. Savage did not mourn for his idol long, for on the following day he died in a Minneapolis hospital after a brief illness.

Always Beat Two Minutes

Certainly it will be a marvellous horse that will come anywhere near accomplishing the feats to the credit of this black stallion. A mile in one minute and fifty-five seconds—the fastest ever accomplished by a light harness horse—another in 1.55 1-4 and a half mile in 56 seconds are just a few of his most brilliant performances. The greatest praise that can be showered on Dan Patch, however, is that he was never beaten in a race and held the happy faculty of beating two minutes every time he turned around, and this in the face of every imaginable weather and track condition.

Fine, But Not A Record

It was in 1905 that the world's record of 1.55 1-4 for a paced mile was established. Dan was then nine years old. He was aided by a runner in front with a wind shield. Shortly afterwards the light harness authorities decided that they would not recognize marks that were set by the horse being aided by a runner in front so that when Dan Patch further electrified the horse world at St. Paul in 1906 by stepping in 1.55 it did not go down in the record books. Dan did not need the assistance. He always paced at his best.

Perhaps the day will come when they will pace faster. Directum I. went a mile in the open in 1.56¾. Horses have been exhibiting more speed year to year, but Directum I. has been beaten and there are days when he cannot better two minutes. It is this difference that made good Dan Patch's title of "King of the Harness Horses."

ORGANIZED PROSPERITY

Eulogy of Cromer Who Completed Work of Kitchener

In Evelyn Baring, Earl Cromer, Britain lost the maker of modern Egypt, the man who brought peace and material development to the oldest land, after centuries of oppression, of starvation and of outrage. Men called Kitchener organizer of victory. He earned the title at Omdurman, in South African, in the great war, but died before his last great work bore fruit. Cromer was more than that. He organized prosperity, and passed prosperity around. For twenty-four years he was absolute master in Egypt, and those years saw a people, ground down through countless ages, bankrupt, tax-ridden, half fed, wholly unschooled, become prosperous and content, generally regenerated, loyal, filled with a conscious pride of race.

He began his great work when Egypt was a bottomless pit into which Europe had poured countless millions. The British occupation was tentative, unrecognized, held to be only a financial expedient, a means for saving from the wreck some little for the creditors of the dissolute Ismail. He lived to see the land he served made part and parcel of the Empire, and glad to be such. The fellaheen had been the football of alien masters for forty centuries. He made men of them. He was an autocrat, but he was just; an Aryan, but he matched the Oriental at his own game because he did not lie. He was a reformer—none greater—but he knew the worth of patience, and he won.

Baffling.

Ezra Haskins, constable of an Eastern Ontario village, had an exalted opinion of his ability as a detective. He read everything he could find on the career of Sherlock Holmes, until he imagined that he had thereby acquired wonderful deductive abilities.

"Now, gentlemen," said he on one occasion to his assistants in a particular case, "we have traced these clues, the footprints of the horse and the footprints of the man, right up here to this stump. From the stump on there's only the footprints of the horse. Now, gentlemen, the question arises: What has become of the man?"

THE COUNTRY SCHOOL AS A COMMUNITY CENTRE

NATIONS are built in the public schools. The ideals set up by the school teacher remain very largely the ideals of the pupil throughout life, and his conception of patriotism will be what he has been taught during his school years. It is not too much to say that the present world war is due to a difference of ideals fostered by different systems of education.

Great as is the importance of the public school in old and well established countries, this importance is even greater in the new lands which are being called upon to assimilate populations from the more congested countries. It is worthy of note that in Western Canada, which may be cited as a case in point of a country which is called upon to assimilate a population of many races. Some of the most strenuous political and constitutional fights have hinged upon the systems of public education. These fights, however, were not without their purpose, and it is out of them has arisen a public school policy well calculated to meet the needs of a new and rapidly growing country. In such a country the public school has to take on functions not usually associated with it in the older and more densely settled communities. The prairie schoolhouse is not merely a centre of education; it is also the religious and social centre of the district. During the week days the school teacher furnishes education to the children of the neighborhood, but on Sunday the missionary holds his services, which all attend regardless of creed or nationality, and on week nights the building is used for meetings of farmers, for the various community societies; for the Red Cross or Patriotic Club, and for purely social events such as debates, concerts and dances. To facilitate the latter, it may be noted that many country schoolhouses use removable desks which the willing hands of the farmers' boys quickly dispose of whenever there is a dance in prospect.

Another phase of community work associated with the rural school which has been coming into prominence during the last few years is the supply of books to settlers in the district. This work is encouraged and assisted by the central Department of Education, which provides catalogues of books suitable for such purposes, the actual selection being left to the teacher. The number of books allotted to a school district is based on the report of the inspector of schools in the Province of Alberta, although this school library movement is only in its infancy, no less than 110,000 books were supplied for this purpose last year, [illegible] of some [illegible] the province look [illegible] the time when every school district will be a library centre, giving to the settlers the facilities now afforded to residents of cities and towns through their public libraries. The prosperity which has almost overwhelmed rural Alberta in the last two years, when farmers have been reaping enormous crops and selling them at the highest figures in history, promises to contribute still further to the importance of the rural school as a social centre. With every farmer driving his own automobile the opportunities for social gatherings are greatly increased, and the country school is the natural meeting place.

MOST PECULIAR PUT-OUT

"Shortstop to Left-fielder" Went Baseball, Said Arthur Irwin

"Didja ever hear of a batter being put out, shortstop to left fielder?" asked Arthur Irwin. "Well, such a play actually occurred in a game in Boston between the Braves and Dodgers. One of the Dodger batters hit to short left. Maranville ran out for it and the Boston left fielder came in. Just when it seemed that the ball would drop between them because neither was close enough to make the catch, Maranville dove at the ball and batted it directly toward the left fielder who made the catch. Naturally, Maranville was credited with an assist on the play."

The Benchwarmer's Confession

I sometimes sit and wonder, sometimes sit and think, I sometimes sit and ponder, I sometimes sit and blink, I sometimes sit and giggle, I sometimes sit and weep, I sometimes sit and wiggle, I sometimes sit and sleep, I sometimes sit and grumble, I sometimes sit and fret, I sometimes sit and rumble, but mostly I just sit.

WOMEN SURE TO GET FRANCHISE

MATTER WILL BE TAKEN UP IN LEGISLATURE TOMORROW.

TORONTO, Feb. 26.—From a reliable quarter it is learned that the Ontario Government has decided to grant the Legislative franchise to women, and that announcement will be made to this effect on Tuesday. At one period there was some doubt as to whether, even if such legislation were now enacted, the women could vote at a general election next year. This hesitation, however, does not now prevail, and the intention is said to be that the women will vote at the next general election

Government Speaks Tomorrow

The debate is down for Tuesday afternoon, when the bills standing in the names of J. W. Johnson (West Hastings) and William McDonald (South Bruce), to grant the legislative franchise to women come up. These bills have been on the order paper for over a week and discussion has been kept back obviously pending an announcement by the Government on the subject.

It is likely the Budget debate will be resumed on Wednesday. The motion by Mr. Thomas Marshall (Lincoln) protesting against the C.N.R plans for a line of railway from Toronto to Niagara Falls, through the city of Hamilton, or any portion of the said route, comes on this afternoon.

Much sympathy is felt for her parents, by whom she is survived, as well as three sisters and two brothers.

ACTIVITIES AT Y.M.C.A.

(By the Official Scribe.)

The death of Mr. J. W. Bennet is a great loss to the local Y. M. C. A., with which he was connected for thirty years. He held practically every office in the association from committeeman to president, of late years being the honorary president. Mr. Bennet was a thorough Christian man, a good financier, and an inspiration to his associates on the board of directors and the employed staff. One of the last acts of Mr. Bennet was to place a knitting machine in the building for the use of our lady helpers in making supplies for the soldiers. We will always cherish the memory of our dear departed associate.

The Mothers' Club will meet on Wednesday Afternoon at 2 o'clock for Red Cross work. Every member of this society is urged to be present.

Mr. A. Mowat gave a very helpful address to young men Sunday afternoon, also presenting some war poems.

Mr. Joseph Wearing will speak to the Senior Collegiate Club on Friday evening on "The Practice of Law as a Life Vocation."

Several Thousands of Turks Taken

FIGHTING ON THE TIGRIS IS FOLLOWED UP WITH SUCCESS

SINKING OF LACONIA IS ESTABLISHED AS OVER-ACT AGAINST THE STATES

But the Situation is Unchanged From Yesterday.

CONGRESS TO ACT

Thirteen Lives Lost When Liner Was Torpedoed

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

WASHINGTON, Feb. 27.—Official despatches confirming the reports of the deaths of Americans on the Laconia, torpedoed without warning, establish the case as the "overt act." The situation, however, was unchanged from where the President left it yesterday when he asked Congress for authority to deal with the submarine peril.

President Wilson and State Department officials took the position that no further steps would be taken until Congress has had an opportunity to act on the President's request.

The view prevailed that the sinking of the Laconia should have an action by Congress. The first step of the Government will be to furnish American ships with guns and gunners for defensive purposes and to insure them in the government war risk bureau.

LONDON, Feb. 27. — American Consul Frost of Queenstown telegraphs that Mrs. Foy and daughter, of Chicago, passengers on the Laconia, died of exposure, and were buried at sea.

The Central News says that eight American negroes, members of the crew, died of exposure.

A later telegram from Consul Frost gave the total of the Laconia's survivors landed as 281 out of 294 on board. Of thirteen lost, five were drowned and eight died from exposure.

CEDRIC SAFE IN ENGLISH PORT

TWO BRITISH VESSELS GO DOWN, BUT CREWS ARE SAVED.

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

NEW YORK, Feb. 27. — White Star Line agents report the Cedric, which sailed Feb. 12th, arrived at Liverpool last Thursday.

LONDON, Feb. 27.—The British steamer Aries, 3000 tons, has been sunk by a German submarine. The crew landed.

The sinking of the British steamer Seagull, 1400 tons, is also announced. The crew landed.

LIBERALS HAVE LEAD OF FIVE

RESULTS OF YESTERDAY SETTLE ELECTION IN NEW BRUNSIWCK.

ST. JOHN, N.B., Feb. 27. — By carying all four seats in Gloucester yesterday by tremendous majorities the Liberal Opposition comes into power in New Brunswick with a clear lead of five seats in the Legislature, exclusive of the Speaker. Out of 48 seats the Opposition has 27 in this election, leaving the Government 21, as compared with two for the Opposition and 46 for the Government in 1912. The Opposition has won ten of the seventeen ridings in the province, splitting in another, and has an immense majority of the popular vote.

No Hope Held Out

Hon. Martin Burrell, Federal Minister of Agriculture, did not give encouragement to a deputation that asked for the removal of the prohibition of oleomargarine.

THIRTY WAR VETERANS ARE READY TO FIGHT AGAIN

Join Ranks of Company of Returned Soldiers.

TORONTO, Feb. 27—Thirty war-stained veterans who have done "their bit" in France and Flanders and who had to return home in a more or less disabled condition, but are now convalescent, volunteered to again return to the fighting line. This was the outstanding feature of the Great War Veterans' rally at Oddfellows' Hall, College St., last night, when the campaign to be undertaken by returned soldiers to raise a company of 250 men for overseas as a draft from the 109th Batt. was organised.

"The Turning Point" will be repeated at The Grand on Monday, 5th March, for the benefit of the Returned Soldiers' Association.

The members of the Speakers' Patriotic League are urged to attend the meeting at the Armories tomorrow (Wednesday) night, when Major Campbell, recruiting officer for this district, will take up matters of vital interest to the local battalion and to the city.

The meeting of the city officials, business men, manufacturers and others interested in seeing the 247th Batt. up to full strength, which will be held in the recreation room of the Armories tomorrow night, promises to be successful. Mayor G. I. Campbell will place before the meeting several propositions which the military authorities would like carried through.

Recruiting in the Third Military District has not been up to the mark for the past month and Gen. Hemming is considering combining several of the smaller units in order to complete one battalion. There are several units around Peterborough that could easily be united with the 247th, or it might be worked the other way.

Lt.-Col. Ackerman has done his best to get recruits and it is the duty of the citizens to back him up at the conference with the Chief Recruiting Officer tomorrow night.

Lt. J. M. Shook, Lt. V. J. McElderry, Sergt. Cole, Ptes. Pilkey and McLeod have returned from the Infantry School of Instruction at Kingston.

GERMAN LINES ENTERED SOUTHEAST OF VAILLY

French Carried Out Raid and Returned to Their Lines With Prisoners.

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

PARIS, Feb. 27. — "Southeast of Vailly we entered German lines, and returned with prisoners," says today's official announcement. "There were patrol engagements in the region of Bezonvaux and in the Vosges. Elsewhere calm prevails."

SUCCESS ON TIGRIS

Scene of Engagement Transferred Further Up the River.

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

LONDON, Feb. 27.—Earl Curzon told the House of Lords today that the Turkish prisoners taken at Kut-el-Amara numbered several thousands. Further quantities of equipment also have been taken.

A telegram from Gen. Maude showed, Lord Curzon said, that the success was being followed up, and that the scene of the engagement had been transferred further up the Tigris.

WRITTEN DECISION

To be Given in Claim For Damages to Property.

A written decision will be given by Mr. Justice Audette in the case Hopwood vs. The King, following the evidence presented yesterday and the arguments by Mr. Hatton, counsel for the Crown, and by Capt. J. H. Burnham, M.P., who assisted Mr. W. J. Hopwood, the suppliant, in the presentation of his case.

Mr. Hatton moved for a non-suit on the following amongst other grounds:

The petition as filed and in its present form as amended does not show a cause of action.

That there are no facts alleged.

No specific claim made, no dates given showing at what time of the year or month during the year the said damage, if any, was done.

There was no evidence that the damage was done on the waters known as the Trent Valley Canal waters, a public work within the meaning of the R.S.C.

It was not alleged nor was there any evidence that the claim arose out of damages done to property on any public work resulting from the negligence of any officer or servant or the Crown while acting within the scope of his duties or employment, see Sec. 20, sub-sec "C" Exchequer Court Act.

There was no evidence that the suppliant was the owner of and had title to Block C, the property referred to in his petition of right at the time the alleged damages took place, namely, in 1912.

Capt. Burnham argued that the suppliant had complied with everything necessary to bring his claim under the statute. He said the water was part of the public work.

"Am I to understand that there is no redress for property damaged in this case?" he asked when Mr. Justice Audette stated the law. "If, of course, there is no way in which an injured party can come to court and get redress, then we are out of court."

Capt. Burnham told of his having taken the matter up with the Department of Justice and had been advised to take a test case before the Exchequer Court.

"If there is no way of getting at the Government, then we are logically shut out, but that, I argue, is not the meaning of the statute," he said.

Mother of Mr. V. Eastwood Dies

WAS IDENTIFIED WITH EARLY LIFE OF GILMOUR CHURCH.

Peterborough lost one of its oldest residents this morning when Mrs. David Eastwood died at the residence of her son, Mr. Vincent Eastwood, 610 George street. The late Margaret Paul Eastwood was 87 years old, and was the daughter of the late John Paul of Smith. Coming to Canada in 1831 the family took up residence in the township, where Mrs. Eastwood resided until her marriage. At the time of her husband's death she lived on Aylmer street, Peterborough. Afterwards she returned to the old homestead in Smith, later moving to this city.

The late Mrs. Eastwood was one of the first members of the Gilmour Memorial Church, but since coming to Peterborough had taken an active interest in the work of Murray Street Baptist Church.

She is survived by two sons, Mr. Vincent Eastwood, manager of the Royal Bank, and Mr. J. Paul East-

BRITISH MOVE FORWARD 2 MILES ON 11 MILE FRONT

NEW LIQUOR ACT BROUGHT DOWN

SASKATCHEWAN PROHIBITION SAME AS LAW IN ONTARIO.

REGINA, Feb. 27. — The act regulating the sale of liquor, which made its appearance in the Legislature yesterday, does not permit or limit in any way the importation of liquor into the province. It prohibits the sale of liquor by any one in the province except druggists or physicians, who must have a special permit from the government and render strict account of all liquors sold, and sell and keep only restricted quantities.

Drinking or consuming of liquor in any place other than a private dwelling place is strictly prohibited. No limit is put on the amount of liquor that can be kept or consumed in a dwelling place.

More Villages Fall Into Hands of the British.

LONDON, Feb. 27. — The British advance along the Ancre River has attained a depth of at least two miles and extends along a front of about 11 miles, according to the official report from the British headquarters in France last night. The text reads:

"The movements referred to in the communications Saturday and Sunday were maintained during the day on both banks of the Ancre. Our advance extends over a front of about eleven miles, from east of Gueudecourt to south of Gommecourt, and has attained a depth of two miles.

"In addition to the village of Serre reported yesterday, we now occupy the strong point known as Butte de Warlencourt and the villages of Warlencourt-Eaucourt, Pys and Miraumont. We have reached the outskirts of Le Barque, ~~Irles and~~ Puisieux-au-Mont."

Mayor Duffus proposes to have a third banquet, to which he will invite the workingmen of the city to meet in a social way and discuss matters along the line of action carried out at the business men's banquets.

65 HOME-BOUND RUSSIANS DIE

LONDON, Feb. 27. — A despatch from Copenhagen says 65 wounded Russians, released from German prisons and homeward bound, were killed in a railroad wreck in northern Sweden last night.

17 PASSENGERS ARE KILLED IN TRAIN WRECK

FREIGHT CRASHED INTO REAR OF STANDING EXPRESS.

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

ALTOONA, Pa., Feb. 27. — Seventeen passengers and a negro porter were killed in a rear-end collision between an express train and a freight on the Pennsylvania Railroad at Mt. Union Station, 43 miles east of here, early today. The express had stopped to discharge passengers, and was testing the airbrakes when the freight plowed into it, cutting the rear Pullman in two. Passengers were so badly mangled that only nine have been identified.

More Suggestions on How Best to Promote City's Interests Are Heard at Mayor's Banquet---More Industries, Trent Canal, Radial Railways, Back Yard Gardens, Fewer Dogs, Among Them.

ACTION WILL BRING SUCCESS

At the Mayor's banquet at Hooper's last night, for the younger business men of the city, the gathering expressed by resolution, moved by Mr. Basil Hall, seconded by Mr. Robert Fair, its approval of the action taken at the first banquet in the organization of the Peterborough Industrial Association, and pledged support to the movement and what it stands for. On resolution of Mr. Gordon Logie, seconded by Mr. Dickson Davidson, it was decded that a committee of five members be appointed to draw up a constitution for the association, the Mayor to be one member and to appoint two others, which His Worship did by calling upon Mr. R. H. Turner and Mr. R. Denne to sit on the committee. Two other members will be appointed later.

It was a great meeting in more than one respect, and the concensus of opinion was that Peterborough would surely go forward if the united action called for by the Mayor was taken. The speakers handled nearly every subject possible—some were serious, others humorous, there being just enough of the two proportions to keep the gathering interested and alive to the situation outlined by Mayor Duffus in the course of an address in which he discussed the advantages and possibilities of the city and advanced a word of warning and caution in the carrying out of the business of the city in years to come.

There were present: Mayor J. J. Duffus, W. R. Breyfogle, manager, De Laval Co., Ltd.; J. R. Corkery, of O'Connell and Corkery, R. Fair, Robert Fair & Co.; A. W. Cressman, Cressman Co., Ltd.; B. D. Hall, Hall & Hall; Ald G. H. Duncan; D. Davidson, Peterborough Lumber Co.; E. H. Howson, Peterborough Lock Co.; L. A. Potvin, Wm. Hamilton Co.; James Hamilton, Peter Hamilton Co.; W. A. Richardson, Peterborough Canoe Co.; A. L. Young, Hy. Hope & Sons, R. M. Glover, Examiner, R. Denne; R. H. Parsons, city engineer; A. Weddell, Hill & Weddell; F. D. Kerr, Peck, Kerr and McElderry; A. Hall, Adam Hall, Ltd.; Dr. G. S. Cameron; Fred Roy, Roy Studio; H. J. McCannan, McCannan and Co.; C. R. Banks, Banks Garage, H. O. Fisk, manager Utilities Commission; W. A. Haslam, Metropolitan Life Insurance Co.; F. Whitehouse, Nordheimer and Steinway Pianos; L. J. Picard, LeBrun Co.; H. H. Turner, Turner & Sons; Arthur Rogers; S. R. Armstrong, city clerk; Sam Taylor; Ald. Wm. Langford; Ald. F. H. Dobbin, R. L. Dobbin, superintendent waterworks department; Gordon Logie, manager Bank of Nova Scotia; G. O. Cameron, Bell Teelphone Co.

The Barge Canal

Mr. W. R. Breyfogle followed the Mayor and said he believed the mayor, council and Mr. Armstrong had laid a foundation for the citizens to stand on and make good and he believed the people would stand on that platform and make good. In dealing with the industrial life of the city, Mr. Breyfogle said it was highly necessary that we get the barge canal opened. It would have a beneficial influence on freight rates.

On the subject of radial railways, the speaker admitted he was somewhat of a crank. "I think, by all means, we ought to have radials between here and the lakeshore," he said, "and, there should be connection for freight as well as for passengers. You know the small towns feed as bugs around the lamp; the folks go where the bright lights are." He told of the great strides made by cities across the border, by the introduction and promotion of radials, and next spoke of the good to be derived from good roads and paid his compliments to the beautiful scenery up and down the river to and from Lakefield. Street railway betterments inside the city should be taken up and isolated parts of the city given the service. The De Laval was absolutely off in the corner and office help had given up positions because of the absence of a street car service. Speaking of sanitation, Mr. Breyfogle said Ald. Edgar's move for the elimination of closets was one of the sanest proposals put forward in the council's business last year and if carried out would mean a big improvement in the health of the city.

Miss Peterborough on View

"And if we are to attract industries we've got to dress up," emphasized the speaker. Miss Peterborough is on view. Representatives of industries want to see that there's something here worth while. "Don't let's look at it as a point of extravagance. We're on view even if we don't know it and we want to be ready for them when they come."

Tax Munition Workers

Mr. A. L. Henry, superintendent for the Henry Houe & Sons was introduced by the mayor as having moved the head office of the firm from Toronto to Peterborough, an announcement that took well with the crowd. Mr. Young told of the persuasive force that had brought the firm to Peterborough, and after explaining why the ordinary business had been largely given up and munition work carried on, said that the city should make munitions workers, forming part of the floating population, take their share of the taxes. He believed radials would be a grand thing for Peterborough. The biggest thing, however, was to attract industries, and he would always be glad to assist if only by telling other industries why his firm came to Peterborough.

Fire Protection

One of the trail blazers, in the person of Mr. Adam Hell, spoke strongly in favor of fire protection. "We have been very lax in our fire protection and have been for years," said he. Mr. Hall favored stations in the wards, using the argument that one big fire would cost the city more than three or four fire brigades. He recommended the best men for the work who should be paid all they are worth. "I am hopeful," said Mr. Hall, "that the time will soon come when we will have radial railways north, south, east and west."

PETERBOROUGH, TUESDAY, FEBRUARY 27, 1917

THE YOUNGER GENERATION.

THE MEMBERS of the younger generation were heard from at Mayor Duffus' second banquet last night. The keynote of all of the addresses was progress, and a vein of optimism ran through every sentence. There was criticism, good-natured and to the point, and there were suggestions without number. Everybody has faith in the future of the city and all are ready to unite in order to make that future a reality.

After the two banquets held in close succession, Mayor Duffus and his colleagues in Council will find themselves loaded down with advice. They are no longer in the dark as to what the people want, and are assured of public support if they endeavor to put these suggestions into effect. A better understanding has been established between aldermen and taxpayers, and if nothing else has been accomplished, the Mayor's banquets have been a success and cannot fail to work a lasting benefit to the city.

TAXING THE TRANSIENTS.

ONE OF THE MOST practical suggestions last night was offered by Manager Young of the Henry Hope Company. This city is filled with single men who are employed in the munitions factories earning higher wages than they were ever able to command before the war. Is it right that these men should be allowed to enjoy all the benefits to be found by residence in a modern city without the payment of a fair share of the civic expense?

Mr. Hope says he is ready to assist the city officials in collecting a tax from the strangers who, when the war is over, will seek other fields. There has been talk of applying to the Legislature for authority to increase the poll tax, now $5, to say double that figure, part of it to be devoted to the Patriotic Fund. If anything is to be done, no time is to be lost. At least vigilance should be exercised to see that no single man not otherwise assessed escapes the payment of the poll tax now authorized by law.

THE PRESS AND THE OFFICIALS.

THE LOCAL PRESS did not escape criticism. Mr. F. D. Kerr believes newspapers should not be too hard on the aldermen, who, as a rule, are giving the city the best that is in them.

It must be said on behalf of the press that the way of the Peterborough city officials is an easy one so far as the newspapers are concerned. The papers recognize the fact that the heads of the various departments are above the ordinary. There is no room for criticism, and little or none for improvement in this regard. In the case of the aldermen, the papers recognize the futility of making suggestions. To offer one means generally so much wasted effort. The city fathers have a habit of taking the bit in their teeth and pursuing their own way regardless of what papers or public may think.

City Engineer Parsons with good reason complained of the tendency of the ratepayers to rush into print—generally anonymously—and voice their grievances in this way, instead of making their complaints personally to the heads of departments. The anonymous writer in a newspaper, when he refers to any particular individual, should be discouraged. A man who has anything of a personal nature worth airing should be required to disclose his own identity.

No newspaper should attempt to arrogate to itself the honor of first taking up the cause of the back yard garden or the cultivation of vacant lots. The matter has been generally discussed with the return of spring any time these last twenty years or more. The Agriculture Department of Ontario is and always has been ready to send out a representative to instruct the people in this branch of industry as well as to improve parks, flower gardens, and offer hints in city planning generally.

THE FIRE DEPARTMENT.

MR. ADAM HALL was one of those who spoke on behalf of the fire department. The efficiency of that branch of the public service must be improved and the personnel of the brigade kept up to standard regardless of what such improvement may cost. Good men are entitled to receive all they are worth in the way of compensation. Mr. Hall believes that the city should have three fire stations instead of one.

The aldermen can guide themselves in this regard by what they have heard at the two civic banquets. In a few days Chief Howard will send in a request for more remuneration for himself and his men. There should be no aldermanic sparring with this matter or that of the new motor trucks when they come before Ald. Dobbin's committee.

HEALTH AND BEAUTY.

PETERBOROUGH will never abandon the status of a village and take on the appearance of an up-to-date city until the suggestions offered by Mr. W. J. Breyfogle with regard to outhouses are given effect. It was a handsome compliment that Mr. Breyfogle paid to ex-Ald. Edgar, who had done so much along this line, his proposition, Mr. Breyfogle said, being one of the most important that was brought up in Council last year. The removal of these buildings is not demanded by appearance alone. Public health requires this improvement, and the expense involved in making the change on the part of the property owners can be so arranged and spread over a period of years as scarcely to be felt. The city's expensive sewerage system will fail of its object so long as nuisances—and they are nothing else—are permitted in various sections of the city.

THE SALARY-SLASHER REBUKED.

THE SALARY SLASHER can find no place in the public favor, and one of the aldermen who has a weakness in this direction was given a pointer by more than one of the speakers last night. A surplus in the treasury may be all right in the abstract, but surpluses should not be piled up at the expense of the men who are required to give their time and talents to the city. Why boast of economy if it is practised only by pinching the families of civic employes? Last year's venture in this line was neither popular nor effective, and in the end the promoters of the plan found it necessary to back track.

PREMIER GEORGE'S MESSAGE.

THE SPEECH of Premier George on the war is one of the most dismal and depressing utterances from a British statesmen since the conflict began. The people have no alternative but to accept every word as true and to face the issue squarely. The submarine menace is more serious than ever. The loss of British merchantmen is having its effect. Imports into England are so endangered that it has been found necessary to place an embargo upon everything except what is absolutely required. The British people are realizing all the sufferings of a country at war. Canada can only imagine these horrors and dangers. So far, this country has escaped them.

The British mastery of the seas is being threatened as it never has been since the days of the Armada. But Britain will yet prove equal to the almost superhuman task that faces her. Is the Empire, with her allies, to be left to carry the burden alone, or will the United States yet come to her aid? Will the freight congested on the American docks arouse the people of that country to a sense of their own danger? If consideration of honor and humanitarianism have failed to move them, will the loss of the dollar they seem to worship have no effect?

"In the beauty of the lily Christ was born across the sea,
With a glory in His bosom that transfigures you and me;
As He died to make men holy, let us die
to make men free."

To that air the legions of the United States marched in two wars to break the bonds of the oppressed. How has a once great nation fallen from its high estate, resting while half the civilised world is in agony, not raising a hand to save even its own people from outrage and murder, calmly watching while Belgian women are ravished and the men carried into slavery more cruel than the Africans or the Cubans ever knew. The Battle Hymn of the Republic has become a hideous blasphemy that would blister the tongue of the hypocrite who would repeat the once inspiring words.

ALL IN THE NAME.

JOHN SMITH turns out to put in his statute labor with tolerable grace, comforting himself with the thought that Tom Jones, his neighbor, is called upon to render the same service to the State. He may not like to leave his business to serve as a juror, but comforts himself with the same reflection as in the other case. It is the same with the payment of his taxes or performing any other public duty which the law exacts from all. So long as no favoritism is shown, the people as a rule will quickly submit to any measure, even if they regard it as arbitrary.

Leave all of these duties to be performed under the voluntary system and trouble would be inevitable. One man would hang back waiting for another to make the first move, and the result would be general stagnation, just as in the case of recruiting.

Give the term conscription some gentler name or educate the people until they become accustomed to the term, and the possibility is that all opposition to the proposition will vanish. The man who pleads personal liberty has no more justification for his claim than he has if he sets out to establish it in conection with the attitude taken by the State on other questions having to do with the public welfare.

Distribute evenly the burden of national defence, and the chances are all in favor of the people accepting the gravest of all their responsibilities as citizens without a murmur. Compulsory service would simply be a new condition to which the public would become accustomed, just as they have accepted other situations that at first tended to incite them to rebellion.

NOTES AND COMMENT.

PRESIDENT WILSON will go down in history as the greatest phrase-maker of his age.

• • • •

PETERBOROUGH must grow, and it can annex all the neigboring towns by building radial railways.

• • • •

AFTER ALL, what difference is there between the inveterate salary slasher and the man with the black-jack?

• • • •

THE YOUNG MEN aim high, but they have a force within them sufficient to carry them safely up the civic incline.

• • • •

MR. BASIL HALL captured the chief honor as the brightest after-dinner speaker of them all, and this is no reflection on the others, either.

• • • •

MESSRS. R. Fair and Adam Hall may lack youth as years go, but no man is old so long as he keeps his eyes watching for the rising sun.

• • • •

MR. H. O. FISK proved by a demonstration that electric wires are not necessarily destructive to shade trees. All depends on the trimming of the latter.

• • • •

WHEN A MAN is thrown out of a provincial government for grafting, the proper place to put him is not the Dominion Parliament, but the penitentiary.

• • • •

ASHBURNHAM was properly paraded as the choicest residential section of the city, and all that is necessary to bring it into its own is that high level bridge.

• • • •

READ CAREFULLY the article in another column showing what Premier Borden has done for Canada, and preserve the statement for future reference. The facts and figures are indisputable.

• • • •

MESSRS. C. R. Banks and F. L. Roy or any of the other young speakers seem to have all the equipment required for high grade aldermen in the not very distant future.

WHAT PREMIER BORDEN HAS DONE DURING THIRTY MONTHS OF WAR

With that spirit of national depreciation which is getting to be characteristic of Opposition journalism, the Toronto Star concludes an editorial disparagement of Canada's war effort by asking: "What has Sir Robert Borden done?"

Party politics have reached a low level in Canada when a decent newspaper is unashamed to ask such a stupid, un-Canadian question. Nevertheless, we are going to try to forget the spirit that prompted it and to answer to the best of our knowledge and ability. Here are a few things that Canada has achieved under Sir Robert Borden:

Voted $900,000,000 for war purposes.

Established a munitions industry that employs 350,000 persons, engages 650 factories, has sent $500,000,000 worth of munitions to Britain and has contracted for $700,000,000 more.

Loaned to the British Government $250,000,000 to finance munition purchases.

Supplied Australia, New Zealand and Allied Governments with war orders totalling more than $150,000,000.

Successfully raised three loans, and is preparing to raise a fourth, in Canada thus relieving the financial strain upon the Motherland, and, in addition, placing $75,000,000 of the money so obtained at Britain's disposal.

Transformed herself from a country that was borrowing abroad before the war at the rate of $1,000,000 a day, to a country that is financing her own war expenditure to the extent of $1,000,000 a day, and extending enormous credits to Britain besides.

Increased a total trade of $1,000,000,000 in 1914, to a total trade of $2,000,000,000 in 1917.

Changed a balance of trade against us in 1914, of $140,000,000 to a balance of trade in our favor in 1917 of nearly $400,000,000.

Adopted war taxation measures which, in addition to defraying the running expenses of the country, contribute a considerable sum toward the expenditure on war.

Created a War Purchasing Commission which has taken the purchase of all army supplies out of politics, and has bought, by tender, supplies to the value of $100,000,000.

Created an independent national Pensions Commission, and adopted a scale of pensions more generous than that fixed by any of the other belligerent countries.

Created a Military Hospitals Commission which is doing splendid work looking after returned convalescent soldiers and which is now being copied by Australia.

Created a Scientific and Research Council, composed of the country's leading scientists and engineers, to study new processes for developing Canadian resources and industry.

Took effective steps to prevent Canadian nickel reaching the enemy and at the same time seeing that a plentiful supply reached Great Britain and her Allies. Meanwhile, has begun the erection of a refining plant that will refine Canadian ores on Canadian soil.

Secured adequate transportation for Canadian exports at a time when marine tonnage was at a premium.

Obtained a preference for Canada in the matter of British and Allied purchases.

Rendered effective aid to Western farmers at a critical period, thus ensuring an expansion of production at a time when increased production was an essential in the conduct of the war.

Is entering upon a most generous scheme of land settlement and vocational training for returned soldiers at the conclusion of the war.

These are a few of the things, but far from all, that Canada has done under Sir Robert Borden during thirty months of the most tremendous conflict in human history. They are achievements that have won, and deserved, the applause of Britain and her friends, and, what is more satisfying, have provoked the angry astonishment of the Empire's foes. Only by men here in Canada whose mad partisanship overwhelms their national pride are they slurred over or ignored.

RECRUITS WANTED FOR THE ROYAL FLYING CORPS OF CANADA

The news from the different seats of war from the correspondents has often lately contained reference to the "dickey birds" which is the pet name given by the boys on the different fronts to the members of the Royal Flying Corps. It now seems likely to become equally well-known as the pet name of the Royal Flying Corps of Canada.

This is the new Canadian unit for the organization of which officers and non-coms. of the Imperial Corps are now in Canada, not only to have the equipment built here, but also to enlist the necessary members and carry on the instruction and training at different places in the Dominion.

Through the splendid response of those that recognize their responsibility to the call of the National Service Board for this service, the Flying Corps should be raised in a very short time.

From the National Service cards of men living in the Province of Ontario over 12,000 likely names have been obtained and particulars as to the R.F.C. are being sent to them in order to give them the opportunity to join. For the present the call will be confined to the Eastern provinces.

The following mechanics and others are required: Motor drivers, painters, electricians, tinsmiths, engine fitters, cabinet makers, motor cycle fitters, vulcanisers, acetylene welders, motor fitters, blacksmiths, millwrights, carpenters, sailmakers (tailors), coppersmiths, milling machinists, motor cyclists, metal turners, besides male clerks, engineers, storemen, cooks, laborers and officers servants.

The flying service is different from all others on account of the large number of non-commissioned officers attached to same. Although a man enlists for ground work only, there is nothing to prevent him taking part in aerial work if he so desires afterwards, and is found capable. This means promotion and increased pay. The advantage of joining this corps are many. Men who have tried to enlist in the infantry and who have been turned down on account of flat feet or not being able to stand marching or for the usual physical disabilities, or who perhaps could not join up on account of home ties, have here a splendid opportunity to take part in the national defence. The work is most interesting, and will not be carried on in the machine shops in the cities, but at the different squadron headquarters and airdromes. In fact, for a man whose health is not strong, but who in the past has been able to do his work in a city shop, it will be the best experience he can get from the health building point of view, and there is no heavy marching and heavy equipment as in the other branches of the service.

The duties of the men of this corps will be to rebuild and repair, and keep the machines that will be made in Canada, in first-class order for the flying pilotos, and it will give everyone in it an insight and a course of instruction in what is going to be the world's future method of transportation to a great extent. By the time the war is over the members of the Royal Flying Corps Service in every branch will be in such demand that their opportunities for future advancement will be similar to that of those of electrican men at the beginning of the development of that industry, at high wages and high positions. The rate of pay is also very fair and includes free lodging, clothing, food and a separation allowance (if married). In fact, to a man who rises to the rank of sergent (and there are far more in the Flying Corps than in other units) it equals an income of about $25 per week, or $1,300 per year, the pay being $14 per week and a separation allowance of $5 per week, and the enlisted men should save $6 per week at least, on food and clothing.

The lowest rate of pay is for those who have enlisted as third-class air mechanics, or unskilled men. They draw $1.10 per day, besides the other allowances, but the majority of the men, that is, those who pass their trade test, will be enlisted as second-class air mechanics at $1.35 per day, with a prospect of rapid promotion to warrant officers at $2 per day. Only 3,000 are needed for this corps, and for a young man, or even a middle-aged man, who cannot serve in any other capacity, it is a grand opportunity to take part in the defence of his country, and at the same time learn an occupation that he can continue as his future livelihood at a very good rate of remuneration.

Those enlisting are intended for ground duties only and are not required to fly. Their sole duties are as already stated. Overseas our Canadian pilots have done wonders through their sterling ability and wonderful nerve, and the Royal Flying Service has now recognized that Canada deserves the honor of having squadrons of its own. The National Service Board desires those who wish to join the corps to apply at once to the chief recruiting officer of the district they reside in. Those who do not reside near such an office can secure full particulars by addressing inquiries to the National Service Board at Ottawa.

Editor Review: Isn't there an echo of Rip Van Winkle about the communication of Anti-Suffragist in last night's edition of The Review? He has certainly been sleeping for a generation, or he wouldn't ask "What class of women are agitating for the vote? It is not the home-lover or the one with maternal instincts, etc."

It is just such women who do want the vote, because of the power it will give them in securing much-needed social and moral reforms.

At a guess, I say that Anti-Suffragist probably has a wife who is the better business man of the two, and might prove the better politician if she were given a chance. Is that what is puzzling him? But why not be a man and say, "She deserves a vote. God bless her, so let the rest of them have it, too." Then again, he may have made a wonderful success of himself without any woman's help in which case his head is surely turned, and his judgment unbalanced, so we'll let him go at that.

SUFFRAGIST.

DANGER, KEEP OUT!

With the approach of spring weather near at hand, may I through your columns draw the attention of the public generally and our young friends of a roving disposition in particular, to the dangers attendant on rambling among the ruins of the Quaker Oats Co.'s buildings.

The company has been very considerate in demolishing many dangerous walls, but the thawing out of enclosed ice may cause disintegration and render walls unsafe that were quite reasonably safe when cemented up in this way.

PROTESTANT FEDERATION

Editor Review: Permit us through your valuable daily to endeavor to correct the views of some of our valued fellow-citizens with regard to the "Protestant Benevolent Federation of Canada," to which we have the honor to belong. We are united to promote those interests that we believe are for the benefit of Protestants in general. In this we only claim the same privilege as others having at heart different views, with whom we have no quarrel and towards whom we have the most kindly feeling.

We aren ot affiliated with, influenced by, nor connected with any other body, club, society or organization in the universe; we are non-partisan in politics; we find fault with no man's creed, we antagonize none. We attach our application form, which you are at perfect libety to publish; in fact for harmony's sake we beg your indulgence, if you think the eight objects would be of interest to some of your readers.

H. JOHNSTON,
President.
R. B. McGILL,
Secretary.

The application form referred to in the above letter sets forth the objects of the Federation as follows:

1—The uniting together of all Protestants for mutual protection.

2—The maintenance of all principles relating to Protestantism.

3—To support candidates for municipal, provincial and Dominion honors who will pledge themselves to support Protestant measures which may be brought before them for Legislative adjustment.

4—Support of the National Public School system.

5—To place in public offices as many Protestants as the pro rata of population entitles us to.

6—To allow of no infringement of the constitutional rights of the voter.

7—To see that the Public School supporters' taxes are paid to the Public School Board.

8 To maintain equal rights to all and special privileges to none, even ourselves.

SEVENTEEN YEARS AGO

From The Review of Feb. 27, 1900:

Gen. Cronje with 3,000 men surrendered unconditionally at Paardeberg. Sir Alfred Milner cabled congratulations on the gallantry of Canadian troops in South Africa.

The Board of Trade asked Council to grant the C.G.E. further concessions as an inducement to extend the works in this city.

Cronje's surrender, on the anniversary of Majuba Day, was celebrated in the public schools.

Peterborough Colts defeated Stratford at hockey by 6 goals to 3.

Many a young man falls in love with a girl who doesn't exist, soon finding that it is a case of mistaken identity.

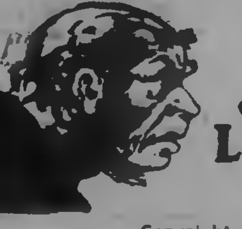
BEFORE ADAM



By JACK LONDON

Copyright, 1907, by the MacMillan company.

Not until I was safe from them did I turn my attention to that live agony on my thigh. And then, a dozen feet above the snapping pack that leaped and scrambled against the wall and fell back, I got the dog by the throat and slowly throttled him. I was a long time doing it. He clawed and ripped my hair and hide with his hind paws, and ever he jerked and lunged with his weight to drag me from the wall.

At last his teeth opened and released my torn flesh. I carried his body up the cliff with me and perched out the night in the entrance of my old cave, wherein were Lop Ear and my sister. But first I had to endure a storm of abuse from the aroused horde for being the cause of the disturbance. I had my revenge. From time to time, as the noise of the pack below eased down, I dropped a rock and started it up again. Whereupon from all around the abuse of the exasperated folk began afresh. In the morning I shared the dog with Lop Ear and his wife, and for several days the three of us were neither vegetarians nor fruitarians.

Lop Ear's marriage was not a happy one, and the consolation about it is that it did not last very long. Neither he nor I was happy during that period. I was lonely. I suffered the inconvenience of being cast out of my safe little cave, and somehow I did not make it up with any other of the young males. I suppose my long continued chumming with Lop Ear had become a habit.

I might have married, it is true, and most likely I should have married had it not been for the dearth of females in the horde. This dearth, it is fair to assume, was caused by the exorbitance of Red Eye, and it illustrates the menace he was to the existence of the horde. Then there was the Swift One, whom I had not forgotten.

At any rate, during the period of Lop Ear's marriage I knocked about from pillar to post, in danger every night that I slept and never comfortable. One of the folk died, and his widow was taken into the cave of another one of the folk. I took possession of the abandoned cave, but it was wide mouthed, and after Red Eye nearly trapped me in it one day I returned to sleeping in the passage of the double cave. During the summer, however, I used to stay away from the caves for weeks, sleeping in a tree shelter I made near the mouth of the slough.

I have said that Lop Ear was not happy. My sister was the daughter of the Chatterer, and she made Lop Ear's life miserable for him. In no other cave was there so much squabbling and bickering. If Red Eye was a Bluebeard, Lop Ear was henpecked, and I imagine that Red Eye was too shrewd ever to covet Lop Ear's wife.

Fortunately for Lop Ear, she died. An unusual thing happened that summer. Late, almost at the end of it, a second crop of the stringy rooted carrots sprang up. These unexpected second crop roots were young and juicy and tender, and for some time the carrot patch was the favorite feeding place of the horde. One morning early several score of us were there making our breakfast. On one side of me was the Hairless One. Beyond him were his father and son, old Marrow Bone and Long Lip. On the other side of me were my sister and Lop Ear, she being next to me.

There was no warning. On the sudden both the Hairless One and my sister sprang and screamed. At the same instant I heard the thud of the arrows that transfixed them. The next instant they were down on the ground, floundering and gasping, and the rest of us were stampeding for the trees. An arrow drove past me and entered the ground, its feathered shaft vibrating and oscillating from the impact of its arrested flight. I remember clearly how I swerved as I ran to go past it and that I gave it a needlessly wide berth. I must have shied at it as a horse shies at an object it fears.

Lop Ear took a smashing fall as he ran beside me. An arrow had driven through the calf of his leg and tripped him. He tried to run, but was tripped and thrown by it a second time. He sat up, crouching, trembling with fear and called to me pleadingly. I dashed back. He showed me the arrow. I caught hold of it to pull it out, but the consequent hurt made him seize my hand and stop me. A flying arrow passed between us. Another struck a rock, splintered and fell to the ground. This was too much. I pulled suddenly with all my might. Lop Ear screamed as the arrow came out and struck at me angrily. But the next moment we were in full flight again.

I looked back. Old Marrow Bone, deserted and far behind, was tottering silently along in his handicapped race with death. Sometimes he almost fell, and once he did fall; but no more arrows were coming. He scrambled weakly to his feet. Age burdened him heavily, but he did not want to die. The three fire men, who were now running forward from their forest ambush, could easily have got him, but they did not try. Perhaps he was too old and tough. But they did want the Hairless One and my sister, for as I looked back from the trees I could see the fire men beating in their heads with rocks. One of the fire men was the wizened old hunter who limped.

CHAPTER XII.

We went on through the trees toward the caves, an excited and disorderly mob, that drove before it to their holes all the small life of the forest and that set the bluejays screaming impudently. Now that there was no immediate danger, Long Lip waited for his grandfather, Marrow Bone, and with the gap of a generation between them the old fellow and the youth brought up our rear.

And so it was that Lop Ear became a bachelor once more. That night I slept with him in the old cave, and our old life of chumming began again. The loss of his mate seemed to cause him no grief. At least he showed no signs of it nor of need for her. It was the wound in his leg that seemed to bother him, and it was all of a week before he got back again to his old spryness.

Marrow Bone was the only old member in the horde. Sometimes on looking back upon him, when the vision of him is most clear, I note a striking resemblance between him and the father of my father's gardener. The gardener's father was very old, very wrinkled and withered, and for all the world when he peered through his tiny bleary eyes and mumbled with his toothless gums he looked and acted like old Marrow Bone. This resemblance, as a child, used to frighten me. I always ran when I saw the old man tottering along on his two canes. Old Morrow Bone even had a bit of sparse and straggly white beard that seemed identical with the whiskers of the old man.

As I have said, Marrow Bone was the only old member of the horde. He was an exception. The folk never lived to old age. Middle age was fairly rare. Death by violence was the common way of death. They died as my father had died, as Broken Tooth had died, as my sister and the Hairless One had just died—abruptly and brutally, in the full possession of their faculties, in the full swing and rush of life. Natural death? To die violently was the natural way of dying in those days.

No one died of old age among the folk. I never knew of a case. Even Marrow Bone did not die that way, and he was the only one in my generation who had the chance. A bad crippling, any serious accidental or temporary impairment of the faculties, meant swift death. As a rule these deaths were not witnessed. Members of the horde simply dropped out of sight. They left the caves in the morning, and they never came back. They disappeared—into the ravenous maws of the hunting creatures.

This inroad of the Fire People on the carrot patch was the beginning of the end, though we did not know it. The hunters of the Fire People began to appear more frequently as the time went by. They came in twos and threes, creeping silently through the forest, with their flying arrows able to annihilate distance and bring down prey from the top of the loftiest tree without themselves climbing into it. The bow and arrow was like an enormous extension of their leaping and striking muscles, so that, virtually, they could leap and kill at a hundred feet and more. This made them far more terrible than Saber Tooth himself.

And then, too, they were very wise. They had speech that enabled them more effectively to reason, and in addition they understood co-operation.

We folk came to be very circumspect when we were in the forest. We were more alert and vigilant and timid. No longer were the trees a protection to be relied upon. No longer could we perch on a branch and laugh down at our carnivorous enemies on the ground. The Fire People were carnivorous, with claws and fangs a hundred feet long, the most terrible of all the hunting animals that ranged the primeval world.

Happenings in Omemee

(Special Correspondence.)

OMEMEE, Feb. 27.—Mrs. Blakely and children who have been visiting Mrs. A. Stinson, leave this week for their home in Alberta.

Mr and Mrs. F. Nugent of Lindsay spent the week end with the former's parents, Mr. and Mrs. H. Nugent.

The home of Mr and Mrs. Clarence Fatt, Dovercourt Road, Toronto, was the scene of a quiet wedding when Margaret Elizabeth, youngest daughter of Mr Charles McCaffrey, Omemee, was united in marriage to Mr. Harry Shearer of Buckhorn. The house was beautifully decorated for the occasion, the color scheme being carried out in pink and white. The ceremony was performed by Rev. R. McCullough. The bride, who was unattended, wore a gown of white crepe de chine and tulle with veil and orange blossoms, and carried a shower bouquet of orchids and lilies of the valley. Later Mr. and Mrs. Shearer left amid showers of confetti and good wishes for a honeymoon in New York City, after which they will reside in Buckhorn. Miss McCaffrey was one of Omemee's popular young ladies and her host of friends here join in wishing her every happiness.

Miss I. Cottingham of Peterboro Business College spent the week-end with her mother.

Mrs. J. Coulter of Toronto is the guest of Mrs. E. MacPherson.

Married—In Port Hope on Feb. 12, Miss Effie Adams to Mr. Joseph Irwin of MacGregor, Man. The bride is a sister of Mr. J. E. Adams, Lindsay, and a former Omemee girl, while the groom is a popular and prosperous business man of MacGregor.

Mr. R. Wilde spent the week end in Toronto.

The hockey match between the Ladies and Gentlemen, which was held last Thursday, was a decided success, the score being 5-3 in favor of the ladies. The costumes of the boys breathed of spring, an array of advance spring styles being displayed by the various mannequins. A few hints for those who were not present ; to fads and fancies for the spring of 1917 might prove of benefit to the ladies.

Brilliant hues in separate skirts were displayed, cerise predominating.

Striped hose are to be greatly worn.

Goal, Marjorie Adams, defence, Anny Clement and Amy Parsons, rover, Edith Fair, centre, Miss Morden, left wing, Mrs. E. MacPherson; right wing, Miss Donaldson.

Dr. Baker preached at the Methodist Church on Sunday in the interests of Belleville College.

Mrs. James returned from Toronto last week, where she has been visiting her daughter.

Mrs. A. Peters is visiting her sister in Toronto.

The poles for the hydro electric will be delivered in Omemee this week.

Pte. A. Peters is spending the week-end with friends in Colborne.

Look and Feel Clean, Sweet and Fresh Every Day

Life is not merely to live, but to live well, eat well, digest well, work well, sleep well, look well. What a glorious condition to attain, and yet how very easy it is if one will only adopt the morning inside bath.

Folks who are accustomed to feel dull and heavy when they arise, splitting headache, stuffy from a cold, foul tongue, nasty breath, acid stomach, can, instead, feel as fresh as a daisy by opening the sluices of the system each morning and flushing out the whole of the internal poisonous stagnant matter.

Everyone, whether ailing, sick or well, should, each morning, before breakfast, drink a glass of real hot water with a teaspoonful of limestone phosphate in it to wash from the stomach, liver kidneys and bowels the previous day's indigestible waste, sour bile and poisonous toxins; thus cleansing, sweetening and purifying the entire alimentary canal before putting more food into the stomach. The action of hot water and limestone phosphate on an empty stomach is wonderfully invigorating. It cleans out all the sour fermentations, gases, waste and acidity and gives one a splendid appetite for breakfast. While you are enjoying your breakfast, the water and phosphate is quietly extracting a large volume of water from the blood and getting ready for a thorough flushing of all the inside organs.

The millions of people who are bothered with constipation, bilious spells, stomach trouble, rheumatism; others who have sallow skins, blood disorders and sickly complexions are urged to get a quarter pound of limestone phosphate from the drug store, which will cost very little, but is sufficient to make anyone a pronounced crank on the subject of internal sanitation.

THEATRICAL

Mr. Fiske O'Hara and his splendid company delighted a capacity house at the Grand last evening. His presentation was His Heart's Desire, one of those romantic comedies of Irish setting, in which Mr. O'Hara takes the part of Sir Larry O'Neil. The special songs, "How the Fairies Came to Ireland," "Mollie Mine," "His Heart's Desire," and "You'll have to Kiss the Blarney Stone," delivered in that firm tenor voice were a source of much pleasure to the audience and the singer was not a bit stingy with his encores.

Between acts the members of the supplemented orchestra played some favorite Irish selections which were much appreciated.

The company left this morning for Belleville.

Establishing Credit

"I am always afraid of the man who shows too much haste in paying back the dollar he borrows from me."

"Why?"

"Several of those fellows have come in the next day and touched me for ten."

PETERBOROUGH ON VIEW AND MUST DRESS UP

Mr. Robert Fair believed the meetings called by the Mayor would be productive of a very great deal of good. He endorsed the mayor's words in that work should have been done years ago and there would not be so much to do today. Radials, the speaker endorsed as a means to benefit Peterborough and the merchants as visitoors to the lakes would be able to reach the city. People in the north and were crying for railways and because of their absence much trade is lost to Peterborough.

Tree Pruning

By way of a change Mr. H. O. Fisk spoke briefly on tree pruning, giving some thoughts gleaned from a meeting he attended at Toronto and at which Dr. Fernow who spoke asked the question: "Is there room on our city streets for both trees and wires? and answered it by saying that it was quite possible provided the question was taken up jointly. Tree pruning was good except in the sap season. Mr. Fisk suggested a survey of Elm St., Toronto, where pruning was carried out. He believed the work should be carried out but not by loading it on the city engineer.

Some Reasons

Mr. F. D. Kerr saw visions. After commending the policy of the mayor, he emphasized the necessity for prudent thrift by the citizens in the days at hand and the days to come. Peterborough had the advantages and it was for the citizens to make them good. Mr. Kerr spoke for a continuation of local improvements, he pictured a city hall on Murray St., the market square asphalted, the "club house" of the market clerk painted and improved, and Little Lake bordered by a park. He said the newspapers could help and the citizens could help the newspapers. Mr Kerr also put in a word for the Peterborough Fair and the acquiring of permanent grounds.

Action Needed

"The good we can derive from a gathering of this kind is to get some of the suggestions not only in our minds but in our actions," said Mr. A. W. Cressman. If we acted on one-half the suggestions Peterborough would be a much better city. If we don't stop at the pondering our meeting will not have been in vain.

The Board of Trade

There is always a laugh when somebody mentions the Board of Trade, but last night it was roars. Mr. Basil Hall, president of the late Board of Trade, drew the attention of the gathering to the words on the wall: Throw away your hammer and get a horn; be a booster in your home town; and said that the Board four years ago had advocated the same thing, the gathering at that time being of about 20 members. "But we didn't know we had such a dead one," said Mr. Hall. "We found out afterwards it was absolutely dead." The speaker told of the slow burial--25 members, 15, 4, and finally 2. Then it revived again and won another obituary notice.

Mr. Hall regretted that in those days they had overlooked the eating part. They didn't know enough to start off with a bun feed. One good thing, accomplished, however, was to get out some advertising matter which they didn't pay for, and now, said the speaker, "We don't care if we never pay for it, we'll pass it on to this organization. "We have inquiries every day from the British Isles and France asking for information about the city, and I have sent some of our own advertising matter, which we haven't paid for, and some of Adjt. McElhiney's books," added Mr. Hall.

Mr. R. H. Turner felt a mistake had been made in taking some of the magnetite arc lamps from George St. for distribution elsewhere which meant pulling the skirts off the main street. Futhermore, citizens had been bent on grinding their own axes instead of taking hold of the municipal axe and keeping it sharp. Mr. Turner also favored the elimination of picture post cards, which did not show up the city in its best garb. He also favored radial railways.

Back Yard Gardens

Mr. F. L. Roy spoke in favor of back yard gardens. There was no reason why the scheme should not be a success here, and Victoria Heights was mentioned as one possible experimental point. Mr. Roy urged strongly that the fire protection be made more adequate by motorizing the department and providing sub-stations.

"As an insurance man who had brought this district to the top of the ladder," Mr. W. A. Haslam was introduced by the mayor. Mr. Haslam told of what the Board of Trade in Windsor had accomplished, and then went to the dogs. "The dog menace on our main street is a disgrace to humanity," said the speaker. "Yelping, howling, screeching dogs—I never saw anything like it in my life."

Mr. Frank Whitehouse suggested that business houses used advertising matter appertaining to the city, on the envelopes of the mail matter.

Mr R. Denne told some Fair history and suggested the appointment of a parks commissioner.

Get Off and Push

"It's up to us to get off the wagon and push," said Mr. G. O. Cameron, member of the late Board of Trade, the late Ad. Club, and the late Canadian Club. He urged that the young organize, the organization to have different branches. The Retail Men, for instance, should do more than yell about the high taxes.

Mr. James Hamilton, also with Board of Trade experience, was ready to lend a hand to help promote the welfare of the city.

"Some of the young men here will be entrusted with the future of the city, and it is a sane thing to show them what their responsibilities are for the future," said Mr. J. R. Corkery, in congratulating the mayor on his policy.

Mr. C. R. Banks, one of the 49-years-old men had tired of attending meetings where pledges had been made without result. "Now we'll have to do something if we have to bring in Billy Sunday." The speaker advocated a bridge across the river from the foot of Charlotte Street. "What do we care for taxes," said he; "we've got the money to pay them. It is worth more to live in Peterborough than Omemee. And why not get Mr. Ryerson Ritchie, an expert in his line, to organize a Chamber of Commerce here? If you don't wake up somebody is going to move," said the genial Charles with true importance. "And I'm going to run for alderman next year in the west ward.

"Let's get rid of the dog nuisance," also urged Mr. Banks, who slipped in a word of sympathy for the alderman who, egged on by the speaker, had taken up the cudgels against the dogs and had gone down to defeat. "It's a darn shame."

Letter Writers

Mr. R. H. Parsons discussed the tax rate and found much in favor of Peterborough. He regretted the practice of people writing complaints to the press and in this connection invited complainants to acquaint the department with their grievances and he would be only too glad to take them up.

Mr. Gordon Logie found much of the ammunition had been used so he contented himself with endorsing all that had been said.

Mr. S. R. Armstrong quoted figures on the debenture debt and gave the city's financial standing, which must have left a good impression with the gathering.

Use Peterborough Brains

Dr. Cameron covered the ground generally and suggested that the brains of Peterborough be put to use. Men of the calibre of Mr. Mathews and Mr. Ackerman had offered their services and their offer should be accepted.

Mr. R. L. Dobbin couldn't figure out why the city should equip itself with one of the best waterworks departments in the country and fall down when it came to the fire department.

Ald. Dobbin discussed town planing and threw out some good suggestions along that line.

Mr. R. M. Glover advocated back yard gardens, giving his own experience where on a plot of 40 feet square he raised produce valued at $40 as an argument that it was good business. Mr. Glover urged greater interest in the Peterborough Fair and the advertising of Peterborough.

Mr. L. A. Potvin urged improvement in the mail service to and from Montreal. His firm had found it took three days for letters to reach Montreal and on one occasion one letter from Montreal to the city had a trip of four days.

Ald. Langford assured the gathering they would have the full co-operation of the Council.

Smoke Consumers

Ald Duncan spoke in favor of having smoke consumers tried out here in an endeavor to abate the smoke nuisance.

Mr. E. H. Howson suggested that manufacturers and industries might use some advertising matter with their shipments, as was the case of American firms shipping into Peterborough.

Mr. W. A. Richardson was thoroughly optimistic. In industries, Peterborough had a fair share of the good ones; in fact they had the cream.

Back yard gardens was espoused by Mr Sam Taylor, and taxation of improvements to the extent of $100 on $12 worth of paint was hit with a club.

"What are the police for if not to carry out the bylaws" inquired the speaker, in drawing attention to the fact that although a man might rid his property of weeds the seeds from his neighbor's crop would bring about a revival.

"If we act on half of the suggestions we'll be doing pretty well," said Mr. Alex. Weddell. He favored business men advertising the city on the back of envelopes.

The practice of sub-dividing property outside the limits so that the streets did not line up with the city streets, found disfavor at the hands of Mr. H. J. McCannon.

"If every person acts as he speaks we're bound to have good results," were Mr. D. Davidson's words to the gathering.

Arthur Rogers, almost overlooked by the Mayor, opined that the citizens should co-operate with the council and department heads.

PASTOR'S TRIBUTES TO THE LATE J. W. BENNET

Life of Uprightness, Integrity and Fidelity to Duty—Always on Side He Believed to be Right.

The funeral service of the late J. W. Bennet was held in St. Paul's Church yesterday afternoon and was conducted by the pastor, Rev. R. Pogue, assisted by Rev. T. H. Mitchell, of St. Andrew's Church. Mr. Pogue based his remarks on Numbers 23.10: "Let me die the death of the righteous and let my last end be like his." He said in part: "The special purpose of such a service as this is that it may minister comfort to the bereaved and sorrowing friends. It also serves a purpose to those who may be present who may not be closely related to the deceased and who come as friends that they may pay their last tribute of respect to the departed. There is a wonderful difference in the death of a righteous and that of an unrighteous man. There is no more beautiful sight that one could witness than the death of a righteous man; to see the unlifted eyes, the radiant countenance, bright with a Divine inspiration; to see the elevation of thought, lifted above the world and all terrestial objects, regarding them as already past; to see the calm resignation to suffering, to hear words of comfort and cheer to those who mourn their loss—all this makes a spectacle truly sublime, a spectacle poets cannot dream and artists cannot paint. It is such a scene as this that convinces one of the reality of our holy faith.

Life of Uprightness

He spoke of three things which make the death of the righteous desirable. First, the presence of Christ with them in their dying moments. Second, the prospects that await them. Third, the life that they lived. It was under this latter head that testimony was given to the worth and character of the late Mr. Bennet. The one word that best describes his life is the word 'righteous.' It was hoped that Judge Roger might have been present today to pay this tribute to the merit and worth of his life long friends. "In his absence," said the speaker, "the responsibility has fallen on me. I asked a number this morning to tell me what they knew of his character and life. The unanimous testimony of all was that his was a life of singular uprightness, integrity and fidelity to duty and the trust imposed in him; that he was most conscientous in the discharge of his duty, sparing neither time nor energy to do his utmost for those who placed their interests in his hands. He was always on the side that he believed to be right. If he sometimes took a different position to that of his friends it was because he felt he was right, and his conscience would not permit him to act otherwise. One man said of him that he was a thorough Christian gentleman, and added, there were few like him. One could not help but be impressed at the number of his interests. How one who was never strong physically, and who for the last fifteen years has kept up a constant fight for health and life, accomplished what he did is difficult to understand. The secret of it, no doubt, was the utter consecration of his life to the service of God. His was a beautifully unselfish career. He literally lived for others. The two institutions to which he gave of his time and talents without stint were the Church of Christ and the Young Men's Christian Association. He was practically the founder in Peterborough of the latter institution. It owes its existence to his untiring devotion in the early days of its history. When others were disheartened he took fresh courage. When they criticised he kept sweet and went ahead. When they spoke of impossibilities he assured them that all things were possible to those who believe. To him more than to any other is due the present building with its splendid equipment and all for which the Y. M. C. A. has stood, and all that it has meant in the lives of the young men of our city. The church received of his time and energy the same untiring devotion. There was nothing he liked to speak so much about as the work of the church of which he was a member. Surely his was a righteous life. The city is the poorer today because of his loss. That loss will be felt in the profession of which he was an honored member, in the church of which he was an elder, in the different institutions in which his large-hearted Christian sympathies led him to serve, and, more particularly, in the home where the tenderest love and sympathy existed. I speak as I do today to magnify the grace of God which made such a life possible. He was what he was because of that grace. The springs of his life were in Jesus Christ, and He alone made possible all that he was and did.

The pall-bearers were Messrs. H. Rush, J. C. Smith, Wm. Madill, J. D. Collens, W. R. Morris and John Crane. The funeral was attended by many representative citizens.

HAMS ARE HERE WITH PLENTY OF CONFIDENCE

Bob Parker and his Hamilton crew are here for their game with the 247th Soldiers at Brock Street rink tonight and the visitors have all kinds of confidence that they can turn the trick. The game will be called at 8.15.

The fans are again reminded that the "no smoking" order goes into effect tonight. The ice may turn heavy as the game advances and this condition will be plenty without the extra handicap of a smoke-laden atmosphere.

TED LEWIS BESTS J. GRIFFITHS

ENGLISHMAN GOT DECISION AFTER TWELVE FAST ROUNDS.

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

AKRON, Ohio, Feb. 27. — Ted Lewis, English welterweight, defeated Johnny Griffiths last night in 12 fast rounds.

CURLING

Skip Campbell defeated Skip Dela Fosse in the last of his inter-rink curling games at the rink last night. The ice was in fair shape despite the damp weather yesterday. Skips Waddell and McDermid postponed their game. The score last night was:

W. B. Warne	Ira D. Moore
A. H. Webb	H. Cook
G. Boucher	P. D. Fitzgerald
F. M. Dela Fosse	W. D. Campbell
(Skip) — 9	(Skip) — 12

The weather man apparently is going to be generous to curlers for the opening of the local bonspiel, which is due to start at 8 o'clock this evening.

Angus McIntosh has all the ices ready and in fine shape for the preliminary.

EMPLOYERS AFTER-WAR

Mr. Hodge's Scheme to Secure Harmony With Workers.

Mr. John Hodge, the Minister of Labor, speaking at Manchester, said a great alliance of employers had been formed with men of big hearts and far-seeing minds at the head of it, and the alliance des. .l the co-operation of labor, knowing that if the old combat between capital and labor was renewed after the war we would be left behind in the neutral markets of the world. As Minister of Labor he was going to form a big central committee, with four or five hundred local committees all over the country, for the purpose of dealing with this vast and most important problem of after-war employment.

The Government pledges for the finding of work for the soldiers and sailors after the war would be fulfilled to the letter. It was desired to avoid strikes and lockouts during the period of reconstruction, and a combination of employers and employed working together was the best means of getting the lads back to work. It almost seemed as if employers and workmen had put the whole of the staffs of the Labor Exchanges into a refrigerator and supplied them with plentiful quantities of cold air. He wanted to change all that. He wanted all to understand that when a man went into an Exchange for any purpose he was to be met with sympathy and courtesy, and that there should be an endeavor to understand his individuality.

PROVINCE IS OPPOSED TO PRIVATE OWNED RADIALS

Unanimous Objection to Projected Line of C.N.R. to Niagara---Returned Soldiers as Farmers.

TORONTO, Feb. 27. — Thomas Marshall's motion, that the Ontario Legislature protest to the Dominion Parliament against the approval of the C.N.R.'s plans for a line between Toronto and Hamilton carried yesterday as amended by Hon. I. B. Lucas, that the House reaffirmed the Government's previous protests in this matter, and objected to the Dominion House taking from the province jurisdiction regarding local lines on the pretext that they were for the good of Canada as a whole.

Provides Heavy Fine

Hon. I. B. Lucas introduced a bill to give power to the Provincial Railway and Municipal Board to impose a fine of $1,000 a day for failure to comply with its orders. He proposed to make the process more direct, he said. At present application had to be made to the courts.

To Protect Forests

The Hon. G. Howard Ferguson yesterday introduced in the House a bill to improve the forestry protection and preventive system in the province. The most important part of it, perhaps, is that providing for the establishment of a permit system by which settlers can burn slash only under permit from the fire rangers.

It further provides for the organization of a forestry department with the appointment of a head and a system of superintendents, with enlarged authority, and an increase in the apparatus for fighting and preventing forest fires. Wide powers are given in the act to the new department of regulation under orders in council.

Seed Potatoes Plentiful

H. H. Dewart asked Premier Hearst, as Minister of Agriculture, if he had taken any steps in regard to the high price of potatoes to see that a sufficient quantity of seed potatoes had been secu. . for the province's crop next summer. He was answered that the matter had been taken up some weeks ago and that through district representatives, the department had ascertained what were the supplies and where they were located. This information was now being tabulated for the use of buyers throughout the province. They had been surprised at the amount of the seed, he said. Asked if he had taken any steps to secure the seed at minimum price, Sir Wm. replied that he thought the matter would work itself out satisfactorily.

Land for Soldiers

Hon. G. Howard Ferguson outlined his scheme for placing returned soldiers on the land in northern Ontario. N. W. Rowell, in criticizing the measure, advocated the right of old Ontario, and said that more advertising should be done by the province in England, as Australia was getting ahead of this province in that matter.

Mr. Ferguson explained that the soldiers would be paid a reasonable wage for their labor while at the training camp at Monteith. Then, if they were found unfit for the life there, they would be sent back after having been taken care of for a time and given an adequate remuneration. The province did not wish to be under any obligation to the soldiers, but rather the other way. If any soldier had a preference for any particular portion of land, it would be given to him absolutely free. Machinery would be advanced to him, under the Loan Act, to the extent of $500. The equipment of the community centre would remain there at the disposal of any soldier who asked the use of it. This was the second reading of the bill, which will be discussed in greater detail in committee.

Caring for the Insane

In answer to Mr. L. P. Wigle, Hon. W. D. McPherson said the total capital expenditure to Oct. 31, 1916, on the Whitby Asylum on land was $197,0 0, on buildings $1,125,000, and on plant $76,000. A further amount of $300,000 was provided in the estimates.

Lesson for Hubby

"Did you wife scold you when you came home so late last night?"

"You don't know what it is to have a wife who was once a schoolteacher. She simply made me write a hundred times on a slate: 'I must be at home by 10 o'clock.'"

Woman Terribly Burned

Mrs. Alexander Holmes of Chatham went to turn down the fire in a gas stove before she retired. Her clothing caught fire and she was terribly burned. All the skin is off her hands and arms, and most of it off her body. She is in the hospital, but slight hopes are held out for her recovery.

Personal Improvements.

Had I the running of the world,
Its molding and its bossing,
The handing out of the rewards
And eke the double crossing,
I'd have things different, you can bet,
In just about a minute,
And some old cranks I think of now
Would know that they were in it.

There's Neighbor Jones across the way,
Who's busy chasing riches,
I'd pull him from the counting house
And set him digging ditches,
And Mrs. Jenkins, who aspires
To be the queen of fashion,
Would wait on table and would be
The one to bring the hash on.

That smartie Brown, who told his wife
That I was but a loafer,
Would take his orders straight from me,
For he would be my chauffeur,
And, oh, that snippy office boy
Who turned me down this morning
When I went in to see his boss—
His people would wear mourning!

And there are others in the land
Whom I by name might mention
Who when I got around to them
Would get some swell attention.
But, oh, I cannot cash my dream
Nor with it make connections!
The world must run on as it is
With all its imperfections.

No Increase for Women

Trustees Dr. Caroline Brown and Mrs. Ada Courtice and McClelland of the Toronto School Board put up a strong fight on behalf of the female teachers, whom they considered should be better paid, but motions to increase the minimum salary to $650 and the maximum to $1.400 were both lost. No increase on present schedule salaries this year at least, was the attitude of the board.

BRITISH 'PLANES RAID HUNLAND

GREAT BRITAIN LOOKING TO CANADA FOR FATS AND CEREALS

Only 51 Percent of World's Shipping Now Available---Figures Indicate Why Bulky Products Appear on Prohibited List.

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

LONDON, Feb. 28. — (By Stewart Lyon, Representative Canadian Press.) — Sir Robert Borden and Sir George Perley are deeply interested in the new list of prohibited food imports, and representations are being made regarding apples and canned salmon. If the prohibition of importations is sustained in the face of these representations, it will be because British shipping must devote all available tonnage to carrying products of vital importance to the people. Apples are a good food, but a ship can carry in the same space as a barrel of apples, concentrated foods such as butter, cheese and bacon, twenty times their value. It is well, therefore, that Canadian food producers devote this season all possible energies to the production of cereals.

Edward Crammond, before the Liverpool bankers, points out that Great Britain grows only 41 per cent. of all her food supplies, and measured in calories the transportation balance is a serious problem as up to January the allies and neutrals have lost about four and a half million tons of shipping while three hundred thousand tons have been damaged by mines, torpedoes and gunfire. At the same time, Germany's five and a half million tons of ocean shipping has been swept from the seas and is not available for the world's business except eight hundred thousand tons acquired by the allies. Austria's shipping, a little over a million tons, also ceased to take part in overseas trade. Of all the world's twenty-four million gross tons of shipping, only 51 per cent. of the total is now available. These figures indicate why bulky products such as Canadian apples have been put on the prohibited list. Great Britain looks to Canada for fats and cereals, and will be able to find ships to carry them. Apples have been sacrificed in the need to conserve shipping for a vital service.

ATTACKED A SOLDIER IN CHARGE OF DETENTION ROOM, TO GAIN HIS LIBERTY.

ENQUIRY WILL BE HELD.

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

PEMBROKE, Feb. 28.— Crazed by drugs, and determined to gain his liberty, Joseph Jordan, an American negro, a member of the Pembroke Co. in the 240th Batt., met his death in the armory last night when he made an attack with a knife on the guard in charge of the detention room. RETURNS HOME TO FIND WIFE DEAD IN BED

MRS. WM. SHEA, REID ST., SUCCUMBED TO HEART ATTACK.

Mrs. William Shea died very suddenly at her home, 211 Reid Street, early this morning. For some time she had been troubled with her heart, but for the past few days seemed to be much better and able to attend to her household duties. This morning Mr. Shea, who is a motorman on the Peterborough Radial Railway, left his home about 4.30, after bidding "Good-bye" to his wife, who was still in bed. Mrs. Shea replied. Returning about eight o'clock for breakfast, he was surprised to see the decorators, whom he had expected at the house, standing on the verandah. He tried the door and found it locked. Not having a key with him he had to get in by one of the windows, after which he found his wife lying in bed in the same position as when he had left to go to work. An examination showed that she was dead.

Coroner Greer was notified and pronounced death due to heart failure.

Arrangements for the funeral will be announced later.

BERNSTORFF OFF TO FATHERLAND

HALIFAX, Feb. 28.—After spending eleven days in the safe seclusion of Halifax harbor, under the vigilant auspices of the British navy, Count von Bernstorff was allowed to resume his voyage to the fatherland last night. At 7 o'clock the Frederik VIII cast off her lines at Pier Two, where she had docked on Thursday for examination of her passengers' baggage, and by 8 o'clock had passed down the harbor and was heading across the Atlantic to Copenhagen. Trere was little in the way of formalities. The order to proceed was handed to the Swedish captain and that was all.

CHECK FIRES IN PROVINCE

FIRE MARSHAL HEATON GIVES HIS VIEWS TO UNDERWRITERS.

TORONTO, Feb. 28—Delegates to the convention of The Mutual Fire Underwriters' Association on Ontario now in session at the Carls-Rite Hotel, were addressed yesterday afternoon by Fire Marshal E. P. Heaton, who gave a very comprehensive exposition of the work now being organized within the province for the official investigation of fire causes. In his preliminary remarks Mr. Heaton spoke of the immensity of the task before Commissioner Masten, who is engaged upon a revision of the insurance act, and he expressed a belief that there would be no new legislation affecting fire insurance brought down this year.

More Efficient Measures

In support of his contention that more efficient methods of protection from fire losses were needed within the province, Mr. Heaton compared the statistics covering the fire losses of the State of Ohio, with similar records concerning Ontario. Ontario, he said, had a greater total annual fire loss than Ohio, although the population was only about one-half as great. The fire losses of Ontario for 1916, aggregated $12,000,000 which with the exception of the year of the big Toronto fire, represents a high record.

Not Acts of Aliens

The fire marshal declared that there was no proper foundation of fact for the reports which are prevalent throughout the province that a great number of barn fires are the result of incendiary acts of alien enemies. "The idea is untenable," he said and added the results of investigations made by his department would indicate that the majority of barn fires within the province were caused by the lack of proper ventilating systems. He thought it was significant that in Waterloo County, there had been no reported case of barn fires during the month of October, November and December, 1916, and that the two border counties of Lambton and Essex had been singularly free of fire losses from unknown origin. He cited one case where a German bomb proved on investigation to be the remains of a burnt-out battery from a toy electric flash-lamp, which had been thrown aside by the son of the farmer who suffered the fire loss alleged to be the result of an enemy outrage.

Turks Engaged 30 Miles North-East of Kut -- Gunboat Recaptured and Two Others Lost to Turks

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

LONDON, Feb. 28. — The British are continuing their advance rapidly on the Tigris front. An official announcement was made here today that on Monday the Turks were being engaged on the left bank of the river more than thirty miles west and northwest of Kut-el-Amara.

The British gunboat Firefly, which was lost at the time of the retreat from Ctesiphon, has been recaptured. One Turkish gunboat has been taken and one was destroyed.

The text of the report on the Tigris fighting says: "The close pursuit of the retreating enemy has been steadily maintained throughout Monday, and our advanced troops were engaging the enemy on Monday afternoon from three sides at a point on the left bank of the Tigris over thirty miles west-northwest of Kut. During his flight the enemy has abandoned quantities of arms, ammunition, tent equipment and stores of all kinds, and has thrown some of his guns, including four large howitzers, into the river. The British gunboat Firefly has been recaptured and one Turkish ship taken and destroyed. The total prisoners taken on Sunday was 360, and up to the time of writing on Monday, 11 officers and 150 men."

TORONTO, Feb. 28—The Ontario Government has taken another step in the interest of the relatives of men who make the supreme sacrifice for liberty in the present war. Yesterday Hon. T. W. McGarry brought down legislation that will exempt the estates of all soldiers whose deaths are due directly or indirectly to the war.

The Bill, an amendment to the Surrogate Courts Act, declares:

"No fees shall be payable to the Crown in respect of proceedings for a grant of letters probate, administration or guardianship where the person in respect of whose will, estate or infant the proceedings are taken, died from wounds inflicted, accident occurring or disease contracted while in the active military or naval service of His Majesty, whether in Canada or abroad."

CAN A MAN BE A CHRISTIAN?

IS IT POSSILBE for a man to lead a Christian life under present-day conditions? What is the standard by which he should be judged?

Is it possible for a man to obey the Divine command to love his enemies?

The above are the questions that occupied the attention of the Calebites at their Sunday afternoon meeting in St. Andrew's Church, and the subjects drew out a lengthy discussion, the preponderance of expressed opinion being in favor of negative answers in both cases.

It is just possible that he members took too exalted a view of what a Christian is. So long as man is mortal, so long as he is handicapped by hereditary weakness and acquired vices, it is clearly impossible for him to attain anything like perfection. There is no perfect man this side of Paradise.

But mortal man can keep on striving to attain perfection, even though he may never be able to reach it while his higher being wears a shroud of common clay. The harder he tries, the nearer he will approach the goal. The student cannot hope to get a perfect mark in his examination, but he can work just the same with that end in view.

The men who argue that a minister can be a Christian while it is impossible for a worker in a factory to reach that state may be familiar with all the trials that beset themselves, but they apparently know little of those that surround a preacher. Of the two, the latter probably in nine cases out of ten has the heavier cross and the greater responsibility to carry. Any man is a Christian who honestly endeavors to live up to the principles taught by the Nazarine. He will fail in a more or less degree, beyond a doubt, but much will be forgiven him if he makes an honest effort. His greatest consolation is that a Divine and not a human Judge is to finally pass upon his care.

By what standard should a professing Christian be judged? If he is an employer, he will not try to sweat the last drop of blood out of his paid servant or hold him down to a bare living wage. If he is a workingman he will give honest services in any place he is called on to fill. He wil have no eye for the clock, and the arrangement by which he is required to record his coming and going will not worry him

The Christian lawyer will never abuse the privilege of counsel by intimidating a nervous or timid witness. He will never ask, with a sneer, of a citizen just as reputable as himself, whether he—the witness—has ever been in jail, throwing into his tone the implication that if he has not there has been a miscarriage of justice somewhere. The Christian newspaper man, engaged in the advertising end of the business, will not make mendacious statements about the circulation of his own paper or that of a rival. The Christian editor will never wilfully do a man an injustice, and will not, when driven into a tight place in an argument, artfully try to equivocate himself out of the tangle.

Lawyers, doctors, business men, mechanics, employers or employes, it is all the same. If they do unto others as they would be done by they have little to fear and this earth would become a Paradise we would all be loath to leave.

Loving an enemy is a hard proposition for the average man. As it was with the old Scotch lady, so with the most of us this duty comes easier if the enemy has consideration enough to keep out of our way. Still, as in the other cases, there is nothing like brave and resolute effort. If we cannot work up the proper degree of affection for those who have wronged us, we can at least maintain toward them an attitude of neutrality, more or less benevolent.

MAKING HASTE SLOWLY.

THERE IS NOT A DOUBT that the most of the reforms and improvements suggested at the recent civic banquets will eventually be carried out. The only question is, "When will all this be done?" There are men of fifty years or so who are naturally disposed to long to see the city made perfect, as planned, before they, in the natural course of events, are called away.

Why is not the same style of push and enterprise employed in the management of a city as is applied to the conduct of a private business concern? The principle is the same, or should be the same, in both cases. Take any large manufacturing concern in Peterborough, note the changes that have been made, the rate of progress that has been maintained during the past twenty years, and compare this with the pace struck by the city itself in that time. If any of the business men who spoke at the banquets and who were so ready with suggestions, had followed in their own business the policy that has been adopted in the city, they would be hopelessly out of the competition today if not among the list of industrial failures.

In private business, men as a rule act promply instead of consuming valuable time with mere talk. The active managers of an industrial enterprise are invariably men who are familiar with every detail of the work with which they have been entrusted. Novices are not placed in positions of power and authority and permitted to make costly experiments that as often as not end up in failure. The shareholders select a board of directors in whose ability they have confidence, and leave everything in their hands, hampering them with neither objection, criticism nor advice. This is one reason why a business enterprise is kept abreast of the times while a municipal corporation is likely to lag several laps in the rear.

Men at the head of civic affairs, too, should be trained experts in the various departments of municipal government and should be allowed a free hand. All that should be expected of them would be to show results in proportion to the outlay, the same test as is applied to any board of active managers. They may not be able to produce dividends in dollars and cents, but the best return the people can get for their outlay in taxes is an up-to-date and prosperous city in which the value of their holdings increase beyond the growth of the tax rate

Mayor Duffus is a perfect argosy of sane, if advanced, ideas in city government. He makes no mistake when he takes the shareholders—the taxpayers—into consultation, or when he places his finger upon the public pulse The pity of it is that he and his colleagues are not allowed a freer hand in the work for which they have been chosen, and that they are the constant prey of ill-advised critics who send up a roar of protest at the very idea of additional outlay, unable to see beyond the next tax levy, no matter what the future may promise in the way of returns.

THE SMOKE NUISANCE.

ALD. DUNCAN'S SUGGESTION for a better Peterborough, made at the civic banquet the other night, was that something be done to suppress the smoke nuisance. In this the aldermen will have the support of the medical fraternity. The members of that profession have agreed as unanimously as it is possible for doctors to agree, that the smoke that comes from the factories in which soft coal is burned is responsible to a large extent for the prevalence of pneumonia. Lungs that inhale such smoke are peculiarly susceptible to the disease, and cannot successfully fight against it once it gets a foothold.

There are almost insurmountable difficulties, however, in the way of putting Alderman Duncan's suggestion into effect. In the first place it is by no means settled that the so-called smoke consumers are really worth the outlay factory owners are put to to instal them. In any city the railways are the chief offenders, and this holds true in the case of Peterborough. Putting a smoke consumer on a factory chimney is a different proposition from equipping a locomotive with one. It would not be fair to insist on the manufacturers investing in these contraptions while the railways are allowed to operate as formerly.

In some American cities no coal-burning locomotive is allowed within the city limits. The urban traffic is taken care of by electric-driven engines. In this way manufacturers and transportation companies are served alike, but in a city like Peterborough such an arrangement would not be practicable. In those bright days, sure to come, when electricity furnishes the people with heat as well as light, when its use as power is universal and when steam railways areu nknown, the nuisance of which Alderman Duncan so properly complains will be heard of no more.

TALKING COMMON SENSE.

IT IS PLEASING to note that our evening contemporary is disposed to take a rational view of the election in New Brunswick. Instead of boasting of a political victory, as some of the Grit papers are doing, it sanely sizes up the situation as a vindication of the honesty of the electors. The Murray Government was not defeated because it happened to be Conservative, but because the voters believed it was corrupt. The Opposition was not returned to power on the strength of their party name, but for the reason that they can hardly fail to be anything but an improvement on the bunch that was deposed. At all events the electors were willing to take a chance.

While elections are conducted as was the one in New Brunswick, and the result is discussed in the high tone assumed by our neghbor, there will always be justification for the claim that the atmosphere that surrounds Canadian politics is becoming less of a menace to the moral health of the community. A man is not necessarily a saint because he is a Tory, any more than he is invariably a proper object of suspicion because he answers when the Grits call the roll.

WHAT THE FATHER OF HIS COUNTRY WOULD DO IN PRESENT CRISIS

On Thursday, Feb. 22, about the only place in the United States where people were gathered together for discussion or to listen to oratory in which the stirring note of Americanism was not sounded and the patriotism of George Washington was not extolled was the House of Representatives, says the New York Sun

In Washington, in the fitting surroundings of the headquarters of the Daughters of the American Revolution, Senator Pomerene of Ohio made an address so full of real patriotism applied to present day conditions, so sibilant with stinging scorn of those who would clip the wings and trim the claws and beak of the Eagle, that it may well put the orator in the very front of those who preach the convictions of George Washington today. We quote three paragraphs surcharged with significance:

"If George Washington believed that the welfare of the country required that he should come forth from his retirement in his old days to take command of our army in order to defend the rights of Americans upon the high seas in 1797 and 1798, what would he do now when all the world is aflame; when Christian civilisation is in arms, when the rights of neutrals are ignored and prampled upon when Americans are guilty of no offence save the exercise of their privileges upon the high seas? Would he leave our shores in a state of defencelessness? Would he forbid our Americans to follow their pursuits at sea?

"The pacifists claim they are true Americans, and most of them are but let me say to them that in the event of war by the course of their conduct they will prove the best friends any foe of our country could have and a source of embarrassment to the American cause.

"In every crisis of this country there have been well meaning men, if you please, who have hampered the Government at every turn. George Washington had his Tories; Abraham Lincoln had his Copperheads; and Woodrow Wilson well, he has the pacifists and some foreigners."

It was noted by the reporters present that the President warmly applauded the last two paragraphs quoted.

All over the United States like sentiments were expressed, not always with like eloquence but with equal fervor and conviction. The New York Society of the Cincinnati, after loudly applauding Admiral Fiske, who cried, "The navy has never failed you yet and it will always do its best, but for God's sake give the navy a chance!" went on to declare itself in favor of universal military training and to pledge its support to the President in whatever action he deemed necessary to preserve the rights of the United States.

EDITOR'S MAIL

Editor Review: I was very much interested in a letter which appeared in your paper Monday night, signed "Anti Suffragist." You say that the writer is a politician of note and no doubt he is a man whom I highly respect. Nevertheless, I must aver that like many other politicians of note, he finds it hard to see otherwise than as his forefather's saw.

The weakness of the stand taken by the writer is shown in the last sentence when he says: "Let them have their way and all human and Divine plans will be overturned and national decay will inevitably result." I might point out that this is the stock argument of those who resist progress. It was the favorite argument of the old English Tory squires who resisted the extension of manhood suffrage in England. In an article in a well-known weekly last week Will Irwin, the famous American journalist, refers to an old lady in England who in response to a suggestion recently that the class system in England was not all that an idealist might desire, replied: "My dear, you must remember that the class system was arranged by a Higher Power than we." To this good lady it would, of course, be absolutely profane to interfere in this Divine arrangement. This, by the way, is what the Kaiser thinks, too.

In the earlier part of the letter the writer says: "The Divine plan never took into consideration votes for women." I would interest me to learn the authority for this statement. If the writer has read the words of King Lemuel, the oracle which his mother taught him," he will know that a good woman shares to the full a man's labor. Should she not also share his responsibility? I would commend to the author of the letter "Woman and Labor," by Olive Schreiner.

I am not an enthusiastic advocate of Votes for Women. I am simply one of those who see no good reason why in municipal and provincial elections at least, women should be deprived of sharing the responsibility of electing those who will pass laws effecting men and women alike.

FROM A WORKER

Editor Review: I was pleased to see in last night's Review that Mayor Duffus — even at the eleventh hour—has decided that the working men of this city are fit to be taken into consultation on ways and means to bring about the betterment of Peterborough. This is a very proper stand for the Mayor to take, as he must remember that the workers form the greater part of the population of the city, and have just as much desire to see the city progress as have the business men.

When the Mayor had his business men in conference, each speaker spoke from his own personal viewpoint, or from the viewpoint of the company he represented. The Mayor got them all in in two banquets. But when he tenders his banquet to the working men, each speaker will express his views, not as a unit, but as a representative of at least twenty or thirty men—each one of which, if he has not as much property at stake in the city as the "business men," at least has his all — his health and his happiness—and he wants to live in as healthful surroundings as possible and have as beautiful and progressive a city to live in as the Council can make it.

I opine that the Mayor will find as good brains among the workers as any other section of the population of Peterborough.

CIVIC SNAPSHOTS

Fortune is a fickle jade, preferring as often as not to shower her favors upon some man who never woes her. Nothing, it is certain, succeeds like success. The quiet man often runs off with the prize, while the loquacious is reeling off a speech with his head up in the clouds.

Ald. Weir is a man given to silence, but, like many another in that class, he is a worker. No public question gets away from him and when he speaks his opinions are worth listening to. The Alderman from the East Ward is coming to the front and now is head of the greatest spending department in the city, reaching that place of honor, too, without any unnecessary waste of energy pulling ropes, or laying wire. On the top of all this civic distinction fairly won Ald. Weir can have the nomination for the Dominion Parliament in East Peterborough if he says the word.

— if the heavily-charged electric wires, that pen the people into a workless and almost foodless land, ran along our frontier

— if instead of reading of Belgian sufferings we heard the pitiful tales from the lips of escaped victims

— if we could watch the thousands of emaciated children who are fed at the schools by the Belgian Relief Commission

ANECDOTES OF THE FAMOUS

The other day a German newspaper wishful to throw mud at Mr. Lloyd George and his humble origin affirmed that so poverty-stricken was he in his early days that, at the time he was admitted to be a lawyer, he had not the three pounds necessary to purchase his professional "gown."

There is no truth in this, and, even if it were true, there is no disgrace in it, but rather the reverse.

It is perfectly correct, though, to say that David Lloyd George came of quite humble parentage, and owes his success in life entirely to his own enterprise and grit.

The chief points of his career are soon summed up Born in Manchester in January, 1863, he was educated principally at the village school at Llanystumdwy in Wales, his mother's native village, where she had gone to live, on the death of her husband.

In 1834, at the age of twenty-one, he set up in practice as a solicitor at Criccieth, and four years later he married the only daughter of Mr. Richard Owen of that town. In 1899 he was elected M.P. for Carnarvon. Mr. Lloyd George was probably the best abused man in England on account of the stand he took over the Boer War.

He quickly made a name for himself in Parliament, and he filled the offices of President of the Board of Trade, Chancellor of the Exchequer, Minister of Munitions, Secretary of War, and now Prime Minister of England and chief "War Lord."

It is a dazzling and almost unparallelled career for a man of the people, but then Lloyd George is no ordinary man. He has won the respect even of his enemies for his courage and straightforwardness. He never fears to speak what he thinks, and he is a perfect human dynamo as regards energy. Yet he is a small man—small in stature, that is. But he is hefty and sturdy, turning the scale at nearly 168 lbs. An abstemious liver, and a life-long teetotaller, his chief hobby is golf, and he keenly enjoys a good cigar.

An idealist, Lloyd George, like most idealists, is a man of extremely optimistic temperament. But his optimism is untinctured by any trace of fatalism. He belives in putting his best into whatever he undertakes, and his best is something worth having.

If Britain loses the war—which is of course, unthinkable—it will not be because of anything that Lloyd George can do to prevent it.

BEFORE ADAM

By JACK LONDON

Copyright, 1907, by the MacMillan company.

One morning, before the folk had dispersed to the forest, there was a panic among the water carriers and those who had gone down to the river to drink. The whole horde fled to the caves. It was our habit at such times to flee first and investigate afterward. We waited in the mouths of our caves and watched. After some time a fire man stepped cautiously into the open space. It was the little wizened old hunter.

He stood there for a long time and watched us, looking our caves and the cliff wall up and down. He descended one of the runways to a drinking place, returning a few minutes later by another runway. Again he stood and watched us carefully for a long time. Then he turned on his heel and limped into the forest, leaving us calling querulously and plaintively to one another from the cave mouths.

* * * * * * *

I found her down in the old neighborhood, near the blueberry swamp, where my mother lived and where Lop Ear and I had built our first tree shelter. It was unexpected. As I came under the tree I heard the familiar soft sound and looked up. There she was, the Swift One, sitting on a limb and swinging her legs back and forth as she looked at me.

I stood still for some time. The sight of her had made me very happy. And then an unrest and a pain began to creep in on this happiness. I started to climb the tree after her, and she retreated slowly out the limb. Just as I reached for her she sprang through the air and landed in the branches of the next tree. From amid the rustling leaves she peeped out at me and made soft sounds. I leaped straight for her, and after an exciting chase the situation was duplicated, for there she was, making soft sounds and peeping out from the leaves of a third tree.

It was borne in upon me that somehow it was different now from the old days before Lop Ear and I had gone on our adventure journey. I wanted to be near her, and I knew it. And she knew it too. That was why she would not let me come near her. I forgot that she was truly the Swift One and that in the art of climbing she had been my teacher. I pursued her from tree to tree, and ever she eluded me, peeping back at me with kindly eyes, making soft sounds and dancing and leaping and teetering before me just out of reach. The more she eluded me the more I wanted to catch her, and the lengthening shadows of the afternoon bore witness to the futility of my effort.

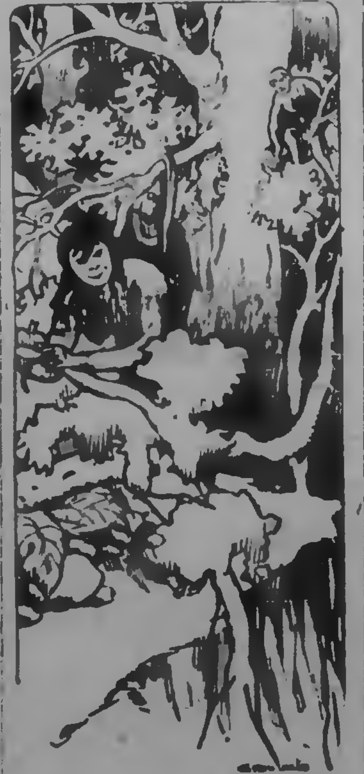
As I pursued her or sometimes rested in an adjoining tree and watched her I noticed the change in her. She was larger, heavier, more grownup. Her lines were rounder, her muscles fuller. Three years she had been away, three years at the very least—and the change in her was marked. I say three years. It is as near as I can measure the time. A fourth year may have elapsed which I have confused with the happenings of the other three years. The more I think of it the more confident I am that it must be four years that she was away.

Where she went, why she went and what happened to her during that time I do not know. There was no way for her to tell me, any more than there was a way for Lop Ear and me to tell the folk what we had seen when we were away. Like us, the chance is she had gone off on an adventure journey and by herself. On the other hand, it is possible that Red Eye may have been the cause of her going. It is quite certain that he must have come upon her from time to time wandering in the woods, and if he had pursued her there is no question but that it would have been sufficient to drive her away. From subsequent events I am led to believe that she must have traveled far to the south, across a range of mountains and down to the banks of a strange river, away from any of her kind. Many Tree People lived down there, and I think it must have been they who finally drove her back to the horde and to me. My reasons for this I shall explain later.

The shadows grew longer, and I pursued more ardently than ever, and still I could not catch her. She made believe that she was trying desperately to escape me, and all the time she managed to keep just beyond reach. I forgot everything—time, the oncoming of night and my meat eating enemies. I was insane with love for her and with anger, too, because she would not let me come up with her. It was strange how this anger against her seemed to be part of my desire for her.

As I have said, I forgot everything. In racing across an open space I ran full tilt upon a colony of snakes. They did not deter me. I was mad. They struck at me, but I ducked and dodged and ran on. Then there was a python that ordinarily would have sent me screeching to a treetop. He did run me into a tree, but the Swift One was going out of sight, and I sprang back to the ground and went on. It was a close shave. Then there was my old enemy, the hyena. From my conduct he was sure something was going to happen, and he followed me for an hour. Once we exasperated a band of wild pigs, and they took after us. The Swift One dared a wide leap between trees that was too much for me. I had to take to the ground. There were the pigs. I didn't care. I struck the earth within a yard of the nearest one. They flanked me as I ran and chased me into two different trees out of the line of my pursuit of the Swift One. I ventured the ground again, doubled back and crossed a wide open space, with the whole band grunting, bristling and tusk gnashing at my heels.

If I had tripped or stumbled in that open space there would have been no chance for me, but I didn't. And I didn't care whether I did or not. I was in such mood that I would have faced old Saber Tooth himself or a score of arrow shooting Fire People. Such was the madness of love—with me. With the Swift One it was different. She was very wise. She did not take any real risks, and I remember on looking back across the centuries to that wild love chase that when the pigs delayed me she did not run away very fast, but waited rather for me to take up the pursuit again. Also she directed her retreat before me, going always in the direction she wanted to go.



I Pursued Her From Tree to Tree, and Ever She Eluded Me.

TRIALS OF TRENCEHS

Company Commander Has Bad Time Getting Breakfast.

A subaltern writes: "If that cross-eyed batman of yours doesn't turn up pretty quick with that cake I shall make him sit on the parapet while I throw bombs at him in case the Boche misses him," said my company commander, in his delightful early morning manner. "There won't be much of him to throw bombs at," I replied, "if he strolls down Willow Road in ten minutes' time. There's a Boche 'Emma Gee' does a morning hate on Suicide Corner, as soon as it's light, with Teutonic precision." At this moment the object of our remarks appeared in sight about fifty yards down Willow Road which leads straight back from the front-line parapet. It is a part of the line too waterlogged at any time of the year to dig down more than a foot, so parapets take the place of trenches. It was unpleasantly clear that my servant bore no cake, and his general appearance was, if possible, more damp, depressed, and muddy than our own. I squelched along towards him that I might at least hear his tale before my company commander swallowed him whole. It was a sad tale. "An' when I gets to the corner by Welsh Chapel one o' them water carts comes round the corner, sir, at a 'and-gallop on the wrong side, bein' late in moving back before it's light, and knocks me into that blasted stream, beggin' your pardon, sir, an' the cake an' the cigars an' the tin o' peaches, wot the Mess Sergeant got in Bethoon, an' six candles an' them French papers you told me to get is all at the bottom of the ditch." This was the appropriate opening for what proved a thoroughly unpleasant day.

Even With the Colonel

A certain trooper in an Australian cavalry contingent owned a large tract of land on which his present colonel had worked for $15 a week before the war. The trooper went before his C.O. for a small offence, and the penalty was fixed at a severe reprimand and two days' pay stopped. "I'm sorry," the colonel told his late employer in a friendly way afterwards. "But war is war, you know, and I cannot overlook things."

"All right," said the trooper. "I don't think I deserved it, so I have cabled to my foreman to stop the money out of your pay."

The Way Out

A man told a magistrate that rather than live with his wife he would go to the front, where he would be safer.

Wit and Wisdom

"Bluffem poses as a hustler, doesn't he?"

"Well, yes, he's always energetic in reaching a conclusion that something ought to be done."

An elder sister approached, in an ingratiating way, a small girl who, in the breakfast-room, was engaged in knitting.

"Well done, well done!" she remarked. "That is really capital. You are doing the work so nicely, and so quietly, and so industriously——"

"Look here," interrupted the small girl, defiantly. "If its anything upstairs at the top of the house, I, for one, am not going to fetch it!"

Made a Hit With Her

"I suppose you women could improve on parliament."

"Perhaps in some things. But there's one thing about Parliament that appeals to me."

"What is that?"

"The way things are contracted for whether there is any money in the treasury or not."

MRS. MAY'S LETTER to WOMEN

More Proof that Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound Relieves Suffering.

Chicago, Ill.—"I suffered from a bad case of female ills. Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound was recommended and I took about six bottles. It fixed me up all right. The common symptoms of such a condition—pain when walking, irritation, bearing down pains and backache, nervousness and disordered digestion—soon passed away. I look much better now than I did before, and I recommend the Compound every time for female troubles, as it did for me all it is claimed to do. You have my permission to publish this letter." Mrs. J. MAY, 3548 S. Lincoln St., Chicago, Ill.

If you have any of the symptoms mentioned in Mrs. May's letter, remember what Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound did for her, and try it yourself. It is a good old-fashioned medicine, made from roots and herbs, and it has helped countless numbers of women.

If you need special advice, write to Lydia E. Pinkham Medicine Co. (confidential), Lynn, Mass. Your letter will be opened, read and answered by a woman, and held in strict confidence.

COPYRIGHT UNDERWOOD & UNDERWOOD N.Y.

THOSE LEFT BEHIND FACE STARVATION.

Scenes like that depicted in the accompanying photograph are, of course, common in all the allied countries. Thousands of the bravest and best in all the lands that are fighting for freedom have given their lives that liberty might not vanish from the earth.

But this scene carries a peculiar pathos by virtue of being in Belgium. In other countries the people have had time to organize. When a man has made the supreme sacrifice for his country, those left behind are not without loving care and help. But Belgium has had no opportunity to make such provision for the helpless ones left behind. The relatives who here are mourning their hero themselves face as bitter a fate, perhaps, as his. Their fair land has been trampled down by the invader practically without warning. Their men have bravely stood against hopeless odds because they knew it to be their duty to do so, and in so doing they have helped to save Great Britain and Canada from a fate similar to their own.

So sudden was the attack that almost the entire territory of the country has come under the sway of the Teuton. And the women and children and the aged people have been left destitute.

But not wholly without help. For to meet this emergency there sprang up a body of people whose devotion to the work of humanity is no less noble than the Belgian's own devotion to the cause of international justice. For two years the Belgian Relief Committee has been keeping the spark of life in this noble nation. It has, through unrelenting labor, fed and clothed a people who otherwise would long ago have died of starvation.

So the people of Canada are asked to give even more generously than in the past. Contributions may be sent either to the Belgian Relief Committee headquarters at 59 St. Peter Street, Montreal, or to the local branch in any community or district, and they will be gratefully received, whatever their size.

Prospers Under Prohibition.

Following the introduction of prohibition, which resulted in a number of clubs in Toronto advancing their membership fees, the Albany Club, of Toronto, headquarters of the Conservative party, raised the initiation fee from $50 to $100 and the annual membership fee from $25 to $40. The club increased in membership last year.

WOMEN OF ONTARIO GIVEN THE VOTE ON SAME BASIS AS MEN

Premier Hearst Accepts Responsibility For Bill Brought in by Private Member---Suffragists May Vote at Next Federal Election.

TORONTO, Feb. 28. — The franchise is practically in the hands of Ontario women. Premier Hearst came out yesterday with an announcement that his government would support the principle of J. W. Johnson's bill "to grant women the right o vote at elections to the Legislative Assembly" on the same basis as men. He called upon his supporters to vote for it, and took responsibility for it, and for the vote upon it.

The Government would bring down a measure incorporating the principle of this bill and providing the machinery to give women the vote before the next general election, he said.

Mr. Rowell, leader of the Opposition, supported the measure, pointing out that his party had long advocated it, and saying it was the most radical change in the basis of this province's government since Confederation.

The member for West Hastings, in introducing his bill, asked the Government to get behind it.

It is possible that after supporting it in principle by voting for it at the second reading, the Government may reject it in detail at the third reading, and so clear the way for a Government measure.

Will Double the Vote.

Sir William began his address on woman's suffrage by pointing out from census figures that such action would practically double the vote in the province. Since the war had reduced the number of men, the women might outvote them if they voted solidly together. He did not expect, however, any distinct line of cleavage.

For Better Government.

Mr Rowell spoke at length of the work in the war, church and home, which had entitled the women to vote. He foretold that the extension of the franchise would have a great effect of securing honest and sincere candidates for political office. The votes of women would be needed for the social community and industrial legislation which would necessarily follow the war. He instanced "mothers' pensions" as a problem which needed the assistance of the women.

The Dark Side.

A. E. Donovan of Brockville produced figures to show that there was a dark side also to woman's suffrage. Six states that had woman's suffrage had not by 1914 passed prohibition. California, which had woman suffrage rejected prohibition by 200,000; Wyoming, which had had woman suffrage for forty-six years, was the wettest in the Union, he said.

Referring to Mr. Rowell's bill, to entitle women to sit in provincial parliament, Mr. Donovan said that when women entered parliament, between nursing their babies and their constituencies at the same time they would have their hands full.

POPULATION OF ST. THOMAS

Editor Review: Spending a few days with friends in your city I happened to read in a local paper the report of a banquet given by your Mayor to the business men. One of the speakers is quoted as referring to St. Thomas as a "town with a population of seven thousand."

Town! Seven thousand! Alas, what is fame? St. Thomas is a city. As to its population the speaker will have to double his figures and then add at least four thousand before I can consent to deal with him.

THE ST. JOHN AMBULANCE ASSOCIATION

10,000 PERSONS INSTRUCTED IN FIRST AID AND HOME NURSING.

OTTAWA, Feb. 28—The Duke of Devonshire, who presided at the annual meeting of the St. John Ambulance Association, has become patron, succeeding H.R.H. the Duke of Connaught. During the past year the association has instructed over 10,000 people in first aid and home nursing, and also taught over 100,000 Canadian soldiers what to do in case of injuries. In almost every province school teachers are required to qualify in first aid, and in the mining districts this also applies to those in charge. The small button worn by the discharged soldier, showing that he has done service, is supplied through the association. In addition to the nurse and assistant nurses sent overseas, graduates in first aid and nursing are proving of value in almost every convalescent home in Canada.

Over 4,200 people in Ontario were given first aid instruction last year. Gen. the Hon. James Mason was re-elected a vice-president, and Gen. Sir H. M. Pellatt, W. K. George, Noel Marshall, Dr. Copp, of Toronto were elected to council. Classes are held thoughout the province under the direction of Dr. Copp, 554 1-2 Yonge St., Toronto, who will be pleased to answer inquiries.

SLICK TRICKS OF THE WAR

Fake Scenery to Deceive Enemy Aeroplanes.

A French writer says: Some one asked me if I knew that the scene-painters of the French theatres had been mobilized and formed into a battalion for the purpose of painting scenery to mask gun positions—and I laughed at the story. Since then I have seen gun positions so hidden. Suppose that it is found necessary to post a battery in the open, where no cover is available. In the ordinary course of events the German airmen would discover those guns before they had fired a dozen rounds, and the German batteries would promptly proceed to put them out of action. So they erect over them a sort of tent, and the scene-painters are set to work so to paint that tent, that from a little distance it cannot be distinguished from the surrounding scenery. If it is on the Belgian littoral, they will paint it to look like a sand dune. If it is in the wooded country of Alsace or the Argonne, they will so paint it that, seen from an aeroplane, it will look like a clump of trees. I have seen a whole row of aeroplane hangars, each of them the size of a church, so cleverly painted that, from a thousand feet above they could not be seen at all. A road over which there is heavy traffic lies within both range and sight of the enemy's guns. Anything seen moving along that road instantly becomes the target for a rain of shells. So along the side of the road nearest the enemy is raised a screen of canvas painted to represent a row of trees such as commonly border French highways. Behind that canvas screen horse, foot and guns can then be moved in safety, though the road must be kept constantly sprinkled so that the suspicions of German observers shall not be aroused by a tell-tale cloud of dust.

Planked Shad

Clean and split a shad, put the skin side down on an oak plank one inch thick, or lay in baking pan. Sprinkle with salt and pepper and dot with bits of butter.

(For a shad weighing three pounds use one-half teaspoon of salt, one saltspoon of pepper, and two tablespoons of butter).

If you use gas for cooking, place the shad under the broiler flame and cook fast for ten minutes, then lower the flame for eight minutes more. Shad may be baked in oven, allowing twenty-five to thirty minutes for a dish weighing three pounds.

Fry shad roe slowly in butter ten minutes, turning most of the time. Cut in slices and serve around the planked shad.

SOLDIERS HAVE SIX GOALS FOR GAME AT HAMILTON

Peterboro Defence Again to the Front, the Visitors Being Unable to Get Through---Game Won in Second Period.

Peterborough Soldiers will carry a lead of six goals to the Ambitious City on Friday night, a margin that from this distance looks like a difficult proposition for the Hams to overcome. Such being the case, the Soldiers will meet Kitchener in the finals of the O.H.A. intermediate championship.

The score last night was 9 to 3, and, as in previous games, it was the stalwart defence of the Petes that held the visitors when they were doing their best in the first period, giving the forwards a chance to size up the other fellows and prepare a campaign to grab a victory in the second and third periods. And it all worked out to a nicety.

The visitors certainly did go some in the opening chapter. They had plenty of speed, they were as weighty as the locals, and they had enough combination to put up a real argument. But they failed when the defence was reached. Realizing the blockade, the shooting was done from outside, just what LeGros likes and he handled his job in a very creditable manner. The worth of the defence was demonstrated particularly in this period when, with the Petes two men short by reason of penalties, the Opposition forwards used careful and deliberate two and three men combination plays. Yet they couldn't score.

The period ended with the Petes on the sunny side of the 2 to 1 score. The first counted came after ten minutes of play, Halpin, A. Flanagan and Armstrong working the puck towards Sloane, Armstrong taking the shot. Boyd got it back for the Hams when, after LeGros had blocked the puck, he failed to handle it in time to prevent its flopping into the nets. Adams took the Petes' second counter on a beautiful shot from the boards.

A change came over the scene of activities in the second period, when the locals had the major part of the play. The hard going in the opener had made its effect on the Hams' line and they were not so brisk for the second ordeal. After Armstrong and Adams had combined for another goal which the former tallied, McEwen, the visitors' left winger, took a jaunt and was stopped by P. Flanagan. He went to the ice in a heap and was groggy when he resumed play. After some minutes he had to retire and Al. Flanagan, who had been doing a whole lot of good work for the Petes particularly in the first period went off with him. Then the break came. Armstrong had better command of his injured arm, Adams had more room to navigate and altogether the new order of things was favorable. In another four minutes the Petes had a three goal lead on a score by A. Flanagan. The next tally was the cream of them all. It was a combination play by Armstrong and Halpin right through the Hamilton defence and on to the mouth of the nets, the passing being so well timed and accurate that Sloane was outguessed completely and Halpin, getting the last pass, slipped the disc into the netting without difficulty. On a play by Adams and Evans, the latter poked in another tally in two minutes, making the score 6 to 1, and thus it remained when the gong sounded.

PROSPECTS

With the Petes winning the round at Hamilton on Friday night, which everybody hopes they will do, the Soldiers will likely go to Kitchener for the first of the O.H.A. finals, so that the championship would really be decided on Peterborough ice, the dates of the games being, in all probability, Tuesday and Friday of next week.

Big Leo Reise made an awful effort in the period to get some goals. The Hams' giant defence man rushed the puck towards the Peterborough nets something after the style one might imagine a British "tank" would plough through. But the famous tanks have it on Reise. He was all right until he met the defence, when he was either relieved of the puck or his course was diverted into the corners. Harold Parker, his mate on the defence, also swooped down on several occasions, but he fared no better.

The Hams came back somewhat stronger in the third period. In three minutes Reid, the pick of the forward line, got in a short that fooled LeGros and with this encouragement, Reise rushed twice in quick succession, but without succes. On a third attempt he got through on top of LeGros and again he failed to score. After six minutes Coir took a third tally for his team, when the locals were caught napping. Jack Adams went alone for what proved to be the last goal of the game.

The Petes won two goals that the visitors disputed. The second tally scored just before the first period was protested by the Hams' timekeeper on the argument that time was up. Refere Bernhardt couldn't see it at all as the gong had not sounded. The fourth goal, which Flanagan scored, brought another argument. The disc beat out the goal line by a small margin and Archie Barbeau behind the netting promptly elevated his hand. The visitors claimed the rubber was outside the line, but it didn't get them anything.

Even with six goals to spare, the Petes won't have time to trifle at Hamilton. They will be without the services of Bob Armstrong, which may be a blessing in disguise, as there has been a suspicion among the observing fans that the forward line has permitted the big centre man to do too much work. The rest of the crowd will have to limber up at the Ambitious City end of the competition, Armstrong getting a rest for the greater battle in prospect.

Nobody can accuse the Hams of stepping outside the rule book to play the game. Reise, with his height and weight, is a remarkably clean player and in last night's affair none of his team mates showed any signs of rough stuff. Any one of the players, knowing as they did, that Armstrong was under the weather, might have put an end to his services for the balance of the winter. Some teams pull off those tricks.

FIRST NIGHT IN THE LOCAL BONSPIEL

The local bonspiel of the Peterborough curling club opened last night under the most favorable auspices. The weather was just right and the ice in perfect condition. Some of the contests were very close and interesting to watch. The game between Dick Davidson and Dr. Wightman was especially good, but as Dick was playing on No. 7 ice he could not win, and if Skip Sturgeon loses tonight he will blame it on the same hoodoo. There were some good ends played between the Archibald-McDermid rinks.

There were a few substitutes played on some of the rinks last night by permission of the committee in charge.

The rinks and scores were as follows:

MAJOR CAMPBELL'S POINTED SPEECH

Government Furnishes Col. Ackerman With List of Slackers Who Can Choose Between Voluntary Enlistment or Compulsion

LIEUT.-COL. ACKERMAN received in his mail this morning from the National Service Board at Ottawa a list containing the names of 93 eligible men in this city. These men are single or widowers without children and all are between the ages of 18 and 30 years. They constitute the first class, according to the grading under the Militia Act, and their names were obtained through the National Service cards recently collected by the Government. This list is not complete, but is sent in so that the recruiting officers may act in the matter at once. More will be furnished, and it may turn out that there are several hundred men of this class in the city.

All these 93 men will now be approached by the recruiting officers and given to understand that if they do not come forward voluntarily they have nothing to expect but that the Government will now use its authority to get them into khaki.

The above announcement was made by Major Campbell, chief recruiting officer, at the meeting held last night at the Armories. There was a discouragingly slim attendance, the men in khaki being in the majority. About a dozen women, several members of the Patriotic League, prominent manufacturers and a couple of aldermen composed the civilian portion of the audience.

Major Campbell spoke some plain and unpalatable truths in his address, but it must be said that he handled a delicate situation with consummate tact. Recruiting in Peterborough has fallen below that of any station in the district. The 247th Battalion will be taken from this city and amalgamated with some other unit unless the citizens show a disposition to get behind the movement.

Public Support Pledged.

A resolution introduced by Judge Huycke and seconded by Ald. Smith pledged this support, and Major Campbell, on behalf of the Department, promised that the battalion will not be moved for two months in order to give the city a chance to redeem its reputation. Even if the Militia Act is put into force, that will not keep the unit here. The people must do something to back up the efforts of the officers.

A resolution by Mr. J. A. Aylmer requested the Government to enforce the Militia Act.

Figures submitted by Major Campbell show that the total number of enlistments in this district is 44,359 and in Canada the total enrolment is 400,000 in round numbers. The speaker spoke highly of the attainments and the energy of Col. Ackerman and his staff in the work for which they were selected. Yet, in spite of all their efforts, they have failed in a measure because they have been denied public support that is so essential.

Major Campbell does not know when the Militia Act will be put in force, but he believes that when it is and young men are put on guard duty at least 80 per cent. of them will enlist voluntarily for overseas service.

Judge Huycke for Compulsion.

Judge Huycke made one of his effective addresses and voiced the sentiments of the meeting when he declared for some form of compulsion. If men are conscripted, he would be glad to see such a brigade taken out of the city with all speed as they would be no honor to the community.

The Root of the Trouble.

Mr. Joseph Wearing declared that a mistake had been made at the outset of the organization of the battalion in the matter of the appointments.

Col. Stevenson would disfranchise every eligible man who refused to volunteer.

Mr. J. A. Aylmer was all for some form of compulsion, and introduced a resolution to that effect.

Mr. R. B. Rogers would publish the names of the slackers.

Disfranchise the Slackers.

Col. J. W. Miller lauded the record made by the city and county and pointed out that both had more men in the service than the records show as a number from here had joined outside units. Few eligible members of the 57th Regiment, officers or men, are left.

Aldermen Smith and Dobbin maintained that there was work in the munitions factries that women could not do, work that required strong men. Even the returned soldiers were not equal to the task of handling heavy shells. In the meantime the munitions board insists upon the manufacurers living up to their contracts.

Employers Apathetic.

Speaking as a citizen Capt. Soden got after the manufacturers and declared that they should co-operate by refusing to hire or to keep eligible men in their employ. The apathy of the manufacturers is one of the greatest drawbacks to recruiting,

One Last Appeal.

It was decided that the Patriotic League act as a committee to promote a meeting of the employers of labor to enlist heir co-operation. This done, Major Campbell promised that the term of probation would be extended for two months. If the battalion is removed Peterborough will never have an opportunity to raise another.

HAS THE CHURCH FALLEN DOWN?

So often it had been said that if the Christian people of Peterborough were given an opportunity to make their gifts for the work of Christ in Labrador in a voluntary way, there would be no need of a "function" to raise money for Dr. Grenfells' Deep Sea Mission. This year every minister in this city his appealed through these columns by the words of his brethren for the small amount for which this city is responsible. The money has not come in—not one-half of it. It is a matter of procrastination. We intend to pay it, but how shall we appear if within the next two days the people who object to "functions" fail to call at the newspaper offices with their gifts? If there is such a failure, we need never again raise our voices to say, "The only way to secure money for missions is the voluntary system." What will we do about it? Has the Church fallen down?

CITY MAKES GOOD SHOWING IN CUSTOMS

AGAINST ADVERSE CONDITIONS IN FEBRUARY.

THIRTY-FIVE DEATHS FOR THE MONTH.

Peterborough customs receipts for the month of February were $57,071.26, as compared with $58,471.15 in February, 1916. This is only a decrease of $1,399.89, which, considering the freight embargo and other conditions, is a very good showing for the local port of entry.

Building Permits

In the month of February building permits were issued to the amount of $13,425, an increase of $13,300 over the same month last year, when only $125 for repair permits was issued.

Fire Loss at St. Thomas

Fire did $20,000 damage to the foundry and machine shop of Norsworthy & Co. at St. Thomas. The main building was gutted and the machinery badly damaged. It will be several weeks before the plant can be in operation again. The origin of the fire is a mystery.

DELIBERATION OF GERMANY'S PLOT BY FOREIGN RELATIONS COMMITTEE

Full Official Confirmation of Proposed Alliance by Germany With Mexico and Japan is Given---Washington Does Not Believe Teutons Will Succeed.

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

WASHINGTON, March 1—Senator Lodge's resolution was referred to the Foreign Relations Committee.

WASHINGTON, March 1— Full official confirmation of Germany's proposal to Mexico of alliance with Mexico and Japan to attack the United States was given today both at the White House and the State Department. Germany's communication to Mexico was brought up in the Senate by Senator Lodge. Senator Swanson of Virginia said he was authorized to state the communication as published and signed Zimmerman was "substantially correct."

On the floor of the Senate it was announced that Democratic Senators had been authorised to state that the revelations, including the text of instructions from German Foreign Minister Von Eckhardt at Mexico City were correct.

On motion of Senator Lodge the Senate at once took up the proposal to ask President Wilson to communicate the facts to Congress officially. After considerable discussion Senator Hardwick insisted upon an objection to the immediate consideration of the Lodge resolution in order that there might be time for deliberation by the Foreign Relations Committee.

Secretary Lansing authorized the statement that it was not believed Japan would consider a proposal from an enemy or that Mexico would be a party to any such agreement as proposed by Germany.

Instructions to Minister

A copy of Zimmerman's instructions to van Eckhardt, sent through von Bernstorff, is in possession of the United States Government. It is as follows:—

"Berlin, January 18, 1917.

"On the first of February we intend to begin submarine warfare unrestricted. In spite of this, it is our intention to endeavor to keep neutral the United States of America.

"If this attempt is not successful, we propose an alliance on the following basis, with Mexico: That we shall make war together and together make peace. We shall give general financial support and it is understood that Mexico is to reconquer the lost territory in New Mexico, Texas and Arizona. The details are left to you for settlement.

"You are instructed to inform the President of Mexico of the above in the greatest confidence as soon as it is certain that there will be an outbreak of war with the United States, and suggest that the President of Mexico, on his own initiative, should communicate with Japan suggesting adherence at once to this plan; at the same time, offer to mediate between Germany and Japan

"Please call to the attention of the President of Mexico that the employment of ruthless submarine warfare now promises to compel England to make peace in a few months.

(Signed) "ZIMMERMANN."

Berlin Announces Voluntary and Systematic Withdrawal on Both Banks of the Ancre.

FRENCH TAKE PRISONERS

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

PARIS, March 1. — The Germans have already fallen back behind Bapaume, and the fall of that town is imminent, according to information in military circles here.

(Official Statement.) — Patrol encounters occurred during the night in the Argonne and in the region west of Metzeral. We took prisoners. There was intermittent artillery fighting at certain points of the front, especially between the Oise and the Aisne, and in the Champagne near Auberive.

BERLIN, March 1.—Army headquarters announces a voluntary and systematic withdrawal of parts of German positions on both banks of the Ancre on the Franco-Belgian front.

The text of the headquarters statement regarding the withdrawal on the British front says: On both banks of the Ancre several days ago, for special reasons, part of our advance positions was voluntarily and systematically evacuated and defence has been placed in another prepared line. Our movement remained concealed from the enemy. Rearguard posts acting carefully hampered his troops, which only with hesitation groped forward, occupying without fighting a strip of land abandoned by us and which is lying in ruins. Yielding in the face of a numerically superior attack, as had been ordered, these minor detachments inflicted considerable sanguinary losses upon the enemy, and up to now we have captured eleven officers and 174 men and four machine guns, and today still dominate the field in front of our positions.

PURSUIT OF TURK NETS PRISONERS AND SUPPLIES

Gunboats and Cavalry Harass Beaten Enemy and Much Equipment Has Been Taken by British

TOTAL TURK LOSSES OVER 20,000.

LONDON, March 1. — Remnants of the Turkish forces retreating from Kut-el-Amara have been shattered completely, according to information given out in the Commons today. The Turks, it was said, would reach Bagdad only as a disorderly mob. This information was received from Gen. Maude, commanding the British on the Tigris front. More than 2,500 prisoners have been taken since Saturday, and since Dec. 30th, 5,000 Turkish prisoners have been taken. The total Turkish killed and wounded is estimated at over 20,000.

RESTORE BRITISH PRESTIGE.

LONDON, March 1. -The rout of the Turks on the Tigris north of Kut-el-Amara is expected by military officials to do much to restore British prestige in the middle East. In his weekly talk reviewing the recent war operations, Major-Gen. Frederick B. Maurice, chief director of military operations at the British War Office, expressed great satisfaction regarding the recent British successes over the Turks, which would tend to establish the above results.

PETERBOROUGH, THURSDAY, MARCH 1, 1917

THE THEFT OF THUNDER.

JUST AS WE HAD begun to remark on the improvement in the political tone of our evening contemporary it falls from grace, and, as a partisan, sins more grievously than ever. It has always appeared to us that the besetting vice of The Examiner is vainglorious boasting and a disposition to take itself too seriously. For example, it appropriates all the honor for launching an agitation for back yard gardens, although that subject has been taken up regularly with the return of the robins for the past tweny years or more. Because Premier Hearst favors the same proposition, The Examiner, with a painful lack of modesty, complains that Sir William profited by its doctrine without giving it the credit that it seems to believe is its due. Who would have suspected Sir William of any craft of the kind?

The paper that could in all seriousness set up such an absurd and puerile claim surprises no one when it says that the Conservative party of Ontario stole the temperance policy of the Opposition. What analogy is there between the Ontario Temperance Act and the easy, half-hearted abolish-the-bar compromise promulgated by Mr. Rowell? The latter claims that the weak point in the former is the lack of a provision to shut out imports. Under the Act the only supply house for the bibulous of Ontario is situated in Quebec. Mr. Rowell would have left it intact just around the corner. After the smash the people gave the Liberal temperance policy ni 1914 the article was not such as to tempt any party into appropriating it.

The Conservative party from the days of Sir James Whitney stood pledged to give the people prohibition to the limit of legislative authority as soon as the voters convinced them that the province was ready for it. A petition signed by nearly ninety per cent. of the electors was sent in, and the party redeemed the pledge made by their late leader.

Again, the claim is set up that the Conservative party have stolen the policy of the Opposition with regard to woman's suffrage. Since he assumed the leadership, Mr. Rowell has caught wildly at any straw in sight. In everything he showed the caution of the designing politician. With regard to women's votes, he never got further than a compromise, just as he dallied with the temperance question.

There never was so concerted a move for equal suffrage as there has been during the past six months. The women of Ontario have spoken out as plainly as did the temperance element a year ago, and once more Premier Hearst has done the right thing at the right time.

The Examiner, referring darkly to an article in a recent issue of The Review, says, with its old air of assurance, that it is foolish adulation to declare as this paper did that the Hearst Government is stronger than ever with the public. We said as much, and repeat it here and now. The only argument that The Examiner can offer to the contrary is that certain bye-elections have gone against the Administration.

Mr. Rowell led his remnant of followers through two general elections without making gains. He never won a bye-election until a year ago, when a war grafter was frozen out of the Conservative party. He applied to his constituents for a coat of whitewash and this was denied him. He made the race without administrative or journalistic support, an Ishmaelite striving to again make his way into the House over the back fence.

In another constituency, where the liquor party predominated, a man who owned stock in a brewery was elected. Was this an endorsation of the Rowell temperance policy or a slam at the Prohibition Act?

In a Toronto constituency the liquor [illegible] and the foreign vote combined to elect a candidate who ran as a man without a party, and who, although he has identified himself iwth the Opposition, bids fair to wreck completely what is left of it. Mr. Rowell has never been heard to go so far as some of his blinded satelites and claim that the elections referred to added anything to his prestige.

The two other bye-elections held since the Ontario Temperance Act was passed and in constituencies where conditions are normal, went in favor of the Government. The Opposition has not a peg left upon which to hang a hat, let alone a plank upon which to stand.

Nothing is added to the dignity of their position by The Examiner foolishly picturing the Liberals in the Legislature as a bunch of children crying because some one has stolen their candy.

LEAVE IT TO THE PEOPLE.

IT OFTEN STRIKES US that the Toronto Mail and Empire possesses all the qualities required to constitute a modern kaiser. Give it a free hand, and it would make of Canada a nation ridden over by autocrats and hedged in on all sides by Acts of Parliament. No man could live, move or exist except by the grace of and according to the rules laid down by some legislative enactment. Conditions are bad enough as they are. It is almost impossible for a citizen to move these days without doing violence to some code established by Parliament or Legislature or running fowl of a bylaw drawn up by the municipal council. And yet let the Mail and Empire behold a fellowman make one false step, and it immediately yells for the police. Not satisfied with the multiplicity of laws that now cumber the statute books, it is constantly calling upon the Government to add to the number.

Speaking of the slackers who are flitting to the United States in order to escape threatened conscription, our Toronto contemporary sees another opportunity to indulge its favorite passion. It says the Government should at once take steps to stop the exodus, but fails to even hint that the guarding of the long and unfortified boundary line would be a task of considerable difficulty. When the war is over and the fly-by-nights come back, the Mail and Empire would be prepared for them by the usual method of governmental action. So long as work was plentiful these men could be given employment, but in slack times they would be turned adrift to shift for themselves. All this could be made possible by the Government passing a law or two to this effect and keeping on file a list of the names of the marked men.

Kaiserism pure and simple, free and unadulterated! When the slackers come back, their former associates can be depended upon to mete out to them the correct brand of treatment. No special legislation will be required. Canadians as a rule will be prepared to adopt the right course in such matters without having to be driven into it by the lawmakers. In all conscience the legal maze which surrounds us is thick enough as it is.

More education or moral suasion and less legislation is required to fit the people for the duties of life. The Mail and Empire should give the masses the benefit of its distinguished counsel instead of relying entirely upon Hun like force to make them righteous.

WOMEN AND THE FEDERAL VOTE.

NOW THAT the legislative franchise has been as good as conferred upon the women of Ontario, the question arises whether this automatically gives them the right to vote in Federal elections or whether further specific legislation will be required on this point.

One of the best lawyers in Peterborough tells The Review that the voters' lists for the various provinces are accepted in Dominion elections, and this being the case, he is satisfied that women can vote for members of the Dominion Parliament. That is, of course, provided neither Parliament nor Legislature passes any further enactment specifically barring them from this privilege.

Of course, there is sure to be opposition to the new Government measure, just as there always is to every drastic reform. The Conservatives themselves are not likely to be unanimous. "Anti-Suffragist," who recently wrote The Review, is a type of a class who have developed a grouch, but it is only a grouch that is sure to be temporary. "Anti-Suffragist" and others of his mind will soon fall into line and accept the inevitable. The equal franchise was something that was bound to come, if not by peace means, then by a social revolution. It is no experiment the result of which is in doubt. Women in other places have voted for years and have shown themselves just as competent in politcal affairs as the men themselves.

Now that woman has been given the privilege, will she be willing to accept the responsibilities of citizenship and render the State all the services that are required of men? Will she pay poll tax, for example, without complaint, provided the law is amended so as to impose this new duty upon her?

If she does fall in wih new legislation along these lines, one ground for objection to her sharing the franchise will be removed.

WHAT THE SCHOOLS DID.

THE PRINCIPALS of the schools throughout the province have sent in their reports showing what was accomplished in the cultivation of school gardens last year. The estimated area of the gardens was approximately two and a half acres, and the value of the products was $964.30. This shows an average return of $385.72 an acre.

Can you beat it? What better illustration could be furnished of what it is possible to accomplish by intensive cultivation of the soil? If the arable land of Ontario was all made to produce in anything like this proportion Canada could feed the world and the problem of the high cost of living would disappear.

PRIZES FOR GARDENS.

THE HORTICULTURAL SOCIETY was the first organization in this city to do something definite with regard to the cultivation of back yard gardens. At the annual meeting held recently the point was raised that all the prizes offered for the best-kept lawns were going to the officers of the society. The officers, accordingly, at once agreed to stay outside the competition so as to give those in the ranks a clear field for the awards.

It was decided that in order to encourage thrift, as well as to develop the higher art of making a city beautiful, prizes be given for the best cultivated vegetable gardens in back yards. President Walter Stocker donated a prize of $3, William Kennedy $5, and Chief Howard [illegible], for this purpose.

This public-spirited move should encourage the young people of the city to get busy with spade and hoe in the back yards of their homes as soon as spring comes. It is altogether likely that private citizens will donate a large cash prize to be competed for, and The Review hopes to be able to make a pleasing announcement to this effect in a few days. The cultivation of the vacant lots, first proposed in these columns as a move worthy of municipal backing, is also sure to be taken up, so that Peterborough the coming season is likely to do its full share in the campaign of thrift and production which has the sanction of both Parliament and Legislature.

NOTES AND COMMENT.

IF MARCH came in like a lamb, it is to be hoped that the wind was tempered for its benefit.

• • • •

ANYWAY, there is nothing like another effort to fill up the battalion and save the reputation of the city.

• • • •

MR. JOSEPH WEARING in his speech last night got a little closer to the real nub of the trouble than any of the others.

• • • •

WHEN A MAN says he will bolt his party over the equal franchise question, is his statement to be taken as a threat or a promise?

• • • •

IF THE LOCAL manufacturers are neutral with regard to recruiting, their neutrality is neither hot nor cold, armed nor benevolent.

• • • •

ALL THE SPEAKERS at the civic banquets appear to overlook the fact that one way to raise revenue is to tax the people's vices. Usually they meet all such exactions cheerfully.

• • • •

ONE OF THESE DAYS we expect to see The Examiner hasten to claim that the Hearst Government would never have thought to bring in the usual appropriations had not Mr. Rowell urged them to act.

FARMERS ARE WARNED TO LOOK CLOSELY AFTER SEED GRAIN

District Representative F. C. McRae of Norwood, is sending out the following circular to the farmers in his constituency:—

There is urgent need for prompt action and extreme care in procuring the best available seed grain supplies, because of injury to the grain crops in the Prairie Provinces and parts of Eastern Canada during the season of 1916. Rust practically ruined the wheat over a large part of Manitoba and Saskatchewaan. In the northern districts of the prairie province the grain crops were considerably injured by frost. In Ontario and parts of other eastern provinces the late, wet spring, followed by drouth, resulted in low yields and poor quality of grain, particularly oats. Severe injury to the principal grain crops from different causes over such an extended area has produced a serious situation in respect to seed grain. Individual farmers and responsible governing bodies within the affected districts should act promptly and procure the best available seed grain. If this is not done, and the matter is allowed to drift until nearly seeding time, large areas must necessarily remain idle or be seeded with grain which is unfit to sow and likely to produce a poor crop.

Get Virile Seeds

The first essential in seed of any kind is strong vitality. The extent of the injury to grain, from the standpoint of its suitability for seed is measured by the extent to which its vitality or strength of growth has been impaired. Rust is not transmitted by seed grain. The danger of using rusted wheat for seed is therefore limited to the extent to which its vitality has been lowered. With wheat the injury from either rust or frost is more apparent than with other grain. The extent of the injury is largely indicated by the appearance of the kernels. Seed that is badly shrivelled from any cause should not be used if it can be avoided as the kernels have not sufficient reserve food stored within them to nourish the young plant until they get a good start. Shrivelled seeds may produce plants under favorable conditions, but at best they will be weak and if they encounter adverse conditions they are not likely to live. No definite rule can be given for the extent of injury which may be allowed in grain that might be expected to produce a good stand of growing plants, but in general it is probably unsafe to sow any that is not at least three-fourths normal seed.

Feed Oat Grades Unfit For Seed

Flour and feed dealers who offer should be very careful to warn farmer purchasers against using them for seed. The feed grades contain oats which are frozen or otherwise unsound and not suitable for milling purposes. They usually give a very low percentage of germination which results in serious crop failure. The sowing of these frozen oats in past years has given the general impression that all western oats will not do well in eastern Canada the first year. Home grown seed oats of good quality is so scarce this year that farmers should be specially warned against using the feed grades for seed.

Eastern Canada farmers are advised to procure local grown oats of the best quality and clean them to thirty pounds per bushel or better if possible. Thus far not more than 100,000 bushels of No. 1 Canada western seed oats free from wild oats are available in storage. It may be found necessary to make a grade of No. 2 seed oats containing not more than eight wild oats to the pound. This would be very much superior to the milling of feed grades which are foul with noxious and other weed seeds.

Frozen Oats Useless

One or two degrees of frost in the milk stage of oats are sufficient to ruin them for seed. Frozen oats are difficult to detect. A sample may be badly frozen as to be totally unfit for seed and the injury not be apparent to external appearances. From outside appearance there is nothing to indicate that the seed has been injured by freezing. A kernel of sound oats when stripped of the hull is usually semi-transparent and remains flakey when crushed. A frosted kernel has a clouded, dark appearance, particularly at the tip, is more brittle and reduces to powder when crushed. Frozen oats have a characteristic sweet taste. In wheat frost injury is more apparent, being evidenced in severe cases by shrunken and discolored kernels. Lighter injury is shown by lack of lustre caused by the crimping of very fine cracking of the seed coat. These factors render a vitality test with oats especially important, and where any doubt exists in respect to frost injury to oats a germination test should be procured.

How to Make the Test

For this purpose a shallow box or flower pot filled with ordinary soil may be used. A definite number of seeds, not less than 100 should be planted at about the ordinary depth for sowing and the soil kept moist, but not wet. It is advisable to conduct each test in duplicate in order that uniform results may be obtained. The box should be placed where it will not be too warm in the day time, and where it will be cooler but will not freeze at night; the alteration of temperature favors germination. By noticing the number of plants produced and whether they came up quickly or strong or weak, one can determine the suitability of the grain for seeding purposes more accurately than from the results of a test which he does not see. When seed is being tested in this way it is advisable to plant beside it some grain of the same kind which is known to be strong in vitality; in order that the test may be checked and a comparison made between the growth of the sample under test and the seed that is known to be good.

Another Danger

Greater liability to disease, insect and weed injury is another danger from using seed of low vitality. Weak young plants from poor seed are more susceptible to infection with smut and other diseases before they emerge above the ground. Throughout the season, healthy growth is a protection against adverse weather conditions as well as disease and insect injury. When a crop gets a poor start weeds have a better chance to develop and choke out the crop, resulting in a reduced yield and lower grade.

With weak seed the treatment for smut prevention is rendered unsafe. While ordinary seed is not materially injured by the formalin or bluestone treatment, there is considerable danger if the vitality is already weakened through other causes. If it is necessary to sow shrivelled grain it might be advisable to omit the treatment for smut or use a weaker solution than ordinary, unless there is evidence of smut contamination in the seed or soil.

WHAT TYPOS EARNED IN THE 60'S

If the journeyman job printer of fifty-six years ago could make it convenient to step on earth for an hour in this day of grace, he would be startled at the changed conditions in the weekly stipend. This paragraph is the outcome of a look at the payrooll of the job room of Rowsell & Ellis, the well-known printers of Toronto.

There are some names of old timers that recall the last lays of the fifties and the beginning of the sixties in this pay book. One page of the book gives the weekly wages and reads as follows:—

J. H. Lemaitre, $9.66; De Vere Hunt, $9; M. Carroll, $6.82½; Joseph Benson, $8.62½; C. Brown, $6.60. Wm. R. Parkes, $6.45; John Love, $10; Benpamin Hazlehurst, $7.65; W. Hunt, $8.40; J. Scarlett, $5.50; Johnson Glnn, $4; R. G. Ellis, $3.25; John Ginn, $2.50; Francis McNamee, $2; C. Riddell, $2.

The wage book dates from Jan. 8, 1859, to Sept. 8, 1860. The same names appear as members of the staff, week after week. Lemaitre and De Vere Hunt made the best average wage of from $9 to $10 per week each.

Some of the other journeymen drew from $8 to $9 and the apprentices, John Ginn, McNamee and C. Riddell, were content with about $2.25 each. The average wage would be about $8 per week and ten hours per day. The gross weekly wage of the sixteen employees was $75 to $100 a week, or an average of about $80 per week.

The scale in 1916-17 for job is $20 for hand men and $21 for machine operators per week of eight hours daily.

Men wouldn't care how much their wives talked if they would use nothing but the sign language. Then they would shut their eyes and sleep in peace.

POLITICAL NEWS AND NOTES

The Toronto Canadian Club polled a large majority for a "National Government." That shows what organization in support of a vague idea with a reputable name can do. If those who engineered the plebiscite had explained what the policy and composition of the "National Government" would be it would not get one vote cu of ten.

The War Correspondent.

There appears to be an impression abroad that the appointment of Mr. Stewart Lyon, editor of the Toronto Globe, as Canadian war correspondent at the front, was made by the Government. The fact is that he was selected by the directors of the Canadian Press, Limited, which is paying his salary and all his expenses, including cable tolls. The Government pays nothing in connection with the service and consequently had no say in the appointment. It is hoped the fear may be unfounded that he will color his despatches and letters from the front with political dyes.

Be Warned in Time.

The coal situation in Canada this winter ought to open our eyes to the necessity of laying in an adequate supply during the spring and summer months. Every coal bin should be filled and if necessary enlarged to hold more than a winter's supply. The difficulties of winter transportation are increasing rather than diminishing as the railways are not so well equipped in men and material to handle the traffic. The wise man is he who gives his order for coal now and insists on his dealer filling it in the spring or early summer when transportation facilities are best.

"It Might Have Been."

A prominent naval critic writing in the London Chronicle, a newspaper regarded as the mouthpiece of the British Liberals, and one of the strongest supporters of the Government, in a discussion of the naval battle of Jutland, says:

"Sir David Beatty could have overwhelmed the enemy if Britain could have given him three or four more bittle cruisers than were assigned to his command."

Dr. Edwards, M.P., discussing this in the House, said:

"Had Sir David Beatty had three or four more battleships he could have smashed and obliterated the German fleet. And whose fault is it that he did not have these battleships? The blame is not to be laid at the door of the hon. gentlemen on this side. We voted the money; we were willing to spend $35,000,000 in supplying three battle cruisers to strengthen the navy. But opposition came from the leader of the other side of the House, and the Bill was defeated by his partisan Senate at his command. The responsibility lies at his door."

The Rum Ration.

A great deal of talk is being given utterance to by individuals and by some ministerial and temperance associations with respect to the issue of rum rations to soldiers at the front. Some of them allege that soldiers are compelled to take it, and it is even hinted that it is served to them only when going into action. The fact is that rum is issued to the troops only at the discretion of the general officer commanding, on the recommendation of the medical officer, and that, when an issue of rum is ordered for troops serving with the expeditionary forces in the field, individual soldiers who have any objection to the spirit may have cocoa or chocolate supplied them in lieu thereof.

WISDOM OF BABES.

"Mamma, can me and Timmy have some cake?" asked little Ruth.

"Not unless you can ask grammatically," replied her mother.

"Well, then," said she, "may I have a piece of cake?"

Big Sister—O, I do hope papa will take me to the concert. I'm so fond of music.

Little Brother—Huh! Then why don't you never let me play my drum in the house?

Teacher—Edwin, can you tell me the meaning of the word 'respect'"?

Edwin—Yes'm. It's the feelin' one kid has for another what can lick him.

SEVENTEEN YEARS AGO

From The Review of March 1, 1900:

The welcome news was received in Peterborough that Ladysmith, the South African city besieged by the Boers, had been relieved.

A package of comforts aws sent to the twenty Peterborough boys fighting in the South African war.

There was egneral rejoicing in the city over the relief of Ladysmith.

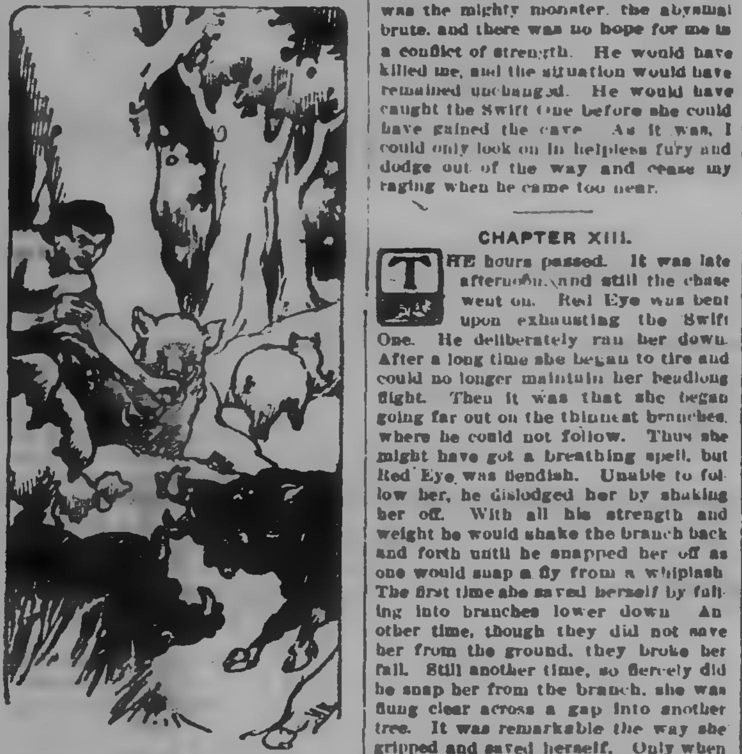
At last came the dark. She led me around the mossy shoulder of a canyon wall that outjutted among the trees. After that we penetrated a dense mass of underbrush that scraped and ripped me in passing. But she never ruffled a hair. She knew the way. In the midst of the thicket was a large oak. I was very close to her when she climbed it, and in the forks, in the nest shelter I had sought so long and vainly, I caught her.

The hyena had taken our trail again, and he now sat down on the ground and made hungry noises. But we did not mind, and we laughed at him when he snarled and went away through the thicket. It was the spring time and the night noises were many and varied. As was the custom at that time of the year there was much fighting among the animals. From the nest we could hear the squealing and neighing of wild horses, the trumpeting of elephants and the roaring of lions. But the moon came out and the air was warm and we laughed and were unafraid.

I remember next morning that we came upon two ruffled cock birds that fought so ardently that I went right up to them and caught them by their necks. Thus did the Swift One and I get our wedding breakfast. They were delicious. It was easy to catch birds in the spring of the year. There was one night that year when two elk fought in the moonlight, while the Swift One and I watched from the trees, and we saw a lion and lioness crawl up to them unheeded and kill them as they fought.

There is no telling how long we might have lived in the Swift One's tree shelter. But one day while we were away the tree was struck by lightning. Great limbs were riven, and the nest was demolished. I started to rebuild, but the Swift One would have nothing to do with it. As I was to learn, she was greatly afraid of lightning, and I could not persuade her back into the tree. So it came about, our honeymoon over, that we went to the caves to live. As Lop Ear had evicted me from the cave when he got married, I now evicted him, and the Swift One and I settled down in it, while he slept at night in the connecting passage of the double cave.



I Struck the Earth Within a Yard of the Nearest One.

And with our coming to live with the horde came trouble. Red Eye had had I don't know how many wives since the Singing One. She had gone the way of the rest. At present he had a little, soft, spiritless thing that whimpered and wept all the time, whether he beat or not, and her passing was a question of very little time. Before she passed, even, Red Eye set his eyes on the Swift One, and when she passed the persecution of the Swift One began.

Well for her that she was the Swift One, that she had that amazing aptitude for swift flight through the trees. She needed all her wisdom and daring in order to keep out of the clutches of Red Eye. I could not help her. He was so powerful a monster that he could have torn me limb from limb. As it was, to my death I carried an injured shoulder that ached and went lame in rainy weather and that was a mark of his handiwork.

The Swift One was sick at the time I received this injury. It must have been a touch of the malaria from which we sometimes suffered; but, whatever it was, it made her dull and heavy. She did not have the accustomed spring to her muscles and was indeed in poor shape for flight when Red Eye cornered her near the lair of the wild dogs, several miles south from the caves. Usually she would have circled around him, beaten him in the straightaway and gained the protection of our small mouthed cave, but she could not circle him. She was too dull and slow. Each time he headed her off, until she gave over the attempt and devoted her energies wholly to keeping out of his clutches.

Had she not been sick it would have been child's play for her to elude him, but as it was it required all her caution and cunning. It was to her advantage that she could travel on thinner branches than he and make wider leaps. Also she was an unerring judge of distance, and she had an instinct for knowing the strength of twigs, branches and rotten limbs.

It was an interminable chase. Round and round and back and forth for long stretches through the forest they dashed. There was great excitement among the other folk. They set up a wild chattering that was loudest when Red Eye was at a distance and that hushed when the chase led him near. They were impotent onlookers. The females screeched and gibbered, and the males beat their chests in helpless rage. Big Face was especially angry, and, though he hushed his racket when Red Eye drew near, he did not hush it to the extent the others did.

As for me, I played no brave part. I know I was anything but a hero. Besides, of what use would it have been for me to encounter Red Eye? He was the mighty monster, the abysmal brute, and there was no hope for me in a conflict of strength. He would have killed me, and the situation would have remained unchanged. He would have caught the Swift One before she could have gained the cave. As it was, I could only look on in helpless fury and dodge out of the way and cease my raging when he came too near.

CHAPTER XIII.

THE hours passed. It was late afternoon, and still the chase went on. Red Eye was bent upon exhausting the Swift One. He deliberately ran her down. After a long time she began to tire and could no longer maintain her headlong flight. Then it was that she began going far out on the thinnest branches, where he could not follow. Thus she might have got a breathing spell, but Red Eye was fiendish. Unable to follow her, he dislodged her by shaking her off. With all his strength and weight he would shake the branch back and forth until he snapped her off as one would snap a fly from a whiplash. The first time she saved herself by falling into branches lower down. Another time, though they did not save her from the ground, they broke her fall. Still another time, so fiercely did he snap her from the branch, she was flung clear across a gap into another tree. It was remarkable the way she gripped and saved herself. Only when driven to it did she seek the temporary safety of the thin branches. But she was so tired that she could not otherwise avoid him, and time after time she was compelled to take to the thin branches.

Still the chase went on, and still the folk screeched, beat their chests and gnashed their teeth. Then came the end. It was almost twilight. Trembling, panting, struggling for breath, the Swift One clung pitiably to a high, thin branch. It was thirty feet to the ground and nothing intervened. Red Eye swung back and forth on the branch farther down. It became a pendulum, swinging wider and wider with every lunge of his weight. Then he reversed suddenly, just before the downward swing was completed. Her grips were torn loose and, screaming, she was hurled toward the ground.

But she righted herself in midair and descended feet first. Ordinarily from such a height the spring in her legs would have eased the shock of impact with the ground. But she was exhausted. She could not exercise this spring. Her legs gave under her, having only partly met the shock, and she crashed on over on her side. This, as it turned out, did not injure her, but it did knock the breath from her lungs. She lay helpless and struggling for air. Red Eye rushed upon her and seized her. With his gnarly fingers twisted into the hair of her head, he stood up and roared in triumph and defiance at the awed folk that watched from the trees. Then it was that I went mad. Caution was thrown to the winds; forgotten was the will to live of my flesh. Even as Red Eye roared from behind I dashed upon him. So unexpected was my charge that I knocked him off his feet. I twined my arms and legs around him and strove to hold him down. This would have been impossible to accomplish had he not held tightly with one hand to the Swift One's hair.

GIVEN UP AS DEAD

Lieut. Charles Glover, a former Wycliffe College student, who was believed to have been killed in action almost two months ago, and whose loss had been deeply mourned during that period, recently acquainted his alma mater by letter of the fact that he is well, but a prisoner of war at Osnabruck, Hanover. Lieut. Glover was in England when war broke out and he immediately enlisted in a Yorkshire regiment. He had only been a short time in the trenches when one morning he led his men over the parapet and was never seen alive again by any of his regiment. What happened him he tells in his letter. The early morning attack was made during a mist, and he and his men were soon floundering in a sea of mud, fronting the German trenches. There many of his men were killed or wounded and himself, with two other officers, taken prisoner. Lieut. Glover had a remarkable escape from death. A bullet broke the butt of the revolver he was using, smashed his whistle which he carried in his left breast pocket, pierced a pocket case full of letters, and a steel mirror, and finally spent its force by grazing the skin over his heart.

Are The Four Fruits Used in Making "Fruit-a-tives

"FRUIT-A-TIVES" is the only medicine in the world that is made from the juices of fresh ripe fruits. Thus, it is manifestly unfair to say, "I won't take Fruit-a-tives because I have tried other remedies and they did me no good". On the other hand, the fact that "Fruit-a-tives" is entirely different from any other preparation in the world, is just why you should give it a fair trial, in any trouble of the Stomach, Liver, Bowels, Kidneys or Skin. "Fruit-a-tives", is composed of the active principle of fruit and the greatest nerve tonic ever discovered. 50c. a box, 6 for $2.50, trial size, 25c. At all dealers or sent postpaid by Fruit-a-tives Limited, Ottawa.

Wit and Wisdom

Luck

"I played in great luck the other day."

"How?"

"The driver put a ton of coal in my bin that was intended for someone else."

Evident Importance

"Does your wife attach much importance to you?" inquired the intrusive relative.

"Oh, yes," replied Mr. Meekton. "Henrietta realizes that a man she would consent to marry must necessarily be important."

Explained

"Pa, what's the difference between 'insurance' and 'assurance'?"

"Well, the latter is what the agent has, and the former is what he tries to sell you."

An Ear for Music

A little girl five years old was on her way to the beach for the first time. Her numberless questions as to the ocean, the fish, ships, sailors, etc., had embarrassed her mother and amused the passengers. The train finally neared the wharf, where we were to take a steamer, and as we glided along very near the shore for a short distance we could plainly hear the swish of the waves. The little girl turned from the window with a beaming face.

"Listen!" she exclaimed. "I think I hear the fishes!"

"Yes," said the girl who makes collections, "it is one of the best autographs I have in my collection."

"But are you sure it is genuine?"

"Positive. I cut it from a telegram that his wife received from him."

MR. C. A. GHENT IS SERIOUSLY ILL

(Special Correspondence.)

HAVELOCK, March 1. — Mr. and Mrs. J. A. Sexsmith are home from Ottawa until Parliament meets again on April 19th.

The many friends of Mr. C. A. Ghent will regret to learn that he is seriously ill from an attack of pneumonia.

Mrs. McDonald and daughter, Mrs. Donnie, of Peterborough, were the guests of the former's sister, Mrs. Mary Dineen, last week.

Pte. Carman Kelly, of Queen's Ambulance Corps, was home on his last leave last week. He goes overseas shortly.

Mrs. S. C. Cross and children, Harold and Reggie, of Trenton, were the guests of the former's parents, Mr. and Mrs. I. Barlow, during the past few days.

Misses Vera Skene and Grace Primrose, of the University of Toronto, are home for a few days on account of that institution having closed for want of fuel.

hTe Sunday School teacher had explained the familiar Bible story at length, and then asked Tommy if he expected to be among the sheep or the goats.

"I dunno," said Tommy doubtfully. "How's a feller to tell when his ma calls him a lamb an' his pa says he's a confounded kid?"

Cured His RUPTURE

I was badly ruptured while lifting a trunk several years ago. Doctors said my only hope of cure was an operation. Trusses did me no good. Finally I got hold of something that quickly and completely cured me. Years have passed and the rupture has never returned, although I am doing hard work as a carpenter. There was no operation, no lost time, no trouble. I have nothing to sell, but will give full information about how you may find a complete cure without operation. If you write to me, Eugene M. Pullen, Carpenter, [illegible] Marcellus Avenue, Manasquan, N. J. Better cut out this notice and show it to any others who are ruptured—you may save a life or at least stop the misery of rupture and the worry and danger of an operation.

Drink Water to Avoid Sickness Says Authority

Glass of Hot Water Before Breakfast Daily Keeps the Doctor Away.

Sanitary science has of late made rapid strides with results that are of untold blessing to humanity. The latest application of its untiring research is the recommendation that it is as necessary to attend to internal sanitation of the drainage system of the human body as it is to the drains of the house.

Those of us who are accustomed to feel dull and heavy when we arise, splitting headache, stuffy from a cold, foul tongue, nasty breath, acid stomach, can, instead, feel as fresh as a daisy by opening the sluices of the system each morning and flushing out the whole of the internal poisonous stagnant matter.

Everyone whether ailing, sick or well should each morning before breakfast, drink a glass of real hot water with a teaspoonful of limestone phosphate in it to wash from the stomach, liver and bowels, the previous day's indigestible waste, sour bile and poisonous toxins; thus cleansing, sweetening and purifying the entire alimentary canal before putting more food into the stomach. The action of hot water and limestone phosphate on an empty stomach is wonderfully invigorating. It cleans out all the sour fermentations, gases, waste and acidity and gives one a splendid appetitie for breakfast. While you are enjoying your breakfast the phosphated hot water is quietly extracting a large volume of water from the blood and getting ready for a thorough flushing of all the inside organs.

The millions of people who are bothered with constipation, bilious spells, stomach trouble, rheumatic stiffness; others who have sallow skins, blood disorders and sickly complexions are urged to get a quarter pound of limestone phosphate from the drug store. This will cost very little, but is sufficient to make anyone a pronounced crank on the subject of internal sanitation.

GOOD HIGHWAYS AN ESSENTIAL TO PROGRESS

TORONTO, March 1—Good highways are essential to the progress and development of the province, declared Hon. F. G. Macdiarmid, Minister of Public Works and Highways, yesterday afternoon, in addressing 300 delegates to the Ontario Good Roads Association annual convention. Speaking as a member of the Government the Minister said: "We do believe that the construction of good roads has a direct bearing on the cost of living in this province. We believe that by the construction of good roads we will enlarge materially the areas from which cities draw their food supplies, that with better highways the utility of the motor truck as a commercial vehicle will reduce the handling of produce which will therefore reduce the cost to the consumer.

Mr. Macdiarmid explained the intentions of the Ontario Government in relation to the good roads scheme which was referred to in the recent speech from the Throne. With the coming of the motor truck, said the Minister, conditions have changed rapidly in this province. The Government derived from motor licenses last year $650,000, this year the amount might reach $750,000, but by 1920, Mr. Macdiarmid prophesied that the revenue from this source would be over one million dollars.

BUDGET DEBATE DRAGS WEARY LENGTH IN HOUSE

Members Infuse Some Spice Into Discussion By Chiding Each Other for Wearing Civilian Clothes.

TORONTO, March 1.— To judge from the course of the budget debate in the Legislature yesterday it would have been difficult to appreciate the fact that the House is well toward the half way point in a session planned to last a bare seven weeks. Half a dozen members spoke, using up the whole afternoon without contributing anything material to the knowledge of the House. The prolongation of the debate was not anticipated by the Government in mapping out the business of the session, it being thought that the Opposition would consent to closing it, as was done last year, after the leaders had been heard. It is stated that a similar suggestion was made to Mr. Rowell this session, but he was not able to fall in with it, owing to the determination of his supporters on the rear benches to make their voices heard.

Capt. J. I. Hartt, of East Simcoe, injected a little interest into a rather rambling discussion by taking C. M. Bowman, the Liberal whip, to task for his part in the West Simcoe bye-election, declaring that if the Bruce member had voiced in some counties the counterpart of his slander of Ontario's machine guns he would now be in an internment camp. Capt. Cartt defended his own part in the fight and turned upon Hartley Dewart, K.C., for his talk of "court-martial," by informing him that he would wait a long time for it if he had to wait for Mr. Dewart to get on a military court to judge him. Mr. Dewart took the implied reference to his non-possession of khaki clothes without replying.

The Conservative members enlarged upon the Government's record of progressive legislation and commented upon the absence of real criticism of the Provincial Treasurer's financial statement. The Opposition speakers gave the Conservatives their cue since the Liberal orators all seized upon Government House expenditure as a worn but still potent comforter.

There was a Time, Not so Many Years Ago, When Little was Said About "Food Values"

Gradually, however, scientists began finding out that many common ills were directly traceable to the excessive use of certain "foods" which are deprived of a large portion of the mineral salts of phosphorus, iron, calcium, etc.—food elements absolutely essential to life.

These facts led, some twenty years ago, to the making of GRAPE-NUTS, a food rich in these mineral elements. This splendid food, made from whole wheat and barley, supplies perfectly the wonderful "food values" of these grains lacking in the ordinary dietary.

GRAPE-NUTS is most delicous! Eaten with cream, as it usually is, it is an ideally balanced food, and should be served daily.

"There's a Reason"

Grape-Nuts

Food prices may soar, but there has been no change in price, quality or size of package of Grape-Nuts. This is also true of Postum, Instant Postum and Post Toasties, also made by the manufacturers of Grape-Nuts.

PETERBOROUGH MARKETS

The market during the past week has been well supplied with hay and straw, but the demand was steady and prices firm.

Quite a few loads of wood also offered and sold readily, particularly dry hardwood and tamarac.

There is little livestock being shipped, as the drovers are a little afraid of the outside market, to say nothing of a reported local shortage of good butcher stock. The market for stockers is weak.

Hogs are now worth $14.50 for local delivery.

Eggs are being marketed in large quantities and prices have dropped from 5c to 8c per dozen.

HORSE MARKET.

TORONTO, Feb. 28. — A healthy trade was reported by Toronto horse dealers for last week, with the French army inspectors securing over 135 from the Union Stock Yards Horse Exchange and the Repository. There were two inspectors at the Union Yards, and daily inspections at the Repository. Several part loads were secured at the Union Horse Exchange for [illegible] West, and a few odd horses were taken for city requirements, with prices a shade easier than the preceding week. Blocks for general farm purposes weighing 1,275 to 1,500 pounds were disposed of at private sales at $140 to $185. One especially good grey horse, four years old, weighing 1,820 pounds, brought $285. Mr. Walter Harland Smith, manager of the Union Yards Horse Exchange, states that prospects are good for a lively trade this week.

Two loads were shipped to the west from the Repository, one of cheapish horses at $50 to $150 to Star City, Sask., and one load of good blocks and mares for farm purposes to Winnipeg. City men are picking up a few odd horses at $165 to $175.

Little Lies.

I had something of a shock the other day. I told a man something in what I thought was confidence and he immediately went off and told it. When I saw him again I asked him what on earth possessed him! He said he was awfully sorry, simply didn't think. "But I can fix it up," he said. "The next time I see that fellow" (the one he told) "I'll simply say you didn't say it." "But I did!" said I. "Why, certainly," said he. "But I don't think so much of little lies. You simply have to tell them to get on in business." Well, he went on off, and I don't know just what to think about it. But this I do know, that the next time that particular person says such and such a thing is so, I may and I may not believe it. That's the answer, it seems to me, on the subject of lies, big or little. In the last analysis they may or may not be immoral. But they lower at once the credit of the one who tells them.

WHAT THEY TOLD THE FANS AT HAMVILLE ABOUT THAT 9-3 SCORE

Soldiers Admittedly a Strong Team But Oscar Bernhardt Didn't Suit and he is Not in Favor for Friday Night.

(Hamilton Herald.)

Cheer up, down-hearted hockey bugs!

Nine to three is not a very palatable morsel, but there is much encouragement in what the H.H.C. players and officers have to say of the affair.

Manager Frank Wright and Coach "Cy" McKeon burst into the Herald office early this morning to tell how it all happened. They had several reasons to offer, all of which are worthy of consideration, and both expressed the opinion that the Hamilton Hockey club, playing at its best, can not only win, but overcome the six-goal lead. It looks like a hard assignment, but the officials firmly believe it can be done. So do the players, so there you are.

"We don't want any person to think that we are squealing," said Coach McKeon, "but you can say for us that Oscar Bernhardt will never referee a hockey game in Hamilton as long as any of the present officials have anything to do with the game here. We want Bobby Hewitson for Friday night's game. Of course, some may think we are blaming Bernhardt for our defeat, but we are not. He was away off, but in the matter of handing out penalties he was just as bad to the Peterborough club as to us. Both teams suffered.

"Our chief complaint against him however, was his failure to over rule two decisions by the Peterborough goal judge on shots that didn't get past Sloan. We had the goal judge removed, but Bernhardt refused to change the decision of the men we replaced, claiming that he hadn't seen the shots that caused the trouble. Two of their goals came in that way and should not have been allowed.

"In the first period the score should have ended 1—1. Their second counter came ten seconds after the period was over, but the gong could not be rung, and I was forced to run out on the ice to stop play."

It looked in the opening period as if the Peterborough septet would be easy picking. The Hams rained shots on LeGros in the 247th nets like shells from a British gun, and while he stopped all but one, it appeared to be only a matter of time before he wilted before the attack. In the opinion of Coach McKeon, Hamilton sent at least 25 dead-on shots at him in the first twenty minutes, and when the red-shirts hiked to their dressing room after the period they felt confident that they would win by quite a margin.

But in the second period the Petes came to life. They scored four times and ran their lead up to 6 to 1. This period was all in favor of the Petes. It was also in this session that they were the recipients of the gift goals by the goal judge who was later "canned" from the scene.

Hamilton again had a big portion of the play in the final period, but could not score more than twice. The Petes added three.

"Peterborough has a strong team and while we hope to defeat them by enough goals to win on the round they'll take some beating," spoke up Manager Frank Wright. "They have a defence that is the best we have been up against all year, and it was their strength in that department that saved them. LeGros in the nets, playing his best game of the year, was also a big obstacle to overcome."

The Hams came out of the game pretty well battered up but they will all be in Friday night's game. Grant McEwen was injured most. He got a rap on the head in the second period and was forced to retire. Flanagan, the defence player, who did the walloping in this case, got only two minutes on the fence. Billy Boyd, Harry Reid, Coir, and, in fact, all the others bear some mark of the struggle. Most of the boys are sporting injured wrists, a favorite pastime of the Petes being to hit the invaders over the wrists with their sticks. This is a most effective way of checking.

It is realized that Hamilton must beat the 247th defence if they hope to overcome the six goal lead and enter the final round with Kitchener. This is the Petes' strongest department, and even the H.H.C.'s combination play failed to affect Halpin and Flanagan. Both are small men, but they certainly know how to play their positions.

BONSPIEL SCORES

The curlers are taking unusual interest in the local bonspiel. At the rink last night every ice was occupied and the spectators' gallery was fully occupied by old curlers and others interested in the game. The criticisms that were heard about what shot a skip should have played or how he failed to take the ice was amusing. Pete Lang came back last night and banished his losing streak by defeating Skip Dela Fosse. Bob Sturgeon could not get rid of the "seven" jinx and failed to defeat Skip Greer by one shot. The contest between Dr. Wightman and Tom Brightman was very close at all stages. Skip McDermid fell before the Trent Valley skip, Alex. Kay, who had the benefit of all the play.

The contests tonight will be keener than ever. The ice is in grand shape for good curling.

The rinks and scores last night were:—

RUNNER WAS TOO FAST

Passing "Piano Mover on Bases Was Fatal

"Speed is a handicap in baseball sometimes," remarked Arthur Irwin, lapsing into a reminiscent mood. And then he recounted the famous "boner" in which Harry Niles figured as the nanny. It happened a number of years ago when Niles, a fleet-footed person, and Danzig, a "piano-mover" on the bases, both were on the Red Sox roster, with the team battling against the Senators. Danzig was on first base when Niles came to bat. He promptly poled a terrific drive to centre, and like a madman raced around to third base, beating the throw by ten feet. Imagine Niles' amazement when, upon arising to his tootsies, the umpire said to him: "You're out!" "Out? Out?" he shrieked. "Whatcha mean, out? I was safe by a mile, you horse thief." "Oh, I'm not disputing the fact that you beat the throw, little one," returned the umpire sweetly, "but rules is rules and so you're out. The rules specifically state that one runner cannot pass another in circling the bases. And, my dear sir, if you'll take a look over there at second you'll see Mr. Danzig, whom you passed en route to this bag. So you're out. Git!"

Many Save, But Few Clear

Many are the goaltenders who can save well, but few the ones who can clear the puck fast. The few are the ones who are making the big money and getting the fame.

You'll find many a man who says he has stopped Newsy Lalonde; the trouble is that they don't stop him enough, and that goes for any old sport. It is the repeater that counts.

Don't tell all you know. Keep a little for seed.

"Ah, I see! They are the kind that lay the dear little China nest eggs."

BOY SCOUTS AT THE FRONT

"AND see there!" exclaimed the Duke of Connaught, as he suddenly hurried across to the window, pulled aside the curtain, and pointed out into the street; "there goes one of them, on the job, now."

The Duke of Connaught, in his London home, was speaking to Mr. H. G. Hammond, Assistant Commissioner of the Boy Scouts' Association of Canada, who recently arrived in England. He had called to pay his respects to the ex-Chief Scout of the Dominion. Naturally the topic of conversation had been of Boy Scouts, a subject dear to the hearts of both. While they were discussing Mr. Hammond's trip the quick eye of the former Governor-General had detected a Boy Scout passing in front of the house.

That Boy Scout—if he only knew it—might be proud of the fact that the uncle of the King pulled back the curtains of the window and bent a wholly appreciative eye on the passing representative of an organization thousands of whose elder members are taking part in the war.

Mr. Hammond related this incident to a correspondent who interviewed him later. He was awaiting receipt of his official permit before going to France to see old members of the Boy Scouts in khaki at the front. "That is the outstanding feature of my visit," said he.

Five years ago, on the occasion of the Coronation, Mr. Hammond took to London 140 Boy Scouts, 72 coming from Ontario, and the rest from other parts of the Dominion. The boys returned to their homes safe and sound, and to-day the big majority of them are in khaki. Mr. Hammond's connection with the Boy Scouts' Association dates from 1909, the year before Major-General Sir Robert Baden-Powell went to Canada on the tour which made the Boy Scouts famous.

"The main object of my trip," said Mr Hammond, in reply to a question on the subject, "is that as so many of our fellows are in Britain and France we thought we owed it to them to send over and give them a kind of 'pat on the back.' No doubt, too, they would also be pleased to get messages from home, and another pleasure will be the opportunity I shall have of taking personal messages from the boys to their parents in Canada."

Mr. Hammond has already visited the Canadian camps in Sussex and Bramshott, where, respectively, Brig.-Gen. MacDougall, Lieut.-Col. Ashton and Brig.-Gen. Meighen have given him every assistance, and have already made arrangements to compile a roster of all ex-Boy Scouts, so that on Mr. Hammond's return to England from France a big rally of ex-Boy Scouts now in khaki will take place at each of the camps, with, it is hoped and expected, Major-General Sir Robert Baden-Powell present.

"We are all very proud of the record of the Boy Scouts' Association in the war," said Mr. Hammond. "They have shown up remarkably well. While I am, perhaps, most deeply interested in the movement in Ontario," he admitted, "my jurisdiction is to represent Canada as a whole at this critical time."

Speaking of his impressions in England, Mr. Hammond considered that one of the finest things being done is the work—hardly can it be termed work, for rather it is a great pleasure—carried out by the many Canadians in London of over military age who go round looking after the welfare of "the boys" who, released temporarily from the discipline of the front, are spending leave in London. He was struck by the complete clublike aspect of all the homes open for the comfort and convenience of these visitors.

The cheery patients and the splendid management at the Ontario Government Hospital at Orpington, in Kent, was another matter which most favorably impressed him, as also did the work carried out at the Canadian Red Cross offices, in Cockspur street, under the chief direction of Colonel Hodgetts and Lady Drummond.

GARDEN OF EDEN

Original Homestead Not Now a Veritable Paradise.

A journalist with the Mesopotamian expedition writes: It is the oldest country in the world, but you will find little or nothing that is old in it within 350 miles of the sea. Five of us, a padre, a doctor, a regimental officer, a supply and transport man, and myself, ought to know, for we were moored to the Tree of Knowledge of Good and Evil for the greater part of a week. Kurna, the reputed Paradise, lies at the junction of the Tigris and the old channel of the Euphrates. The palm tree and the fig leaf were the only paradisaical things we found in Eden. Even the serpent was invisible, though his works remain and the knowledge of evil thrives preposterously. Man is still chastised in this spot, and we had reason to be thankful that the longest day was followed by the shortest night. Our pyjamas began to sweat before we put them on. They were wet not with dew, but with the perspiration of the night, the exudations of the palm groves.

At five the sun came licking over the horizon again to recharge the atmosphere that had lost nothing of its retained heat during the night. Any movement of the air is restorative. We would have given days of our life, lumps of our pay, for one long bubbly iced drink. Temptation for the Arabs takes the form of tinned pineapple, Aden cigarettes, canned salmon, and the like, which repeat the unhealthy process of sophistication that was so disastrous to our first parents.

It is better to fight in a climate like this than to moralise or think. The men who evicted the Turks from the Sumerian Paradise have happier recollections of it than the draft fresh from home who passed through on the longest day of the year and left their toil behind. "——!" as the profane trooper said, "it would take no bloomin' swords to turn me out of this."

A snap clothespin has untold possibilities, if kept near the kitchen stove. It may be used to lift hot kettle lids, pull sauce pans from fire and will assist, without burned fingers, in turning pies and cakes in oven.

SOCIAL AND PERSONAL

STRICKLAND—HILL.

A very pretty wedding took place this afternoon at the residence of Capt. W. H. and Mrs. Hill, Brock Street, when their daughter, Aimee Agnes Hill, became the bride of Lieut. James Fordyce Strickland, of the 247th Batt. The ceremony was performed by Rev. Robert Pogue in the presence of the immediate friends of both families.

The beautiful drawing room was prettily decorated with daffodils, palms and ferns, and the marriage service was performed under the arch of the room. The bride, who was unattended, looked very charming in an Alice blue gabardine suit of Parisian pattern, with maize blouse, having touches of Alice blue, tulle hat and grey shoes, stockings and gloves. She carried a corsage bouquet of sunburst roses and violets. Miss G. Hill, sister of the bride, played the wedding march.

After the ceremony the guests sat down to a wedding breakfast which was served in the dining room, which had been beautifully decorated with national emblems and red roses.

The groom's gift to the bride was a beautiful platinum pendant studded with diamonds, which, with a diamond brooch from the bride's grandmother, were the only jewels worn by the bride.

Lieut. and Mrs. Strickland left on the C.P.R. express for a honeymoon trip to points west, carrying with them the best wishes from a host of friends.

MR.COWAN SPOKE ON SINGLE TAX

Mr H. B. Cowan of this city spoke on his favorite theme, the taxation of land values as a means of raising a revenue in lieu of that lost by the removal of customs taxes, at the meeting of the United Farmers in Toronto. "Some fear," he said, "that the taxation of land values would bear heavily on farmers because they have so much land. They forget to discriminate between 'land' and 'land values.' One acre at the corner of King and Yonge is worth as much as all the farm land in Dundas county, and should, therefore, pay as much in taxes."

When the bill now before the Legislature to amend the law now governing co-operative associations was brought to the attention of the convention, Mr. Cowan expressed the opinion that the real motive behind the bill is found in the desire of the Retail Merchants' Association and like organizations to destroy farmers' co-operative organizations.

Holland and Scandinavia Cut Exports to Germany.

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

LONDON, March 1. — Lord Robert Cecil told the Commons today that the Government has reason to believe there is a serious shortage of foodstuffs and certain very important materials in enemy countries. For some months past no substantial quantities of goods imported into Holland and Scandinavia had gone through to Germany. Recently, as a result of negotiations with these countries, exports of their produce to Germany had been considerably diminished.

There are a number of Peterborough boys in this battalion and this is an excellent chance for any young man to go into real service at once.

GOMMECOURT HELD

Yesterday the village of Gommecourt was occupied by the British, who pushed on for more than half a mile to the north-east of the village toward the high ridge overlooking Les Essart. North-east of Serre the Gommecourt salient is still further blunted by the occupation of Puisieux and the adjoining enemy trenches.

"HELLO" GIRL FALLS HEIR TO LARGE FORTUNE

AYLMER, Ont., March 1—To be working in an office in the city for a small daily wage and to be suddenly confronted with the knowledge that she is the possessor of a fortune amounting to anything from $11,000,000 to $17,000,000 is the happy lot of a young Aylmer woman.

The young lady in question, Miss Albina Cormier, who is employed with the Bell Telephone Company, has been notified that, by the death of an aunt who is unknown to her, she has inherited a share in a number of mines and lands in the Quebec district which are valued at $70,000,000.

The property was originally owned by an uncle of Miss Cormier's who, when he died twenty years ago, willed it to Sister Joseph, a Grey Nun, who is also an aunt of Miss Cormier. The latter, as a girl, was a great favorite of Sister Joseph and when the aunt died five years ago she willed the property to Miss Cormier and two nephews of the dead uncle, with instructions that the will was not to be probated until six years after her death.

This period having elapsed, Miss Cormier has now been told of her good fortune, a fortune which it is stated will be in the neighborhood of $17,000,000.

How Suffrage Now Stands in Canada

The five provinces in Canada wherein women are now enfranchised Manitoba, Saskatchewan, Alberta, British Columbia and Ontario have some slight differences in their measure of enfranchisement. The Dominion election act provides that in all Provinces save Alberta and Saskatchewan those "persons" holding the Provincial franchise shall have the privilege of the Federal franchise also. In the provinces excepted the section reads "male persons" instead of "persons," so that the women who now are entitled to the Provincial ballot in Alberta and Saskatchewan can not vote in Dominion elections until a further bill is passed.

The measure of enfranchisement granted to the women of the four western provinces includes eligibility for sitting in the legislature. Whether this will or will not be the case in Ontario depends upon the passage of the bill.

ADD CAPTURES ON TIGRIS RIVER

TURKS HAVE RETREATED MORE THAN FIFTY MILES

Since February 23rd Captured Turks Number 4,300 --- Many Guns and Vessels in Possession of British.

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

LONDON, March 2.—Turks are continuing their retreat before the victorious British on the Tigris front. The official announcement made here today says the retreating Turks, Tuesday evening, passed Aziziyah, 52 miles north of Kut-el-Amara.

More than seven thousand prisoners have been taken since December.

The official Press Bureau statement says: Wednesday's report of the officer commanding in Mesopotamia gives the following: The pursuit of the retreating enemy still continues, and Turns in great confusion passed through Aziziyah on the evening of Tuesday.

The clearing of the battlefield is being systematically carried out, but as fresh booty is being brought in from hour to hour, it will be some days before a complete list of our captures can be completed.

Since February 23rd the approximate figures are:

Prisoners: 4,300, making a total of over 7,000 since the beginning of operations last December.

Guns, 28: trench mortars 19, machine guns 11.

H.M.S. Firefly recaptured, Turkish ships 3, tugs 2, barges 10, and pontoons 30.

FIELD POSTS ANNIHILATED

BY RUSSIAN SCOUTS, WHO ALSO MAKE SOME CAPTURES.

ROUMANIANS WITHDRAW.

PETROGRAD, March 2. — A Russian official statement today reads: Western Front — Scouting reconnaisances and reciprocal firing is proceeding.

Roumanian Front — In the region north of Jacobeni-Kimpolung, high road fighting continues. Germans counter-attacked against Roumanian detachments who had occupied a height near the village of Rekoza north of the River Seaval, and obliged them to withdraw.

North of the River Rionik our scouts annihilated enemy field posts capturing twenty-three prisoners and two machine guns.

Missouri Next "Dry"?

BRITISH ARE SATISFIED WITH NICKEL AGREEMENT

American Company Offered to Turn Over Control of Output to Ontario When War Started.

The most dramatic moment the Legislature has known since nickel became a provincial issue occurred just before midnight. Leaning across his desk, his voice ringing with feeling, Hon. T. W. McGarry challenged Hartley Dewart, K.C., to declare whether, if he was presented with a copy of a confidential cablegram from a British Minister declaring that the British Government was satisfied with the arrangements for the handling of nickel, he would accept that as evidence and cease the tirade that had been in progress for nearly an hour.

Mr. Dewart tried to evade an answer, and Mr. McGarry repeated his challenge. The nickel champion, cornered, finally said that he would "have to see all the correspondence." The Conservative members roared their derision. A moment later Hon. I. B. Lucas rose and made the most unexpected announcement in connection with the controversy that has come to light to date.

"Will my honorable friend cease this tirade of his against the International Nickel Company if I tell him that immediately after the outbreak of war the International Nickel Co., through its president, who visited Ottawa, offered to turn over to the Dominion Government the sole control of the nickel output of their concern. That was one week after the outbreak of the war. Then a proper arrangement was made, and is still working out, and the British Government says it is entirely satisfied."

The Temperance Issue

R. H. McElroy, of Carleton, took issue with the claim made by the Opposition speakers that the Ontario Temperance Act was the result of Mr. Rowell's advocacy of radical temperance legislation. "It was the local option legislation of Sir James Whitney that laid the foundation firm and sure for prohibition as we have it today," said Mr. McElroy.

PTE. GEORGE W. McNAUGHTON MEETS DEATH

WIDOW RECEIVED LETTER FROM HIM WEDNESDAY OF THIS WEEK.

PTE. METHERAL DIES.

SUCCUMBS TO PNEUMONIA WHEN EN ROUTE OVERSEAS.

Pte. George Wellington McNaughton, who went to England with the 93rd Battalion and after reaching France took up ambulance work, was killed in action on Feb. 12. His widow, Mrs. Ethel G. McNaughton, and three children live at 181 Murray Street. Three sisters are Mrs. Gray, 616 Union Street, Mrs. Thos. Beattie, Bridgenorth, and Mrs. Josiah Bullock, Young's Point, where his father also lives, and where Pte. McNaughton was born.

Mrs. McNaughton received a letter from her husband on Wednesday in which he stated he was engaged in first aid work. It is quite probable he met his death in bringing in the wounded.

Pte. McNaughton was a member of Adjt. McElhiney's Bible Class at the Temple, and he was employed as delivery driver for J. T. Braund. He was 27 years old.

Mr. Jas. H. Metheral received a telegram this morning notifying him that his brother, Pte. Wm. D. Metheral, had succumbed to an attack of pneumonia at some point in Nova Scotia. He was en route overseas, having enlisted at Ottawa, where he had lived for twelve years. He is survived by his widow at Ottawa.

The remains will be brought to Peterborough for interment, the funeral arrangements to be announced later.

Yesterday afternoon Lt.-Col. Ackerman and his officers held a conference and discussed the recruiting situation from every possible angle. It was decided to add to and re-organise the recruiting centres. Lieut. Hayes and Sergt.-Major Douglas will go to Bancroft, Lieut. Shaw, one non-commissioned officer and two men will open an office in Ottawa, and Lieut. Latimer, with one non-commissioned officer and one man, will try for results at Westwood, Roseneath, Warkworth and Hastings.

Two recruits were added to the strength of the batt. yesterday, and both men were sent in by Sergt Jones from Buckhorn. They were Ptes. John Ireland and Leslie Hall. Several more men from that district will be down to enlist next week.

Capt. Thomson, the battalion paymaster, is very busy with his reports for the last month

Quite a few of the men were given leave of absence and acompanied the hockey team to Hamilton.

FOR MEDICAL ATTENDANCE

DR. KING FAILED TO RECOVER FROW SMITH TOWNSHIP.

Early in 1916 J. Fredenburg was sent to the Nicholls Hospital as an indigent patient by the officials of the township of Smith, and they paid the hospital bill when it was presented. Dr. D. C. King paid daily visits to the patient, and presented a bill to the township for $31, which the reeve and council refused to recognize responsibility for.

This morning the doctor sued the township in the Division Court for the amount of his bill, seeking to show the township's liability for the bill by reason of their paying the hospital fees.

Judge Huycke dismissed the claim holding the township was not liable for physician's fees contracted by indigent patients. At the same time he expressed the opinion that some protection should be given the doctors in such cases.

Joseph Wearing appeared for the plaintiff and F. D. Kerr of Peck Kerr and McElderry for the township.

BRITISH GATHER FRUITS OF THE WINTER'S OPERATIONS

Have Established Salient From Arras to the Ancre, Decidedly Dangerous to German Position.

Not a Retirement to Force Open Fighting.

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

LONDON, March 2. — Interviewed by the Associated Press, Gen. Maurice, director of military operations for the Imperial General Staff, said the war may extend over another winter, as far as the hurry of military factors are concerned. He saw no indications that the Germans were withdrawing along the Ancre because of a desire to force open fighting. "Retirement was forced upon them," he said. "They do not like it any more than we did when, after the second battle of Ypres, we had to retire a short distance to strengthen our lines. It is certain the Germans will make determined efforts somewhere to restore the lost prestige. We are now merely gathering the fruits of our winter operations the result of which is that from Arras to the Ancre, a salient decidedly dangerous to the German position has been established."

ENLISTMENT IN GERMANY WILL BE FORCED SOON

VOLUNTEERS FOR "HOME ARMY" ARE NOT SUFFICIENT.

COPENHAGEN, March 2—According to the German papers the compulsory mobilisation of Germany's "home army" is imminent. The appeal for volunteers, though answered by large numbers, has not produced enough workers to satisfy the actual requirements. Large numbers of men are needed at once to replace those employed behind the front, to work in munition factories which are now being completed and for the all-important farm work. The papers say that the Government is prepared for the compulsory enrolment in the early days of March of all persons between 17 and 60, so that the recruits can be put to work at once.

ENEMY RAIDS ARE FAILURE

FRENCH ENTER A GERMAN TRENCH AND TAKE PRISONERS.

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

PARIS, March 2. — Two German raids occurring simultaneously last night on the front west of Soissons were broken up by French fire with losses to the Germans, the war office announced today.

A German trench near Vauquois in the Argonne was raided and prisoners taken.

Kaiser Suffers Spring Complaint

CHILLS COMPEL HIM TO REMAIN INDOORS.

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

LONDON, March 2. — An Exchange Telegraph despatch from Amsterdam says the German Emperor is suffering from severe chills and is compelled to remain indoors.

"NINETY THREE" NEED NOT WORRY

NO COMPULSION WILL BE USED TO GET THEM TO ENLIST.

Several citizens have complained to The Review that the Government seems disposed to break faith with the people in regard to recruiting. Some time ago Director-General Bennett made a public statement to the effect that no military use would be made of the National Service cards the people were asked to fill up. Major Campbell at the recruiting meeting the other night stated that 93 names of men between 18 and 30, obtained through these cards, had been mailed to Lt.-Col Ackerman, and that pressure would be brought to bear upon them to get them into the service.

Lt.-Col. Ackerman says that he has received these names but that no special instructions were sent with them. He has no intention of acting upon them any differently than he has already done and he told Major Campbell as much after the meeting the other night. It is hardly fare to ask a recruiting officer to assume a responsibility that the Government is disposed to pass up or use him as an instrument in breaking a pledge which the Administration gave to the people.

The 93 names referred to were already in the possession of the local recruiting officers. An examination reveals the fact that the majority of them are those of men physically unfit or who have some other valid reason for not enlisting. The cases of these men have already ben passed upon.

The names of the real shirkers do not appear on the list that has been forwarded to Lt.-Col. Ackerman. Further investigation will, beyond a doubt reveal the fact that men who have no excuse for doding their duty failed to fill up the cards, or if they did, supplied misleading information, even to the extent of giving fictitious names and addresses.

Any popular feeling that may have been created to the effect that the Government is likely to break its pledge to the public is groundless. No one need fear that any undue advantage will be taken of information which he has volunteered. The voluntary system is still in force.

AWARDED $1000 FROM ESTATE OF MRS. A. F. HOOVER

MARTIN HOOVER, BROTHER IN LAW, SUBSTANTIATES HIS CLAIM.

When Mrs. A. F. Hoover died about two years ago the Trust and Guarantee Co. of Toronto were appointed executors under the will. Among the creditors of the estate was Martin Hoover, a brother-in-law of the deceased, who claimed $1,000. The amount being a very large one, the executors had the matter referred to Judge Huycke to take evidence and establish the claim.

The particulars substaniating the claim were heard yesterday and this morning Judge Huycke made an order directing that the account be paid and the costs of all parties be paid out of the estate.

Basil D. Hall for the plaintiff Martin Hoover, Joseph Wearing for the Trust and Guarantee Co., and O. A. Langley for the inspector of asylums, to whom the residue of the estate was left in trust.

ROYAL COMMISSION REPORTS ON RESOURCES OF CANADA.

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

LONDON, March 2. — The Dominion's royal commission, on which Canada is represented by Sir George Foster, and which has been examining into the resources of the Empire for over four years, submitted a final report today and with it the fifth interim report, which covers Canada. In the opinion of the commission, "it is vital that the Empire should, as far as possible, be placed in a position which would enable it to resist any pressure which a foreign power or group of powers could exercise by control of raw materials and commodities essential for the well-being of the Empire."

The commission finds it regrettable that Canada's mineral assets should be owned largely outside the Empire and adds that the Provincial Governments' income from taxation on the mines is much too small.

Canada, with hundreds of millions of acres of forest lands produced only as much timber as Germany with only 24 million acres, the commission points out. The report goes extensively into the question of the steamship, mail and telegraphic communication, especially the distribution of news service in Canada, and advocates adopting a metric system in coinage, weights and measures for the Empire.

BERLIN, March 2.—The Admiralty announced that March 1st expired the final period of grace for sailing ships in the Atlantic. From this date no special warning will be given any boats by submarines.

TO IMPROVE PASSENGER SERVICES

MAYOR KYLIE AND MR. W. FLAVELLE, OF LINDSAY, CONFER WITH MAYOR DUFFUS.

Now that the freight congestion is righting itself Mayor Duffus has taken steps to see if the railway service to the city cannot be restored to its former condition. Major Kylie of Lindsay, accompanied by Mr. W. Flavelle, was in the city today and they are anxious to co-operate with Peterborough in any steps that will result in an improved passenger service on both railways.

What will benefit Peterborough will certainly benefit Lindsay and other adjoining municipalities. Both railways will be appealed to at once in this respect.

Firm of Napanee Take Premises on Simcoe St.

Another substantial industry will be added to Peterborough on the 1st of April. H. D. Simmons, of Napanee, fur dealer and manufacturer for the wholesale trade exclusively, is moving his business from Napanee to this city and will operate in premises over the former offices of the Otonabee Power Co. and Kenny's liquor store on Simcoe street.

Mr. Simmons and his two sons conduct the business. They have taken a residence at 782 Water street.

They will employ male and female help in the manufacture of fur goods. They have outgrown Napanee, and this is one of the reasons for coming to Peterborough.

REALTY MARKET.

The situation in realty at the present time shows improvement over the same period last year, a real estate man told The Review this morning. The outlook is very favorable. People are moving into the city and there is a good demand for houses.

A GIFT FROM MR. McWILLIAMS

MANITOBA STATUTES FOR LAW ASSOCIATION.

Through the kindness and thoughtfulness of Mr. R. F. McWilliams, barrister, of Winnipeg, and formerly of Petergorough, the Peterborough Law Association has received a complete set of the Consolidated Statutes of Manitoba and the subsequent annual volumes down to date. The members of the legal profession in Peterborough warmly appreciate Mr. McWilliams' thoughtfulnes in donating to the association a copy of the Manitoba Statutes to replace those that were destroyed in the recent fire at the Court House.

ALBANY, March 2. — Governor Whitman has directed that the boxing match scheduled for Monday night at Madison Square Garden between Les Darcy and Jack Dillon be cancelled because Darcy is a "quitter."

WHERE EDUCATION IS LACKING.

OF ALL THE CITIZENS who have taken an active part in recruiting, none has given the subject more careful study than has Mr. J. A. Aylmer, president of the Speakers' Patriotic League. No man takes a saner or more charitable view of the situation, judging with mercy the young men who close their ears to all these fervid appeals for national defenders.

Mr. Aylmer expressed his opinions clearly at the meeting at the Armories on Wednesday night. The young men have not been educated in patriotism. They have no idea of their responsibilities as citizens or of the nature of the duty which devolves upon Canadians in the present crisis. One way to correct this deficiency in the education of the young men would be to force them into uniform. There is, Mr. Aylmer believes, nothing so effective in teaching patriotism as a tour of military duty.

All must admit that there is wisdom in Mr. Aylmer's assertion. Canada lacks most of all individuality as a nation. Its people have been too long taught to believe that they were a part of the greatest empire on earth, and, as such, had nothing to fear. The Mother Country that had nurtured them in the past could be depended upon to shield them from any danger. Not only in Quebec, but in Ontario there still exists a wonder that Canada should be called upon to take part in a war in Europe. Like spoiled children, they cling still to the mother's skirts, or, like frightened chickens, rush for shelter under the parent wing.

Approach any gray-haired veteran in this city and ask him his nationality. Even though he was born here he will in nine cases out of ten answer that he is a Scotsman, an Irishman or an Englishman, as the case may be. His ancestral history is his chief pride. The fact that he was born in Canada is too often regarded as a mere incident, which, if it is his misfortune, is certainly not his fault.

Why should not Canadian citizenship be made a matter of pride rather than European descent? This tendency to cling to the latter as a family heirloom runs through generation after generation, even as other failings are transmitted from one branch of the family tree to another. Flag-waving politicians are as much to blame for this condition as anyone else. Patriotism may often be made a cloak for evil; the flag used to cover up deeds of darkness.

Canada is a full-grown nation. The Motherland years ago came to the conclusion that her western offspring was well able to walk alone, and established her in her own home. The word "nationalism" has been appropriated and defiled by a clique of misguided malcontents. With its higher meaning preserved inviolate it should be the watchword of Canada. As it is, the only term left to apply to the condition which Mr. Aylmer would accomplish by a new form of education is "nationality."

MR. COWAN ON SINGLE TAX.

THE UNITED FARMERS of Canada, the Dominion Parliament of agriculturalists, are in session in Toronto, and the opportunity returns for professional lecturers to drop in upon them and endeavor to breed discontent among them by representations to the effect that they are the most abused and down-trodden class in the world. This style of alarmist has, however, fortunately seen his best days. Farmers of the present are fully competent to do their own thinking and form their own conclusions. They are no longer swayed by the politician who disguises himself in an academic gown and poses as an instructor, whereas his real object is to plant tares in the farmer's mental wheatfield.

Mr. H. B. Cowan of this city addressed the farmers in Toronto. His subject was single tax or the taxation of land values, as the matter is indifferently called, and it is almost unnecessary to add that the entire argument was based on that old free trade fallacy. To raise revenue in lieu of that lost by the removal of customs taxes, Mr. Cowan would place the whole tax burden on land values. "Some fear," he is quoted as saying, "that the taxation of land values would bear heavily on farmers, because they have so much land. They forget to discriminate between 'land' and 'land values.' One acre at the corner of King and Yonge streets is worth as much as all the farm land in Dundas county, and should, therefore, pay as much in taxes."

Why did Mr. Cowan, in order to point his argument, find it necessary to jump from Toronto clear across the province and settle upon a county in which farm land values are not so high as nearer home? Suppose the customs duties were removed and the public revenues were raised by the taxation of land values. The farmer would then get his farm machinery among other articles duty free. Admit for the sake of argument and without prejudice that the tariff increases the cost of an article subject to it, and even then how will Mr. Cowan's proposed panacea avail anything? One set of machinery used on a hundred-acre farm will with ordinary care last a farmer a lifetime. He pays the duty on a binder once in twenty years, let us say. In the meantime, his taxes are higher year by year. If he needs a binder only once in a generation, the country must have revenue every year.

There is a bill before the Legislature providing for official recognition of co-operative associations, a measure specially designed for the benefit of farmers' societies. It will, if passed, place them on the same footing as other associations of trades organized for mutual protection.

Even with regard to this matter Mr. Cowan suspects that an Ethiopian is concealed behind the fence waiting for a chance to work the agriculturalists a mischief. He told the farmers assembled at Toronto that the real motive behind the bill is found in the desire of the Retail Merchants' Association to destroy farmers' co-operative organizations.

Upon what authority does Mr. Cowan base his rather startling assertion and by what process of reasoning does he reach such a conclusion? The merchants of Canada are not so blinded to their own interests as to fail to see that anything which tends to increase the prosperity of the farmer cannot fail to work to the advantage of the city dealer.

GETTING AFTER THE FARMERS.

THE LIBERAL newspapers, local and otherwise, that posed as the friends of the farmers in 1911, have changed their policy. Six years ago they were all for wider markets for the producers of the country. Now they would restrict the opportunities of the farmers to realize on what he has to sell by denying him the right to export anything in the shape of foodstuffs.

What have the farmers of Peterborough County to hope for from the press and the party that would confiscate their possessions and set their own price? Who has ever heard of a Grit newspaper taking up the reverse of the proposition and advocating government control of the prices of anything that the farmer is compelled to buy?

The farmers of Canada have as good a right to speculate as any other class in the community. If holding on to supplies is a sin, it should be so regarded, no matter by whom it is practised. One particular class should not be singled out as the subjects of legislation. There are, for example, large quantities of potatoes stored in Ennismore township or in other parts of the county, and these supplies are being held until the warm weather sets in and the time for the sale of seed arrives. The owners of these supplies should take note of the agitation kept up by the party press to compel them to put their goods on the market at once and to limit that market at the same time.

Last fall potatoes were selling at $1.90 a bag. The public were warned that as soon as the cold weather set in the price would go up for two reasons. Local farmers would be unable to handle the potatoes stored in pits. Cars used to bring potatoes in from the West or the Maritime Provinces would have to be heated, and this would add to the cost.

Some residents of Peterborough had the foresight to stock up while the price was something like normal. Others well able to do so failed to avail themselves of the opportunity, and regret their failure to this day.

Sometimes the farmer with a turn for speculation falls down in his enterprise, just as do men in other lines. A story comes from a neighboring town to the effect that an agriculturalist contracted to buy a Ford car and pay for it by the future delivery of potatoes. At the then price of the tubers the cost of the car was according to schedule. Potatoes have since increased in value, and, as the farmer figures up the transaction now, he finds that the automobile will cost him something like $3400.

SOUP KITCHEN POLITICS.

FOOD IS SCARCE beyond a doubt, and it is just as indisputable that prices are higher than they have ever been. The reason is not hard to locate. Two unfavorable seasons cut down the average production. Besides, there are over forty million men in Europe who have been taken out of the ranks of the producers and converted into consumers of more than normal capacity. They must be fed, and the very nature of their present occupation demands special and liberal provision.

The present situation is one for which no government and no fiscal policy is responsible. Human agency cannot be expected to control the acts of Omnipotence. Yet the Grit party, that hunger rather for the sweets of office than for their daily bread, or even potatoes, call upon the Government to do something.

What could any government do short of confiscating all the supplies in sight, and even then it would be necessary to compensate the owners in accordance with the market prices that prevail throughout the world. The people in a beleaguered city bear patiently with the pangs of hunger rather than let the enemy in the trenches outside gather any intimation that they are in want. This country is at war, and yet the Grit press works its way through the roof and, perched on the housetop, yells to the world that the people below are threatened with famine and that the Government will do nothing to avert the impending disaster.

The same Grit press eagerly seizes on any such reports that filter through the censorship and reach us from Germany, hailing it as an evidence that the people in that country are in want and the war must soon collapse. What aid and comfort must the stories of blue ruin in Canada be to the enemies of the Empire?

But anything for power. The party in opposition welcome everything that promises disaster as a blessing sent upon themselves. To them no more cheering object could present itself than a municipal soup kitchen, because through such portals they hope to walk into office.

NEW LIBERAL BATTLE CRY SIGN OF OPPOSITION DESPAIR

The Toronto Star and certain other Liberal organs are carrying on a loud agitation for a National Government. The position adopted by these belligerent party papers, after more than two years of ceaseless shouting for a return to Laurier rule in Canada, involves an amusing confession of Liberal weakness, demonstrated as such.

When war broke out, a shout went up from these Opposition organs for a coalition Government. The only solution of the great problems facing the country, they said, was to dilute the national leadership with the sanity, business acumen and war fervor of Liberal politicians.

Subsequently, they grew bolder. They called for a general election to replace the incompetents at Ottawa with Laurier and his following. They cried "scandal" and "outrage."

Then came enlightening events. The much-exploited nickel scandal was exploded. The shell committee charges petered out. Furthermore, the Dorchester election revelations and Opposition wrangling during a session of Parliament exposed the weakness, the impossibility of Laurier and his following.

So now the demand for a National Government goes up from the Liberal press because it realizes the futility of calling for a return to power of Sir Wilfrid Laurier.

Trust Boosting

The cry of the Star and other Liberal organs for a National Government of trust magnates must be very painful to those Liberals whose habit is to lie awake at night thinking up new ways of getting after the "big interests." For the trust-busting record of the Liberal party is an astonishing one.

Hon. W. L. Mackenzie King, former Minister of Labor in the Laurier Cabinet, is the man who gets credit for starting the Liberal party on the trail of the trusts. Mr. King, a young man of energy and zeal, used to make many stirring speeches in Parliament and elsewhere, aiming the shafts of outraged democracy at "big business." He also fathered legislation to make trusts impossible in the country. So fierce and famous a trust fighter did Mr. King become that John D. Rockefeller, alarmed and unable to sleep, sent for him to come over and join the fight for the larger democracy under the auspices of Standard Oil money and prestige. Realizing that he would get more information for the Liberal party's fight if he viewed the trust proposition on the inside as well as the outside, Mr. King remained true to his Liberal training by grasping the bigger opportunity to help the cause. He departed at once for the nearest Standard Oil strike.

So, except for occasional visits to Canada to attend Liberal rallies and keep the party informed as to scientific trust-busting, Mr. King has spent his time with the Rockefellers. Whether the new idea of a Canadian National Government by trust magnates, so enthusiastically supported by the Liberal press, is inspired by Mr. King or solely by party exigencies, we do not know. But it seems quite possible that observations by Mr. King on the smooth working of the Standard Oil Company have convinced him that Canada also needs "big men" in the saddle and that he has prevailed upon the party with which he has never lost touch to boom the unique idea.

EDITOR'S MAIL

Editor Review: Being a ratepayer of our city and a daily reader of your paper, I have been watching the interest taken by the Mayor and the gatherings held to boost our city. One of the men touched the dog nuisance and I certainly think struck the nail squarely on the head.

I am a lover of a good dog myself, either as farmer's help or butcher's attendant, and in a place where watchfulness is needed, but I have no use for the bunch that run our streets in groups of from two to one dozen, with nothing else to do but bark at autos and rigs for a length of two or three blocks, and scatter litter out of garbage boxes and cans all over the sidewalks.

I saw one of the collectors yesterday gather up a lot and I suppose if he had gone on and left it he would have been reported. I could give you an instance where a lady of our city was thrown down on the walk through a dog fight and suffered for two years and died from the effects of her injury.

I hope this matter will amount to something more than talk. I do not deem it necessary to sign my name, but it is in the interest of our city to have some steps taken to abate the nuisance.

13 ZERO DAYS IN FEBRUARY

During the month of February we had thirteen zero days. The temperature was down to 20 below zero on three different days, viz., the 2nd 3rd and 12th. The warmest day was the 23rd, 27. There was snow on ten days, and rain on two, giving a total for the month of 1.45.

March of last year entered with 15 degrees below zero, and we had a number of severe storms, that of the 10th being the worst. Spring made its initial appearance on the 25th, and by the end of the month the snow was practically gone, excepting in sheltered places. Robins were around in numbers by the 29th.—W. P.

JAPAN WOULD NOT BE PARTY TO HUN PLOT

GERMANY VERY MUCH MISTAKEN, SAYS JAPANESE AMBASSADOR.

WASHINGTON, March 2—Japanese Ambassador Sato denied any knowledge of the alleged implication of Japan in the reported German Mexican plot, but admitted that the report that Germany had made such an attempt through Mexico was probably true.

"Germany is very much mistaken" he said. "If she thinks that my country would combine with Mexico and herself to make war against the United States. In this I speak authoritatively for my government.

"Germany would not stop at anything, however, in the present state of affairs," added Sato, "which makes report of such a plot very probable."

NEW YORK, March 2.—"Every intelligent observer must have been aware that Germany has been active in every respect to alienate the good feeling between Japan and the United States and transfer the whole burden of the enmity America has come to bear to the shoulders of Japan," declared Dr. T. Iyenaga, editor of the Far East and West News Bureau, and a spokesman in the United States for the Japanese people, when he heard of the charged German plot.

"Are you surprised?" he asked. "Anyone could have read the whole thing between the lines. Japan will not do such a thing—that is the one great obstruction to the fruition of the German plans. Japan could not do it, she would not do it, she has not contemplated doing it.

"Of course the whole scheme of the German agents may be seen to have been to alienate this long standing friendship between Japan and the United States, to conclude a separate peace with Japan and, if possible, Russia, and then to arange a joint attack on the United States whenever she might be in hostilities. That has been going on for some two years or more. I have known for some time that such a movement was in progress.

"I beg that the people of this country may realize that this program has been most assiduously carried on and they will not allow themselves to be tricked by it. Germany will fail in it. I know she will fail."

When fame comes to the average man it roosts upon his monument.

MRS. JARVIS, BOX 286, PENETANG, P.O., ONTARIO, says: "It is a pleasure to write and tell you what Dr. Cassell's Tablets have done for my baby. When only five months old he was taken ill. I had medical advice for him, and was told he had colic, for which he was treated, but he did not get any better, only worse. I tried several special foods, but none of them would stay on his stomach, and he became so thin that he seemed just skin and bone. He only weighed ten pounds. We never thought poor baby would [illegible] but one day I chanced to hear of a baby's case almost like mine, that had been cured by Dr. Cassell's Tablets, so I got some for my baby, and I am thankful I did. After a few doses the nervous jumps he had suffered from stopped, and soon he was almost well. I have given him the Tablets during teething, and find them very soothing. He is a bonny boy now, quite cured, and weighs twenty-five pounds at twelve months old."

Every mother should know that Dr. Cassell's Tablets are just as suitable for children as they are for grown-up people. SUPPLY STATIONS FOR SUBMARINES DISCOVERED AND DESTROYED BY NAVY

Evidence is Plentiful that Navy's Hunt is Successful.

LONDON, March 2.—Britain has sunk and captured a vastly greater number of German submarines since the German submarine war went into effect Feb. 1 than at any time preceding that decree. It is known that more than one submarine supply station has been discovered and put out of business by British naval vessels.

Evidence is plentiful that the British navy, engaged in the most colossal shark hunt ever known to the high seas, is making a successful hunt of it.

In other words, Britain is getting the German submarines. She is getting them—and she is "getting" them; that is to say, she is capturing them and she is sinking them.

Admiralty is Silent

How she is doing it, where, and how many she has got thus far the censor does not permit one to tell—but Britain knows it, and it is safe to believe that Germany is beginning to know it. If in no other way, Germany is learning it through the great number of the undersea crews that fail to return.

"Leave it to Jellicoe," said the British the day of Germany's announcement of unrestricted submarine warfare. Their confidence in the gray and grizzled sea mastiff through whom Britannia is "ruling the waves" at this particular period, appears toh ave been justified.

What proportion of the number of German submarines mastered by the navy may be catalogued as captures and what proportion as sinkings, cannot be given.

Subs. Were Rushed

The personal disposition of naval officers is to sink rather than to capture, but the size of the captive hauls stowed away in one or two British harbors makes it difficult to believe that more than their number has actually been sent to the bottom.

More than one reason is given for the unquestioned success of the war of extermination against the submarines. One is that the new undersea boats are inefficient of themselves by reason of hasty construction to meet the new program and that their crews are less efficient because of hasty training for the purpose.

Hemmed in by Mines

Whereas many naval officers anticipated meeting something new and more terrible in the way of underwater fighting when Berlin announced the new policy of ruthlessness, there is reason to believe they have found the new boats easier to combat than were their predecessors.

Another reason, which has a good deal to substantiate its authenticity, is that the new and frankly announced extension of the British mine fields has thrown a barrier across the ports of departure of the submarines that has successfully hemmed in a big portion of those the German Admiralty hoped to send forth. At the same time this barrier has prevented the return to home ports of many submarines that had been sent out before the ruthlessness was announced.

Headed home for a fresh supply of gasoline, it is declared, many a German submarine has found it impossible to get through the mine fields. Some have been sunk and some have slipped away to hide.

At more than one supply station discovered and put out of business by British naval vessels, German submarines have turned up to find all supplies vanished, sometimes to be captured or sunk themselves by waiting British craft.

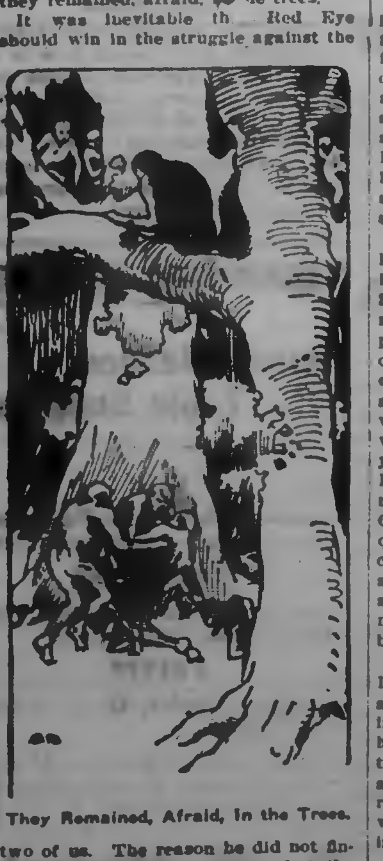
Encouraged by my conduct, Big Face became a sudden ally. He charged in, sank his teeth in Red Eye's arm and ripped and tore at his face. This was the time for the rest of the folk to have joined in. It was the chance to do for Red Eye for all time. But they remained, afraid, in the trees.



They Remained, Afraid, In the Trees.

It was inevitable that Red Eye should win in the struggle against the two of us. The reason he did not finish us off immediately was that the Swift One clogged his movements. She had regained her breath and was beginning to resist. He would not release his clutch on her hair, and this handicapped him. He got a grip on my arm. It was the beginning of the end for me. He began to draw me toward him into a position where he could sink his teeth into my throat. His mouth was open, and he was grinning. And yet, though he had just begun to exert his strength, in that moment he wrenched my shoulder so that I suffered from it for the remainder of my life.

And in that moment something happened. There was no warning. A great body smashed down upon the four of us locked together. We were driven violently apart and rolled over and over, and in the suddenness of surprise we released our holds on one another. At the moment of the shock Big Face screamed terribly. I did not know what had happened, though I smelled tiger and caught a glimpse of striped fur as I sprang for a tree.

It was old Saber Tooth. Aroused in his lair by the noise we had made he had crept upon us unnoticed. The Swift One gained the next tree to mine, and I immediately joined her. I put my arms around her and held her close to me while she whimpered and cried softly. From the ground came a snarling and crunching of bones. It was Saber Tooth making his supper of what had been Big Face. From beyond, with inflamed rims and eyes, Red Eye peered down. Here was a monster mightier than he. The Swift One and I turned and went away quietly through the trees toward the cave, while the folk gathered overhead and showered down abuse and twigs and branches upon their ancient enemy. He lashed his tail and snarled, but went on eating.

And in such fashion were we saved. It was a mere accident—the sheerest accident. Else would I have died there in Red Eye's clutch, and there would have been no bridging of time to the tune of a thousand centuries down to a progeny that reads newspapers and rides on electric cars—ay, and that writes narratives of bygone happenings even as this is written.

It was in the early fall of the following year that it happened. After his failure to get the Swift One, Red Eye had taken another wife, and, strange to relate, she was still alive. Stranger still, they had a baby several months old—Red Eye's first child. His previous wives had never lived long enough to bear him children. The year had gone well for all of us. The weather had been exceptionally mild and food plentiful. I remember especially the turnips of that year. The nut crop was also very heavy, and the wild plums were larger and sweeter than usual.

In short, it was a golden year. And then it happened. It was in the early morning, and we were surprised in our caves. In the chill gray light we awoke from sleep, most of us, to encounter death. The Swift One and I were aroused by a pandemonium of screeching and gibbering. Our cave was the highest of all on the cliff, and we crept to the mouth and peered down. The open space was filled with the Fire People. Their cries and yells were added to the clamor, but they had order and plan, while we folk had none. Each one of us fought and acted for himself, and no one of us knew the extent of the calamity that was befalling us.

By the time we got to stone throwing the Fire People had massed thick at the base of the cliff. Our first volley must have mashed some heads, for when they swerved back from the cliff three of their number were left upon the ground. These were struggling and floundering, and one was trying to crawl away. But we fixed them. By this time we males were roaring with rage, and we rained rocks upon the three men that were down. Several of the fire men returned to drag them into safety, but our rocks drove the rescuers back.

The Fire People became enraged. Also they became cautious. In spite of their angry yells they kept at a distance and sent flights of arrows against us. This put an end to the rock throwing. By the time half a dozen of us had been killed and a score injured the rest of us retreated inside our caves. I was not out of range in my lofty cave, but the distance was great enough to spoil effective shooting, and the Fire People did not waste many arrows on me. Furthermore, I was curious. I wanted to see. While the Swift One remained well inside the cave, trembling with fear and making low wailing sounds because I would not come in, I crouched at the entrance and watched.

The fighting had now become intermittent. It was a sort of deadlock. We were in the caves, and the question with the Fire People was how to get us out. They did not dare come in after us, and in general we would not expose ourselves to their arrows. Occasionally, when one of them drew in close to the base of the cliff, one or another of the folk would smash a rock down. In return he would be transfixed by half a dozen arrows. This ruse worked well for some time, but finally the folk no longer were inveigled into showing themselves. The deadlock was complete.

FOUR WEEKS IN HOSPITAL

Mrs. Brown Finally Restored to Health by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

Cleveland, Ohio.—"For years I suffered so sometimes it seemed as though I could not stand it any longer. It was all in my lower organs. At times I could hardly walk, for if I stepped on a little stone I would almost faint. One day I did faint and my husband was sent for and the doctor came. I was taken to the hospital and stayed four weeks but when I came home I would faint just the same and had the same pains.

A friend who is a nurse said for me to try Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. I began taking it that very day for I was suffering a great deal. It has already done me more good than the hospital. To anyone who is suffering as I was my advice is to stop in the first drug-store and get a bottle of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound before you go home."—Mrs. W. C. If one prefers to boil clothes, a tablespoonful of kerosene added to each boiler of suds will keep them beautifully white. New Troubles of The Housewife

To add to housekeeping difficulties in certain parts of Canada, came, just in the depth of this terribly severe winter, the coal shortage, or the coal famine as it is better called, the latter word expressing more of what the situation actually meant to many. City housekeepers who were caught with a shortage of coal in their bins had the weather to blame, to a certain extent for stoves and furnaces had swallowed up coal in an alarming manner during this winter of piercing cold winds, and mercury that went down, down, and persisted in staying there. Then came the news of lack of railway facilities, lack of coal from the city dealers, or at any rate great difficulty in getting it, and to some people at least very high prices. Such a stampede there was for coal! For the big industries must be kept warm to keep life in them, just as must the families in private houses. Like every other difficulty, it was surmounted, but with much suffering in the by-going.

The occasion furnished a practical demonstration to the well-to-do of what it means to do without fuel in winter time, to study anxiously each turn of the temperature, to calculate just how much warmth may be had from a certain quantity of fuel, and to search the thoughts for what could possibly be made to do duty as a substitute for the usual supply.

In the districts where coal was short, collectors for the poor in future winters should find an effective argument in this season's conditions, at least while the memory lasts. But we have a knack of remembering what is most pleasant in our experience, have we not? When we come to look back over any given time, the bright spots stand out most strongly with the majority of us. So the collectors for charities will doubtless have to continue to arm themselves with fresh pleas for the homes of poverty.

THE CALL FOR MARGARINE

Canadian housekeepers are happy when they are helping their country in any special way, apart from the general benefit that every good housewife and housemother bestows unconsciously in her daily round. But housekeepers, not being more altruistic and self-forgetful than other persons, like to feel, as a mark of their country's appreciation, that their country is helping them. And in that connection comes in the request or at least the suggestion of some of our leading women's societies that we, in Canada, may use margarine. Now, unless they were driven to it, no one would surely want to use margarine or anything else as a substitute for so ideally delicious a form of nourishment as butter. So we must take it for granted that we are driven to it, says "Housekeeper" in The Family Herald and Weekly Star.

Margine has not been permitted to us because it would enter into competition with our country's dairy trade; but now we feel that even the dairy trade may reasonably be called upon to share the difficulties of life with us, for a time at least. In the discussion that margarine is subjected to just now it naturally finds friends and enemies; but the saying about the proof of the pudding applies to margarine too, and its extensive use in England for many months past has apparently not interfered with the vigor and activity of the sons and daughters of that country. So, looking at it all round, why shouldn't we have margarine, if even only for a time? Our dairy trade friends are patriotic, like the rest of us, and the difference between margaine and butter prices in many households would add considerably to war loan savings.

Speaking of butter reminds me of a neat little implement for drawing the butter tastefully for table use. It is just a slightly curved, slender bit of wood, handle and scoop in one. The scoop part has tooth-like dents on its inner curve, like a comb not cut entirely through. The butter drawn from the tub or from the top of a block with this little scoop comes out in thin golden curls that look very daintily delicious in a pretty butter dish. That does not sound like an argument in favor of margarine, but with margarine it might do even better. At any rate, margarine in kitchen uses need not interfere with our butter dish on the table.

Everything in Season

THE BREAD OUR MOTHERS MADE

So many women are afraid of bread. Afraid to try to make it, afraid it will be heavy or sour or underdone; afraid to insist that the cook shall make good bread. Yet, when the simple principles are understood and observed with intelligence, reasonable accuracy and confidence, the process is as exact and the result as certain as in the addition of two and two. Any girl who can make a simple cake can make good bread.

In the most ancient times, thousands of years before the beginning of the Christian era, the small, flat cake, made of some kind of ground grain and water, baked hard in or near the fire, came to be known as the staff of life; the wandering tribes baked them and carried them with them as the convenient form of food for their journeys over the desert. That first flat, relatively tasteless cake has evolved into the loaf of our day. Some dyspeptics would like to go back to that ancestral loaf. But good bread of the modern sort, well made and properly baked, of the right materials, is wholesome and entirely hygienic. From every point of view it is better to bake the home supply in your own oven.

White bread is the least nourishing and the poorest form of the staff of life. Also it is the least economical. As the whitness increases the proportion of nourishment diminishes; the process of whitening removes the best qualities. Use whole wheat, graham, oatmeal and rye, and you will find the family using less of it and getting and more good out of it.

MAKING HAGGIS

The stomach bag of a sheep and one of the smaller bags are required, also the pluck, half pound beef suet, two teacupfuls toasted oatmeal, two onions minced, seasoning of salt and black pepper. The bags must be well cleaned and washed in cold and then in boiling water, to which a small piece of washing soda has been added. Then leave all night in cold water. Wash and boil the pluck with the small bag for one and a half hours. When cold cut away skin, gristle, etc. Grate the liver, mince the rest of the pluck, the bag, and suet. Add the minced onions, the oatmeal and the seasoning. Add half pint of the liquor in which the pluck was boiled, and mix well. Put all into the large bag, allowing plenty of space for the meal to expand, and sew up; put it into a large saucepan of boiling water, with a plate beneath to prevent it sticking, prick with a large darning needle to allow the air to escape, and boil slowly for three hours.

A less intricate recipe is given by a cook-book whose compiler does not approve of the use of liver. It would not, of course, make a haggis such as Burns called the "Great Chieftain o' the puddin' race." It says: For a medium-sized haggis, then, toast a breakfastcupful of oatmeal in front of the fire, or in the oven till brown and crisp, but not burnt. Have the same quantity of cooked lentils and a half teacupful onions, chopped up and browned in a little butter. Mix all together and add four ounces chopped suet, and seasoning necessary of ketchup and pepper. It should be fairly moist; if too dry add a little stock, gravy or extract. Turn into greased basin and steam at least three hours. A realistic imitation of "liver" is contrived by substituting chopped mushrooms for the lentils.

Making a Home

In these days of expensive foodstuffs the average housewife is at a loss to know how to serve palatable menus that are within her means. The answer lies in selecting the cheaper cuts of meats and the more humble vegetables and, in cooking these so well that they seem quite as delicious as higher priced foods. Below recipes are given for inexpensive dishes which may appeal to the woman who finds herself in the dilemma depicted above.

Milk Vegetable Soup
Baked Kidneys Boiled Rice
Sauted Beets
Stewed Prunes, Apples and Lemons.
Coffee

Milk-Vegetable Soup

Two cupfuls of milk, 1 tablespoonful of flour, 1 tablespoonful of butter, salt, 2-3 cupful thoroughly cooked vegetable, finely chopped, mashed or put through sieve will be needed for the recipe.

Thicken the milk with the flour as for milk gravy; add the other ingredients. If the soup is too thick, as it may be if the vegetable is starchy, thin it with milk or water.

Baked Kidneys

Chop the kidneys, then mix with the following ingredients. One half cupful of chopped suet, 1 cupful of milk, 2 cupfuls of breadcrumbs, 2 beaten eggs, pepper, salt, paprika and chopped parsley to season.

Pour into a buttered baking dish and make about fifty minutes. It can be served with a sliced lemon and parsley garnish or with a brown sauce.

Sauted Beets

Two large cooked beets, three tablespoonsful of butter, pepper, salt and paprika.

Peel the beets, cut them into slices. Melt the butter in a saucepan; when hot, out in the slices of beets, season with salt, pepper and paprika, and toss over the fire until the slices are thoroughly hot, cook for about five or six minutes. Put them in a hot vegetable dish and serve.

Stewed Prunes, Apples and Lemons

This is a very good dessert and can be kept a very long time.

Take one pound of prunes, any size, three apples, one lemon; wash prunes, peel apples and slices and peel lemon and slice; take lemons and make a layer at the bottom of your cooking pot and then over that a layer of your sliced apples, then over the apples a layer of prunes; repeat until you have it all in the pot; fill it ful with water to cover, then pour haf a pound of sugar over the top; let cook slowly and do not stir nor touch it—just shake your pot and add water once or twice so it will not burn; cover it and let it cook, and when you see your prunes on top, big and puffed, and your syrup cooked to a thick syrup, your apples will taste like quince, your prunes are tender and your lemons will flavor it all. This is very good. Try it.

USING POTATO WATER

A very busy woman tells of one of her cookery ideas. She says:—"Being an office woman as well as housekeeper, I do not have time for baking bread, and so have no such use for potato water. But, not long ago, it came to me that in draining boiled pared potatoes into the sink I was wasting some of the food value of the potato. So I began planning uses for it. I drain the water into a glass jar and keep it in the icebox until neded for meat pies, boiling soup bones, in thickened gravies and in pancakes. As time goes on I expect to add to the list, although these four uses prevent the water from standing long enough to become at all stale. It is seldom more than a day old at best before I find some use for it."

57TH CHAPTER I.O.D.E. RAISED $1465.80 DURING THE YEAR

2903 Pairs of Socks Were Handled by Chapter.

REVIEW OF YEAR

The annual meeting of the 57th Chapter, I. O. D. E., was held in the Green Room of the Y. W. C. A. on Wednesday, Mrs. Duncan Walker, the regent, presiding.

The reports of the different officers were read and showed the completion of a very successful year of much painstaking, unselfish work.

The work had been carried on largely by the standing committees on the various departments of work, and by special committees when any special plans for raising funds, etc. were being carried out.

The urgent call for immediate practical help in supplying the needs of our men has received the first attention, but at he same time the work of keeping in touch with the families left behind has not been neglected, and some time was even found for the study of questions relating to the war.

The visiting committee, with Mrs. W. Sharpe as convenor, endeavored to call on the families of the members of the 57th Regiment and others who have suffered bereavement, and convey to them the sympathy of the chapter. Mrs. Sharpe reported having made 332 visits. Working along with this committee was the flower committee under the convenorship of Miss Maud Rush. Flowers have been sent to the names of the bereaved families with notes expressing sympathy, and these silent comforters have done good work.

Besides this, the hospital committee, with Mrs. T. A. S. Hay as convenor, visited any soldiers in the hospitals, supplying them with books, magazines and fruit, and most important of all, with sympathy and good cheer. There were 103 men visited and 273 calls made. Mrs. Hay is to be especially commended for her unselfish and faithful work.

The tea room committee has done splendid work in carrying on arrangements so that the tea room has been open all year on Thursday afternoons, except for a short time during the very warm weather.

In November the tea room was moved from the Turnbull Building to the Masonic dining hall as the Turnbull Co. wished to open a new department on the fifth floor. The hearty thanks of the chapter is due them for the many kindnesses shown the chapter while in the building.

Since September the tea room has been under a committee with Miss Flora Davidson as convenor, and this arrangement had proved very satisfactory.

As in other years, the schools were visited on Empire Day and the graves of departed soldiers decorated.

On May 4th our chapter assisted in the celebration at the Exhibition grounds by the 93rd Battalion, operating a booth from which a splendid sum was realized. This, of course, was handed over to the battalion.

On July 12th a booth was operated in Central Park on the occasion of the Orangemen's celebration.

During the early spring a chain of teas was carried on from which over $200 was realised.

In October a concert was given in the Royal Theatre, a neat sum being netted from this.

Following this, a melting pot was arranged, and the people of the city asked to contribute odds and ends of silver, gold, in fact metal of all kinds. The old silver which was saleable was sold, and the remainder sold as scrap material.

Mr. N. W. Rowell was secured in November to give his lecture on his visit to the front. This was much enjoyed and a good sum realized.

At present an autograph quilt is being made, which is to be sent to Canon Davidson, and arrangements are under way for the systematic collection of scrap paper as a source of revenue.

In regard to educational work, little time was available. In June Mrs. F. C. Neal read an excellent paper, The Austro-Hungarian Position in the Present War, and in November Mrs. Widdifield gave a paper on The Origin and Work of the I. O. D. E.

Total, 2,003 pairs.

Referring to the 93rd Bn. shower, in addition to the 100 pairs of socks as stated above, various sums of money were contributed by which wool was purchased and knit into socks, also contributions of socks not included in the above.

The thanks of the committee are due to all the knitters who have worked so faithfully for the cause, to St. Paul's Auxiliary, the Morning Musical Club, the Women Teachers' Guild, the Thursday Club, the ladies of Bridgenorth, Stewart's Hall, and Trinity Church for contributions of socks; to individuals who have donated socks and money, and to the secretary and management of the Y. W. C. A. for the use of a comfortable room and also for their many kind attentions.

The convenor wishes to express her warmest thanks to her co-workers on the committee, Mrs. M. Comstock and Miss F. Gladman, and also Mrs. J. Sharpe.

All of which is respectfully submitted.

(Sgd.) F. ISABEL HAY.

COUNTY COUNCIL

Court House Repairs to be Done by Day Labor.

At the recent meeting of the County Council committee of the whole on county property, it was decided that the Court House be rebuilt by day labor providing the committee secure the services of a competent overseer. It was moved by Mr. Squire, seconded by Mr. Bullied, and resolved, that from the fact that a large amount of money is already invested in the buildings as they now are, that the committee appointed at the January session to engage an architect and have plans and specifications furnished for the restoration of the Court House, with such alterations as to offices, etc., consistent with such restoration; and that the Clerk advise the City Council of such action and that said committee in so far as this Council is concerned, have full power to act.

Reeve W. Anderson is chairman of the committee. At the special meeting called, Mr. Squire was authorised to secure the services of Mr. Connor, engineer, for the purpose of rebuilding Peter's Bridge, Norwood, on motion of Messrs. Walsh and Bullied.

HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES PASS BILL.

WASHINGTON, March 2.— The House of Representatives passed a bill empowering President Wilson to arm merchant ships, by a vote of 403 to 13.

ANOTHER ADVANCE ON MILE AND HALF FRONT

British Go Forward Six Hundred Yards.

LONDON, March 2.—The British advanced in the Ancre region yesterday 650 yards on a front of a mile and a half.

The British took over 2,100 prisoners during February.

LONDON, March 2. In a statement in the House of Commons yesterday Henry W. Forster, Financial Secretary of the War Office said:—During the past few days as the result of continuous pressure on the Ancre front, the enemy had retired on a front of twelve miles to a depth of two miles, giving the British possession of ten villages and several important positions to which the Germans had clung with utmost determination. Up to the present Germany had impressed upon their troops the necessity of defending these positions and fighting to the very end. In view of these instructions, the Secretary went on, his withdrawal cannot but have an unfavorable effect upon enemy troops and upon the German people, when they know. At the same time, it is probable the enemy is retiring not merely as a defensive measure, but with the object of saving his strength for the great blow on one or another of the Allied fronts. There is every indication that he will make a supreme effort to end the war in his favor this year, an effort which can only be met by a corresponding determination on the part of Great Britain and her Allies.

GAIN YEAR IN RESIDENCE BY WORK ON FARMS

GOV'T PASSES AN ORDER-IN-COUNCIL TO INCREASE FARM HELP.

FOR HOMESTEADERS.

OTTAWA, March 2.—Owing to enlistment for overseas service and to the number of men employed in the manufacture of munitions, there is at the present time a great scarcity of farm laborers. The Government, realizing this condition, yesterday passed an order-in-council which it is hoped will tend to increase the number in Canada willing to accept farm work, and draw from the United States further number of the same class.

By the provisions of the order-in-council any person working as a farm laborer in Canada during the present year is entitled to have counted as residence on any homestead, preemption or purchased homestead for which he may have entered, the period during which he was so employed, and cultivation duties may be performed in two years instead of three years.

To Engage With Farmers

It is felt that by making this provision, which is done under the War Measures Act, any homesteaders who are hampered through lack of capital or the necessary stock and machinery will be willing to engage with farmers who have all necessary stocks and machinery and merely lack labor, and that the agricultural output of the country will in this way be augmented to a great extent.

Homesteaders who avail themselves of the offer are expected as soon as possible after they commence farm laborer's work to furnish the agent of Dominion Lands for the district in which their homesteads are situated with sworn affidavits giving particulars as to their homesteads and full details as to the date of commencement and probable duration of the farm work which they are performing, together with the name and address of the farmers for whom they are working, and within thirty days after their term of employment has expired, and in any case not later than Feb. 1, 1918, the homesteaders shall file sworn affidavits as to the time actually spent on farm work.

Secure Men in U. S.

With the object of securing as much farm help from the United States as possible, the widest publicity is being given in the States to the terms of the order-in-council, and advertisements as to the demand for farm help will appear in about 7,000 papers in the United States, the papers being selected with the single object of reaching the largest number likely to be interested in the subject.

The government is particularly desirous that all residents of the United States who contemplate entering for a homestead and of working for some other farmer during the balance of this year should understand clearly that this offer is not made with the object of getting people into Canada to enlist for military service, but simply and solely with the object of obtaining the requisite help to increase the supply of fodstuffs so necessary at the present time for the success of the Allied nations.

PRIMARY SEMI-FINALS IN BONSPIEL TONIGHT

Third Round Games in Consolation Also on.

The semi-finals in the primary of the local curling bonspiel will be played tonight and the choice for a winner varies as much as the colors in the maple leaf in autumn. Skips Wightman, Giroux, Archibald and Foote are left to fight it out for the honor of being in the final.

In the consolation the third round will be played so that the "spiel" will be finished by Monday night.

In last night's game Pete Lang could not get way from the unlucky omen that hangs over No. 7 ice and the Trent Valley quartette defeated him. Geo. Giroux easily defeated President J. H. Ferguson. Skip W. G. Ferguson was unable to be present and Skip Matthews took his place and fell before Skip Foote by the narrow margin of one shot. The contest between the two doctors, Wightman and Greer, was exciting at all times.

The games and scores last night were:—

HAMS SEE POSSIBILITY OF WINNING THE ROUND

Are Hoping That Petes Goaler Will Have Off-night.

The Soldiers got away for Hamilton this morning at 7.35 to play their return game in the semi-finals. Bob Armstrong accompanied the team but he will not play in tonight's game, and Harry Thornton will fill the breach.

The Hams can see nothing but a victory tonight and they believe there is a possibility of winning the round. The Herald says:

Six goals are a heap to overcome, but the players gives several reasons why they expect to overhaul the invaders and go into the final round with Kitchener. They point to the fact that they shot at least 25 times on Goalkeper LeGros in the opening period, and that their shots came twice as often as those of the soldiers in every session. Had LeGros not been in his best form of the season a goodly number of them would have found their way in the net, and instead of defeat victory would have crowned the efforts of the locals. They hope to give Mr. LeGros another busy time of it to-morrow night, and are hoping that he will not be so much of a stone wall as on his own ice.

It is extremely dougtbul if Grant McEwen will be in the game. His injured head is bothering him considerably, and he stated to Manager Frank Wright last night that be did not feel well enough to take the chance. Alex. Murray is ready to fill in the breach if needed. Dr. Jerry Laflamme, coach and defence player of the Dentals, will handle the game. H.H.C. absolutely refused to stand for Oscar Bernhardt again, and Secretary Hewitt stated this morning that he had decided on Laflamme. Jerry is quite satisfactory to the locals. Charlie Galvin was one of the local supporters who saw the Hams go down to defeat in Peterborough, and he is quite sure that the locals will win on local ice. He looks for a three-goal margin at the lowest, and, while the six-goal lead is a big one to overhaul, he says he has great hopes that it will be toppled over.

Madge—The skirt should come to the shoetops.

Marjorie—I quite agree with you, my dear. But I can't get a pair high enough!

Son—Father, last night I ate a piece of mince pie just after going to bed and dreamed I was married.

Mr. Henpeck—Well, my son, I hope it will be a lesson to you.

FARMERS OF CANADA ASK FOR TARIFF PLEBISCITE

Favor Free Trade and Natural Production and Adopt Resolution For Fair Play on Conscription

TORONTO, March 2.—The Unitel Farmers finally hit on a form of resolution that met the approval of all This resolution declared approval of the reciprocity clause, and of the clause providing for free trade in all foodstuffs not covered by the reciprocity agreement, and calling upon the Dominion Government to submit the question to the people in the form of a referendum. This was carried by a standing vote amid applause that shook the building.

Western Platform Favored

The rest of the tariff planks were adopted with a rush. The balance of the western yplatform was also approved. This calls for direct tax on unimproved land values; graduated income tax on incomes over $4,000; graduated inheritance tax on large estates, nationalization of railway, telegraph and express companies; initiative and referendum, publicity in campaign funds, abolition of patronage system and Federal franchise for women in Provinces where they are enfranchised, and also for no more alienation of natural resources.

Against Conscription

The spirit of the resolution against conscription was tempered by a qualifying reference to Capital. It reads:

"Since human life is more valuable than gold, this convention most solemnly protests against any proposal looking to conscription of men for batle while elaving wealth exempt from the same measure of enforced service. It is a manifest and glaring injustic that Canadian mothers should be compelled to surrender boys around whom their dearest hopes in life are centred while plutocrats, fattening on special privileges and war business are left in undisturbed position of their riches."

When a drunken man doesn't think he is exceptionally wise, he is beyond the thinking stage.

NEW ZEPPELIN AND CREW LOST

BERLIN ADMITS PLOT CORRECTLY QUOTED

Took Precautions to Balance Adhesion to Our Foes of New Enemy---U.S. Got Information Through Treachery

NEW ZEPPELIN DESTROYED

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

LONDON, March 3. — A Reuter despatch from Amsterdam, apparently forwarded from Belin by Wolff's bureau, a semi-official German news agency, says: Foreign Secretary Zimmerman's instructions to the German ambassador in Mexico are admitted in Berlin to have been correctly quoted. Anticipating the possibility of conflict with the United States over the declaration of unresricted submarine warfare, it was not only right, but the duty of the German government, the despatch says, to take precautions, in order to balance if possible the adhesion to our foes of a new enemy. Therefore, instructions were given the German minister at Mexico in the middle of January to offer the Mexican government an alliance and arrange further degovernment received information istails. How the American not known, but it must have been through treachery, and treachery committed on American territory.

Another despatch says the affair probably led to Zimmerman's retirement and the end of Von Bernstorff's career as a diplomat.

ZEPP. LOST DOING SPEED TRIALS.

LONDON, March 3. — A Copenhagen despatch says a new Zeppelin doing speed trials on Monday night caught fire and was destroyed with its entire crew.

WILL TAKE EXTRAORDINARY CRISIS TO CALL CONGRESS FOR SESSION

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

WASHINGTON, March 3. — President Wilson has no intention of taking action that would bring on war with Germany unless Congress is summoned in extra session. This was communicated to the Senate leaders today by representatives of the President, who takes the position that if no extraordinary crisis arises it will not be necessary to call an extra session before late in the Spring, and then only to pass any appropriation bills which may fail at the present session.

MORE SURPRISE ATTACKS SUCCEED

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

....PARIS, March 3. — This afternoon's war statement reads; During the night our reconnoitering parties corried out several successful surprise attacks against trenches near Moulins-sous-Tourtvent, east of Hill 304 (Verdun region), and in the Apremont Forest. We took prisoners and material.

BERLIN, March 3. — The war office announces that strong British reconnoitering detachments attempted to enter German trenches near Hulluch and Lievin, and smaller detachments made similar attempts at other points on the Artois front, but were everywhere repulsed.

On both banks of the Ancre there were again violent infantry engagements in which the British losses were severe, including sixty prisoners and eight machine guns.

AUSTRIAN CHIEF IS DISMISSED

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

LONDON, March 3. — A Reuter Amsterdam despatch says the Austrian Emperor has dismissed Field Marshal Von Hoetzendorf, chief of staff.

HIGH PRAISE FOR LOCAL RED CROSS SOCIETY

ALL SUPPLIES FROM HERE ALWAYS SATISFACTORY TO HEAD OFFICE.

A recent letter received by Miss Davidson, convenor of the packing committee, from the head offices of the Canadian Red Cross Society, Toronto, contains the following: "We are so very glad to hear of the whirlwind sewing campaign. Our manager says that everything from Peterborough is always so beautifully sent in and so satisfactory that you cannot be given too high praise. Thank you, so much, for your additional efforts. We have been hearing a good deal lately of the falling off in work and so to have extra large shipments is a great encouragement to our workers as well as being a help to the cause itself."

Metheral, 268 Reid St. Monday afternoon at 3 o'clock to Little Lake Cemetery. The late Pte. Metheral died at Amherst, N.S., from an attack of pneumonia.

THE FINAL CALL FOR RECRUITS

RECRUITING AFFAIRS in this city have arrived at the parting of the ways, and the situation is critical. The people have been given to understand that they are to be allowed two months longer in which to redeem the reputation of the city. At the end of that time, unless a better showing has been made, the 247th Battalion will be removed and attached to some other unit. There is no hope that a partially filled battalion will be brought to Peterborough and amalgamated with the 247th. Recruiting has fallen off all over the country, but in no place in the district to the same extent as in Peterborough.

◆ ◆ ◆ ◆

That, then, is the situation. The people know just what to expect if they fail. At the meeting the other night it was decided to make one last supreme effort. The members of the Patriotic League will resolve themselves into a committee to promote a meeting of the employers of labor with the worthy object of enlisting their co-operation.

◆ ◆ ◆ ◆

There has been considerable plain talk at recruiting meetings lately, and The Review claims the same right of free speech as that assumed by public speakers. There is no getting away from the fact that the employers of the city have been indifferent —not to say actively hostile—to the local recruiting movement, especially since the present battalion was organized. They have made their individual interest paramount There are men working in the stores and factories who beyond a doubt should be in khaki, and whose places could be filled either by women or other non-eligibles. At the meeting the other night it was plainly stated that the manufacturers are giving the prefence to able-bodied men.

◆ ◆ ◆ ◆

What can be done to improve the recruiting situation in this city? Co-operation is essential. The City Council can set the pace. No alderman of military age should claim exemption by reason of his public position alone. He should be able to give some more valid excuse for remaining in private life, and no alderman should assume to ask other young men to enlist if he has eligible relatives of his own. There is not a man in a public position today whose services are so valuable that they cannot be dispensed with in view of the greater need for men in the firing line. No able-bodied young man should be kept on the civic pay roll while there is work to do in Europe. The laborer cannot be consistently asked to make a sacrifice while those more fortunately situated are allowed to escape.

◆ ◆ ◆ ◆

At recruiting meetings these days it is nothing unusual to hear speakers refer to the number of young men still engaged as clerks in the stores, doing work that women could easily perform. Some of the speakers even go so far as to recommend the women of Peterborough to boycott any place where a young man is employed behind the counter where women's goods are sold.

◆ ◆ ◆ ◆

The manufacturers will be asked to hang out signs turning away all men who are unable to show an A. R. button. Even the returned soldier is not always given the preference among applicants for employment. The plea is set up that a term of military service unfits a man for indoor work. It has unfortunately been found, too, that in some cases where ex-soldiers have been put to work they have to cope with the opposition of their fellow-workers, who undermine them with the foreman and so secure their discharge. This is one of the most deplorable features of the local labor situation, and one of the causes for the falling off in enlistments. A returned soldier out of work these days is a walking discouragement in the task of securing new recruits.

◆ ◆ ◆ ◆

The places of amusement are still thronged. A bonspiel or a hockey match never lacks for patrons, and the pool-rooms are doing business as usual. Last night the crowds around the bulletin boards contained a sufficient number of young slackers to fill up two or three companies of a military battalion. Some recruiting officers would go so far as to bar young men from hockey games; they would close the pool-rooms, and call upon the older men in a bonspiel not to play or associate with the younger generation.

◆ ◆ ◆ ◆

There are visiting commercial travellers in the city every day. Some of these openly regard the man in khaki as the victim of a delusion. One way to reach this class would be for the business men to refuse to treat with any traveller of the required age who does not wear a rejection button

◆ ◆ ◆ ◆

Something must be done, and done inside of two month. Peterborough will, if the 247th Battalion is taken away, never get an opportunity to raise another. Any friction that arose when the unit was first organized should be smoothed out and all personal and other differences suppressed. Conscription will not save the situation or remove the stigma of failure

◆ ◆ ◆ ◆

The gravest of all charges of indifference in this matter comes from Ottawa, where it is asserted that there are in the Civil Service 1,700 unmarried men, without dependents, of the required age, and who still refuse to give up their positions for military duty. If this is the case, the Government should set an example for other employers by turning them out, even if it is necessary to suspend the regulations to do so. There is surely work there which women and returned soldiers can do.

◆ ◆ ◆ ◆

Why should there be so much talk about employing women in munitions factories when there are so many other places that they can fill, performing work more in line with their capacities? Two aldermen said the other night at the recruiting meeting that women and many returned soldiers are not equal to the physical strain of making munitions. The recruiting officers challenge this statement, and maintain that it is true only of one factory, in which heavy shells are made. In all the others there is light work which women, old men and the physically unfit can perform as well as eligible men.

490,000 TONS OF SHIPPING SUNK BY GERMAN SUBS IN MONTH

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

LONDON, March 3. — Absolutely reliable figures in possession of the Associated Press show that Germany during the first month of unrestricted warfare sank only 490,000 tons of merchant shipping instead of one million, which her contract called for. British authorities expected under conditions of ordinary submarine warfare to lose 350,000 tons.

PARIS, March 3. — Hereafter the Admiralty will publish a weekly report instead of a daily report of vessels torpedoed.

TWENTY MORE ENGINES.

OTTAWA, March 3. — The Department of Railways has placed a further order for twenty locomotives with the Kingston Locomotive works. The company recently delivered thirty on a previous order. In addition the government has secured ten Santa Fe moguls, als twenty-eight second-hand locomotives from the Transcontinental contractors. This makes a total of sixty-eight ordered or secured for the government railways during the current fiscal year.

RED CROSS APPEAL

The Red Cross Society, through the Canadian War Contingent Association is making repeated earnest appeals for socks to be sent to the men in the trenches. It will be only through continued and unceasing work on the part of the knitters that the demand can be met and the local society accordingly urges all its workers to make an extra effort to add to the sock supply. During the past week the knitting machines in the Red Cross work rooms have been kept busy, with the result that there are now 75 pairs of socks to be toed off. The society asks that all ladies who are good darners will meet Tuesday, March 6, at 2.30 p.m., in the Red Cross rooms to do this work.

CITY COUNCIL

"The regular meeting of the City Council will be held on Monday night. The by-law appointing the sanitary inspector will be passed.

$1600 FOR CHIEF HOWARD INCREASES FOR HIS MEN COMMITTEE RECOMMEND

Firemen of First Class Will Receive $900 Yearly.

$800 and $700 for the Second and Third Class.

Salary increases for all the members of the Fire Department were recommended to the City Council by the Fire, Water and Light Committee last night. The meeting had been called to deal with the final revision of the estimates and the chief object of worry was giving the men of the brigade sufficient remuneration so that the position would be attractive to them. The salary increase carries with it an efficiency badge which means a raise of 10c per day after eight years of continuous service

The salaries agreed on last night were as follows. The motion was made by Ald. Worth and seconded by Ald. Smith.

Chief—$1600, an increase of $200

2nd class men—$800, an increase of $37.40.

3rd class men—$700, an increase of $12.40.

Provision will be made for an assistant chief when one is procurable.

The third-class schedule is temporarily suspended, so that all the men in the department will now receive either $800 or $900 per year. The chief hopes to be able to have his department up to strength, that is, sixteen efficient men, before very many weeks go by.

The present salary increase, taking into consideration the increase of 24c a day made in the summer of 1916, figures out about a 20 per cent increase in the year

Chairman Dobbin will purchase only such uniform this year as are absolutely necessary to properly outfit the men

There was a tie vote on the item of expenses to the fire chiefs' convention and the chairman voted against the item so it was struck out.

The insistence of Mayor Duffus that one fire alarm box be installed every year caused $125 to be provided for it.

After the salary question and other things in dispute had been agreed on

GERMANS WERE DRIVEN BACK FROM TRENCHES

HAD STORMED FIRST LINE IN THE SLAVENTIN REGION.

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

PETROGRAD March 3.—German forces yesterday stormed the Russian first line trenches in the region of Slaventin, in Galicia, says an official statement issued today by the Russian War Department, but later were evicted by a counter-attack of Russian reserves.

ONIONS AND POTATOES AS FEE TO THEATRE

NEW YORK, March 3.—The Union Square movie theatre today is revelling in a well-filled potato bin. Close by is a heap of onions. They passed over the shelf in the box office on Thursday by persons who accepted the management's offer of admission for potatoes as a joke.

An onion took one to a box seat, while the best a potato could do was a seat in the orchestra.

20 MILLIONS FOR PENSIONS

WILL COST CANADA THAT SUM YEARLY TO CARE FOR SOLDIERS.

LONDON, Ont., March 3—Col. S. R. Labatt, chairman of the Dominion Pensions Commission, addressing the Canadian Club, said that up to Feb. 8 300 men had received pensions and 1,200 gratuities. He estimated that Canada's annual pension bill would be $20,000. There would not be the waste which had characterized the pension history of the United States, for in Canada the work was positively non-political.

Not Oil the City Streets This Year

WOULD SAVE AT LEAST SIX THOUSAND TO CIVIC TREASURY.

Ald. Weir, chairman of the Board of Works, remarked last night at the Fire, Water and Light Committee, that he ought to have arranged his estimates before the fire department got its appropriation passed.

It was rumored on the street today that a suggestion would be made to the Board of Works to cut out the oiling of streets this year. This would save at least $6,000 and it was also pointed out that the residential streets are in good shape and will not be dusty.

THIRD BROTHER DIES.

PETERBOROUGH, SATURDAY, MARCH 3, 1917

NOT FOR ONE HOUR.

> "And He cometh unto the disciples and findeth them asleep, and said unto them, 'What, could ye not watch with Me one hour?'"

A PROMINENT RESIDENT of this city, who is interested peculiarly in military affairs, was in Ottawa during the recent session of Parliament, and dropped into the House to listen to the proceedings. As it happened, General Sir Sam Hughes, exMinister of Militia, had the floor, and was giving an account of his official visit to the Canadian forces overseas.

One would naturaly think that such an address would engage the closest attention of every member of the House. Here was a message direct from the slaughter-house, in Parliament, a speech dealing with the gravest crisis through which this country and the entire civilized world has ever passed. Here were gathered, or should have been gathered, the men that have been entrusted with public affairs at a time when the welfare of the nation demands the best that is in them.

And what was the situation? The attendance was light. Sir Sam Hughes was surrounded on all sides by deserted desks. He could not even excite the interest of all of those who kept their places, vital as his message was. Some of the members were reading newspapers, exercising at the same time that prerogative which sets them apart from ordinary mortals—the right to wear their hats in public.

This custom is now, by an easy play of fancy, supposed to invest parliamentarians with an air of sublime wisdom. Its origin dates back to the stirring days when lawmakers found it the part of discretion to be ready and dressed for flight in order to escape the too often righteous vengeance of their outraged constituents.

And while Sir Sam told of the gallantry of Canada's arms in the trenches and repeated with pride the many encomiums that had been passed upon them by war-scarred professionals, two members slept soundly in their seats. Slept while 120,000 native sons walked through the valley of death!

While the Nazarene, facing the tragedy of His life, wrestled with His problem in the garden, the men upon whose friendship and presence He relied for consolation, slept, unable to bear with Him the burden for one single hour. And while the soldier heroes of Canada walked in the smoke-darkened Gethsemane in Flanders, the members of Parliament, supposed to aid them by every human means possible, slumbered with porcine indifference at their posts!

It is well for Canada and the Empire that the soldier boys have been cast in a different mould and that they do not fall asleep with the call of duty sounding in their ears. But the members of Parliament are not, it seems, able to watch with them even one hour.

ONE VARIETY OF WASTREL.

IN THIS TIME OF STRESS, when the preaching of thrift and economy is heard on every hand, why does not some disciple of the new cult get after the waster who in hotels and restaurants usually sends more food to the garbage can at every meal than he actually devotes to his own bodily needs?

The other day in one of the leading hotels in this city a diner ordered every article on the bill-of-fare, all through the various courses, and those seated around him found it impossible to avoid noticing that he did not make out to consume more than half of the provisions that were placed before him. There was nothing left the hotelkeeper to do but throw away what was left. The food so wasted was sufficient to feed two ordinary persons, and would have kept a Belgian family for a day in luxury compared to their usual dietary allowance.

This is by no means an isolated case. Such incidents can be witnessed in hotels and restaurants every day where the American plan of serving meals is in operation. The waste is a serious matter, and besides, the evidence of an utter lack of tastes is painful. Unfortunately there are such people in the world. Require them to pay for what they get, and their economical disposition at once manifests itself. Give them a free hand in a hotel and they seem to be under the delusion that they cannot get full value for their money. They keep the bell-boys continually on the hop and worry all branches of the service by their exacting demands for attention.

The hotelkeepers should protect themselves in this matter. Purveyors of food in Toronto are introducing new conditions in the conduct of their business in the interests of saving. The present price of everything in the shape of foodstuffs makes this step necessary, and local hotelmen and proprietors of restaurants would be perfectly justified in following the example of those engaged in the same business in other places.

WHEN THE WAR IS OVER.

THERE SEEMS TO BE a geeral impression that when peace is declared there will be a period of serious depression in business circles in this country. When the factories, the pessimists argue, have no more munition contracts, they will be obliged to turn off their staffs, and the men will walk the streets in idleness. An influx of immigrants from the war-desolated countries of Europe is anticipated, the new arrivals belonging to the class who find it impossible to earn a living in their own country. This immigration, it is claimed, will further aggravate the problem of non-employment.

The immigration question is one easily possible to control. This country, desirable as it may be to increase the population, is not called upon to shelter indigent strangers while Canadians themselves are suffering for the necessaries of life. If such a situation as the one referred to above actually should arise, the remedy is simple. Immigration should be halted until conditions once more become normal.

After all there may be no foundation for all this alarm. One of the leading business men of the city said at the banquet the other night that prosperity was likely to come to the world when peace is restored, and that Canada would get her share of the good things of the saner life. An enormous revival in manufacturing will be necessary to replace the wastage of years of devastating warfare.

The war broke out when the manufacturers of Peterborough were enduring a season of depression. Peace will find them prosperous. If they were able to instal new plants at a heavy cost and to take up perfectly unfamiliar lines of industry when business was dull, they can with increased earnings the more readily re-equip their factories and drop into the old groove again.

THE WOLF IN DISGUISE.

THE EXAMINER poses as the friend of the farmer, his tearful defendant and the champion of his rights. That same Examiner would now ruin the dairy business in this country by permitting the importation of cheap butter substitutes from the United States.

Not satisfied with this, The Examiner would deprive the farmers of Peterborough county of their last chance to earn an honest dollar by laying government hands upon their supplies at its own price. A few years ago it was intent upon securing wider markets for the farmers. Now it would close against them every avenue to the foreign mart and compel them to deal with it upon its own terms. Strange political creeds are of a very truth born of political exigencies. A wolf in the guise of a sheep cannot conceal its claws

LABOR AND MARGARINE.

THE STATEMENT MADE by the Official Scribe of the Trades and Labor Council in another column with regard to the manufacture and importation of butter substitutes not only voices the sentiments of local union labor, but those of the workingmen throughout the country. Labor unions in all parts of Canada have passed resolutions asking the Government to remove the embargo on butter substitutes.

Canadian workingmen know on which side their daily bread is made more nutritious by the addition of the pure products of home dairies. They have prospered under the tariff and have no quarrel with it. Why then should they demand that the fiscal policy of the country in this regard be tampered with? The dairy interest affords mployment to a small army of workingmen, skilled and otherwise, and is more and more becoming the chief source of wealth in the farming community.

The argument that the removal of the embargo on butter substitutes would tend to enlarge the business of the dairymen by releasing for export a greater quantity of the genuine article will hold no more water than a sieve. In any line of production it is always the home market that is the one essential. So far as the foreign trade is concerned, the reputation of the goods is everything. Canadian dairy products are known the world over as the best obtainable. It is the embargo on substitutes that, more than anything else, is respnsible for this.

To permit the manufacture and importation of butter substitutes would at once place the dairy products of Canada in the category of the suspected articles, just as are those that come from the United States.

In the latter country it has been found next to impossible to prevent frauds in the butter business. The substitutes can be colored to resemble the genuine article so closely that it requires an expert to tell the difference. The Government finds it necessary to employ a small army of inspectors to prevent fraud, and there is a constant warfare maintained against the dealers. One result of this is that everything in the shape of butter is under suspicion, and this feeling prevails throughout the foreign market. Who would do anything to bring about such conditions in Canada?

Canada's foreign trade is constantly increasing, thanks to this contry's reputation for square dealing and the excellency of its products. Flour made from the hard wheat of the West gets the first call in the European market, and the aim of the Government is to maintain that reputation just as in the case of butter. The American millers are anxious to secure supplies of Canadian wheat, to grind it with their own and sell the flour under a Canadian brand. The genuine article would suffer in reputation if this practice were made possible by the relaxation of existing Canadian regulations.

Canadian wheat and dairy products are on the same footing. They are given first choice abroad, and their reputation must be protected.

WHEN HAMAN CAST LOTS

Purim, which this year will be celebrated Thursday, March 8, beginning, however, on Wednesday evening, the 7th, is one of the minor holidays of the Jewish calendar. It commemorates the deliverance of the Jews of Persia from the power of Haman, the vizier of King Ahasuerus. Haman had cast lots (hence the name "Purim," which means "lots") to determine which month was to be set for the massacre of all the Jews in Persia. Mordecai and his niece Esther becoming aware of the plot, succeeded in deposing Haman and in obtaining royal permission for the Jews to attack and master their enemies on the 13th and 14th of Adar. The deliverance of the Jews from the threat of annihilation and their victory over their enemies have ever after been celebrated as the Feast of Purim.

The Feast of Purim never attained as high a degree of spiritual influence as did some of the other festivals. The usual Psalms of praise read on other holidays are omitted on Purim. The one characteristic of the Purim ritual is the reading of the Book of Esther on the evening of the thirteenth day of Adar.

As a folk celebration Purim made up for whatever influence it may have lacked as a religious festival. It was celebrated as a carnival: masks were worn by old and young; Purim plays were given, re-enacting the drama of Esther and Haman. In addition to this merry celebration of Purim there arose the custom of giving gifts to the poor. Every Jew, no matter how poor, would give something to someone more needy than himself. And so the day of popular rejoicing was touched with the elevating spirit of benevolence.

FOR BOYS WHO ARE KING SCOUTS

Every boy who has become a King's Scout has a right to feel proud, for a King's Scout is in every sense of the word a finished Scout. Not that he has learned everything there is to be learned about Scouting, but he is in a position to teach other boys, and if possessed of the qualities of leadership, to assume the role of leader of a troop.

A King's Scout must first of all be a first-class Scout, which honor alone calls for a general knowledge of Scouting, for a first-class Scout must pass many difficult tests before winning his badge. Then, too, the candidate for the higher honors must be fully qualified to wear four of the following proficiency badges (of which the Pathfinder Badge is compulsory): Ambulance, Cyclist, Marksman, Pathfinder, Signaller, Fireman and Rescuer.

The Proficiency Badges which the King's Scout must be qualified to wear are all public service badges that is, the training that is necessary before the badges can be worn for the Scout to be of service to the public in a general way. A King's Scout can make himself generally useful at a fire or in the case of an accident or a drowning he can render first aid. Then there is the knowledge he has gained through the Pathfinder Badge, which is compulsory. The Scout must have a general knowledge of the district in which he lives, so that he can be of service in the way of directing strangers from one place to another, etc. Another important condition is that the King's Scout must submit to re-examination annually.

SELF-EDUCATION IN SCOUTING.

(The Canadian Thresherman and Farmer.)

"Education must be positive, not negative; active, not passive. For example, the Scout law in each of its details says: 'A Scout does—this that or the other.'

Authorities have come along to improve the Scouts' law, and not recognizing the active side of it, have changed it to a series of "don'ts." "Don'ts," of course, is the distinguishing feature and motto of the old-fashioned system of repression and it is a red rag to a boy. It is a challenge to him to do wrong. Sought knowledge lasts; unsought does not. McMunn shows that children seek knowledge all day and every day; will seek any knowledge you ask them to, if you let them seek it actively and in their own way.

We have been criticized in the Scout movement for offering such a large number of badges for proficiency in so many different lines. boy should try to win all these badges, but to try and meet the enormous The object of this was, not that each variety of character among the boys and to give each one his chance by selecting his own subject. We do not perpetuate the school system, whereby the lucky boy who happens to be brilliant in one of the "r's" comes out on top, and disheartens other boys whose abilities may be equally as good, but unfortunately not in one of the subjects which come under the school curriculum. The aim of the proficiency badge is to encourage self-education on the part of the boy in a subject which interests him."

LABOR VOICES DEMANDS BY "THE OFFICIAL SCRIBE"

To a deputation at Ottawa this week the Hon. Martin Burrill, Minister of Agriculture, stated that he could give little hope for the removal of the restrictions on the manufacture and importation of oleomargarine.

The workers all over the country, as well as the various housewives' leagues and kindred women's societies, are demanding that these restrictions be removed, as a necessary war measure to help reduce the cost of living. The only answer of the Government is the old one of protecting the dairying industry. And yet the figures Mr. Burrill gave defeat his own arguments.

He stated that the demand in Great Britain last year for Canadian butter was 11,000,000 pounds, the greatest since 1903, and it was important that this steady supply be maintained, and that it was the biggest stimulant for promoting the manufacture of butter in this country.

Then why, in the name of common-sense, doesn't the Government remove the embargo on margarine and release for exportation all the more butter that is now consumed domestically? The workers have no fault to find with a Government endeavoring to foster an industry-in-the-making, and the embargo was put on margarine when the dairying industry was in its infancy in this country. But can't the Government realize that it is now no longer necessary—in the true sense of that word?

The industry is now on as firm a footing as any in Canada, and the dairying interests last year made more money than in any previous year. Isn't it time that the worker was fostered a little more, instead of vested interests?

The cost of butter at the present time is almost prohibitive to large numbers of workers, and besides bringing the price of this commodity down, the removal of the embargo on margarine would place on the market a good, wholesome substitute at a reasonable price, and one which many people would prefer to some butter that is sold at the present time.

If the Government wish their "Thrift" campaign to be a success, they must give the working man more incentive than the promise of good interest on his money when invested—they must help him to economize and save, and here is a good chance which they refuse to touch.

Union and Trades Councils must keep after the Government and demand this important measure until it is granted.

SEVENTEEN YEARS AGO

From The Review of March 3, 1900:

The druggists' hockey team members were entertained at an oyster supper given by Mr. James Lynch.

Mr. Ben. Shortly was elected president of the Ontario Harness Makers' Association.

Mr. R. Neill presented a cheque for $100 to the fire brigade for their exertions in saving his shoe store from fire.

The Orniest Slacker of Them All

He was the style of young man the weakness of whose moral make-up is shrieked to the world by the hue and pattern of his neckwear and other incongruous combinations in his attire. His fingers bore the stains that betray the man who courts destruction by the cigarette route. Nature had gifted him with a sturdy frame and so must have had some purpose in view when he was moulded into the likeness of humanity, but what that purpose was nature has never revealed and the young man himself has never been at the pains to discover. His idea of accomplishments, mental or physical, do not soar beyond proficiency in a game of pool.

The young man called at the Armories and saying he was anxious to enlist, was turned over to the searching care of the medical officer. There was not a flaw in his anatomy. His heart was all right and his lungs answered all requirements. His conformation left nothing to be desired, so that the doctor had no hesitation in passing him. He was asked to attest, but here the young fellow balked.

"I do not want to enlist," he said without a blush or a tremor of shame. "I thought I could not pass the examination and that I would get a button. That was all I was after."

Of course there was nothing for it but to let him go. The newly-bathed porker headed once more for the mudhole. The most deplorable feature of the whole unfortunate affair was that the fellow never seemed to realize for a moment that he was doing anything to be ashamed of. He is around as usual and even had the hardihood to take a place in the front row of a crowd that surrounded a recruiting officer on the corner.

While there are such specimens of humanity at large, is there a man in Peterborough who will say a word against the desirability of the Government resorting to some form of compulsion?

THEATRICAL

"Bringing Up Father in Politics" proved a big laugh producer at the Grand yesterday afternoon and night when on both occasions the house was sold out. The inimitable Father and Maggie and the supporting company were favorites with children and adults alike. The music is tuneful, the songs catchy, and the numerous and beautifully costumed chorus sings well. Dick Simons of Peterborough is stage carpenter with the company and also appears in the cast.

The company left for Guelph this morning.

Wit and Wisdom

That Explains It.

"Where did you get those scratches on your face?" asked the thin man.

"Car turned turtle," replied the fat man gruffly.

"Loose tire?"

"No, tight chauffeur."

Unselfish.

He was a good little boy and very thoughtful. It was during a long spell of dry weather (some time ago by the way), and he had heard of the great scarcity of water throughout the country.

"Mamma," he said, "is it true that in some places the little boys and girls have not enough water to drink?"

"That is what the papers say, my dear."

"Mamma," he presently said, "I'd like to give something for those poor little boys and girls."

"Yes, dear; what would you like to give?"

"Mamma," he said, in an earnest way, "as long as the water is so very, very scarce, I think I ought to give up bein' washed!"

Tempora Mutant.

Mr. Goodleigh — Her age really surprises me; she doesn't look twenty-eight, does she?

Miss Snappe — Not now; but I suppose she did once.

And it was Murray, who substituted for McEwen—put out of action here—who scored the winning goal four seconds before full time was up. Some irony of fate.

HAMILTON, March 3.—By a sensational finish in the final period after they appeared to be hopelessly beaten on the round, the Hamilton hockey club last night succeeded in overcoming the six-goal lead of the 247th Battalion team and qualified for the O. H. A. intermediate finals. For the first two periods play was fairly even, the score being one to one at the end of the first period and three to one in Hamilton's favor when the whistle blew with the close of the second period, leaving Hamilton still four goals behind, with five needed to win the round. Despite this big handicap, the locals went onto the ice determined to do or die and by some of the most sensational hockey ever witnessed in the local rink finally succeeded in pulling out a victory, scoring five goals in rapid succession and winning the game by 8 to 1 and the round by 11 to 10.

STREET-CAR SERVICE IS DEMANDED BY EAST SIDE

Resolution Adopted at Meeting of Ratepayers Last Night---Other Improvements Planned for Ashburnham

"Resolved, that it is the unanimous opinion of this meeting that, in justice to the people of Ashburnham, the street railway should be extended to this side of the river. We believe that since the union of the municipalities of Peterborough and Ashburnham, that the interests of this portion of the city have been more or less neglected by our city fathers. Therefore, we urge that our representatives in the City Council be interviewed and asked to use every influence at their disposal to have such extension made in the near future."

The above resolution, moved by Mr. George Record and seconded by Mr. Malcolm McIntyre, was unanimously adopted at a meeting of the Ashburnham Ratepayers' Association held in St. Luke's club room last night. Mr. R. B. Rogers, the president, was in the chair, and in the absence of Mr. G. L. Hay, the proceedings were recorded by Mr. Jas Drain. There were about twenty of the leading ratepayers of Ashburnham present. The feeling of the meeting appeared unanimous that the street car line should be extended to the east side, even if the of a high level bridge the line to be built across th at Auburn or across a struct cially put up for the purpose ter street or some other point.

Aldermen Weir and Smith ing their civic work cut out by their constituents. They requested to work for the of Cricket Place from Drisco race. Dan. INVESTIGATION OF CASES FOR HOSPITALS MEANS LESS EXPENSE TO THE CITY

Account for 1916 is $1889 as Against $3166 in 1915---Also Dobbin Will Move For Minimum Income Tax of $10

Ald. Dobbin gave the Finance Committee yesterday afternoon an outline of a motion that he will introduce at the Council meeting on Monday night. The object of the scheme is to make the minimum tax on income $10. At the present time some income tax payers are paying less than the $5 poll tax. It was figured that the city would be able to add considerable to the revenue of the city if the legislature would amend the act.

Centralize Bank Accounts

With the object of increasing the city's borrowing power and to consolidate the banking of the city, the City Trust, the Board of Education and the Utilities Commission will be asked to transfer their accounts to the Bank of Toronto as soon as possible. Then was the tenor of a motion made by Ald. McIntyre and Duncan.

Ald. Stratton explained that it would help the city in many ways if all the accounts were consolidated.

Mayor Duffus thought that too much haste had been made in changing the account and he moved in amendment that the council be asked to reconsider the banking arrangements. Ald. Dobbin seconded the amendment, which was lost on a vote being taken.

Hospital Costs

Relief Officer Miller reported to the committee that in 1916 43 patients had been admitted to the Nicholls Hospital as indigents with an average stay or 26 1-2 days, which cost the city $1138, and $25 of this had been paid back.

The city's hospital bill for 1916 was $1889, compared with $3166 in 1915. This decrease is due to the relief officer supervising the applications for admission.

Recommendations to Council

Ald. Stratton, the chairman, presided at the meeting and the other members present were Mayor Duffus, Ald. Dobbin, McIntyre, Duncan and Weir.

The following recommendations will be made to the Council:—

That a cheque be issued to the Board of Education for the amount of the March demand.

That a copy of the Municipal World be purchased for the city clerk.

That the Peterborough Poultry Association be paid the amount of their grant passed in 1916.

That the application of E. J. Hickey, 765 Bethune St., for an extension of time in which to pay his taxes, be referred to the court of revision.

That a cheque for $25 be sent to L. Joslyn Rogers in payment of his account for $50 for analysis. The City Clerk will send a copy of Mr. Rogers' letter to Coroner Greer for his guidance in future inquests.

That a cheque for $10,000 be sent to the trustees of the Patriotic Fund to cover January and March instalments.

That B. Morrow's account be referred to the City Treasurer and City Solicitor.

The estimates for the Public Library and the Board of Education were filed for reference when the rate is being fixed.

St. Vitus Dance Affects Many Children

This Trouble Can Be Cured Through the Use of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills.

St. Vitus Dance is much more common than is generally imagined. The trouble is often mistaken for mere nervousness or awkwardness. It usually attacks young children, most often between the ages of six and fourteen—though other persons may be affected with it. The most common symptom is twiching of the muscles of the face and limbs. As the disease progresses this twitching takes the form of spasms in which the jerking motion may be confined to the head, or all the limbs may be affected. The patient is frequently unable to hold anything in the hands or walk steadily, and in severe cases the speech may be affected. The disease is due to impoverished nerves, owing to the blood being out of condition and can be cured by the use of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills, which enrich the blood, strengthen the nerves, and in this way restore the sufferer to good health. Any symptom of nerve trouble in young children should be promptly treated as it is almost sure to lead to St. Vitus Dance. The following is proof of the power of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills to cure this trouble. Miss Hattie Cummings, R. R. No. 3, Peterborough, Ont., says: "I was attacked with what the doctor said was St. Vitus Dance. Both my hands trembled so as to be practically useless. Then the trouble went to my left side, and from that to my right leg, and left me in such a condition that I was not able to go out of the house. I took the doctor's medicine without getting any benefit. Then I tried another remedy with the same poor results. At this stage I was advised to try Dr. Williams' Pink Pills and did so, with the result that they fully restored me to health and I have not had the slightest symptom of nervous trouble since. I can recommend these pills to anyone who is suffering from nervous trouble, and hope they will profit by my experience."

You can get Dr. Williams' Pink Pills from any drug dealer or by mail at 50 cents a box or six boxes for $2.50 from The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

$1600 FOR CHIEF HOWARD

It was found that the estimate figured $19,310, and Mayor Duffus fathered a motion that the estimate for the fire department be fixed at $19,000. This carried.

Immediately following this a motion passed that a fireman after eight years' continuous service be given an efficiency badge which carries with it an increase of 10c per day, and another at the end of 15 years' service, which carries an additional 10c per day increase. The members of the department in point of seniority are Jamieson, Ward, Tennison, McDonald, Meehan.

Will Deduct the Freight

In December the Council authorized the purchase of 12,000 feet of hose from the Canada Consolidated Rubber Co. The price given was f.o.b. here, but the company forgot to pay the freight so the payment of their bill was $1200, less the charges was ordered.

Fire Chief's Letter.

Chief Howard's letter to the committee was as follows:

I am still finding it difficult to secure the services of suitable men to work at the fire station.

Alderman F. H. Dobbin, the chairman of your board, has asked me to make a report to you in detail, so that the gentlemen of the committee may be familiar with the conditions as they are.

The condition of the labor market seems to change about every three months during the past two years and the price of foodstuffs seems to increase with every change of the moon. These are conditions over which we have no control; they are certainly abnormal, but some action should be taken to meet them as they are.

I have always tried to refrain from urging increases in salaries, as I do not want to be placed in the light of a labor agitator. I have not even asked to have my own salary increased, in the hope that the Council would do so without my asking, but I find I must press for a good substantial increase.

On April 4th, 1916, I made a report to the committee, drawing attention to the fact that it was difficult to get good men for fire department work.

On May 29th the firemen asked and received an increase of 24 cents a day all around, except the Chief and watchman, making the wages for firemen as follows:

First year ..... $1.88 per day
Second year .... $2.09 per day
Third year ..... $2.29 per day

We all thought this would suffice to put the department in good shape but with the constant change in conditions generally, we find ourselves no better off than we were this time last year.

To give you some idea of what it has meant, I have prepared a statement, which you will please find attached. This statement gives you the standing of the department on Jan 1st, 1916. Between this period and May 15th, out of a staff of sixteen men, one man died, three enlisted and six resigned, leaving the department with only six trained men.

Between May 15th, 1916, and Feb. 15th, 1917, we have engaged forty-two men at different times in an endeavor to keep the staff filled.

The Assistant Chief and I have bargained with a great many men to start work who never turned up.

W. A. HOWARD,
Chief, Fire Dept.

ANOTHER TALK WILL BE GIVEN BY LT. BRITTAIN

SECOND BATTLE OF YPRES AT Y.M.C.A. SUNDAY AFTERNOON.

(By "Y." Scribe.)

Lieut. A. E. Brittain will address the Y. M. C. A. meeting on Sunday afternoon at 4:15 o'clock. Subject The Second Battle of Ypres. This is the second address Lieut. Brittain has favored the Y. M. C. A. with this year. The largest attendance of the season was present on Lieut. Brittain's last appearance. We trust that another record attendance will be present to hear the lieutenant on Sunday. It is also expected that John James of the 247th Bn. Band will be present to furnish special music on the saxaphone.

The young men of the gymnasium classes are hard at work preparing for the exhibition to be given the second week in April. This will be one of the greatest events put on by our physical department in recent years, and should be attended by every friend of the young men.

The meeting of the Senior Collegiate Club, which was to have been held last evening with Mr. Wearing as speaker, was postponed one week on account of the entertainment in the Collegiate Hall.

A number of new cues and other billiard equipment have been ordered for our game room, which, it is expected, will increase the interest in the social department.

A shipment of magaiznes for our soldiers overseas will be made March 10th, so any friends will confer a favor on our boys in khaki by leaving magazines at the local Y.M.C.A before the date mentioned. These magazines are for general circulation, no packages for individuals being accepted.

No Potato Embargo

Members of the Cabinet declare that there is no truth in the story published to the effect that the Government would put an embargo on the export of potatoes. The question has not yet been considered by the Government. Officials of the Department of Agriculture state that there is no serious shortage of potatoes in Canada.

Economy

Many women think they are saving money by buying cheap tea, forgetting that it is not the cost per pound but the cost per cup that determines a tea's economy.

You may pay 5 or 10 cents more per pound for Red Rose Tea than for common tea. But because Red Rose Tea is a blend of Indian-Assam teas with Ceylons, consisting of the choice tender shoots and buds the parts of the tea plant that yield the largest amount of liquor and the finest flavor—one-third less is required in the pot to make the same number of cups.

The cost per cup between Red Rose Tea and common tea is then practically the same. But the flavor—what a difference!

RED ROSE TEA
RED ROSE TEA is good tea

And this distinctive and delightful flavor and rich strength is protected by the Red Rose sealed package. No air, odors or dust can get in to injure Red Rose Tea's splendid quality and economy.

STUDENTS OF COLLEGIATE GIVE SUCCESSFUL CONCERT

Heroes From Institute Will Be Held in Memory

Photos on Walls

The students of the Collegiate Institute scored a splendid success in their concert given in the Assembly Hall last night. Three hundred and eighty-five tickets were taken at the door and as there are other returns to be made, the proceeds for the ex-student memorial fund will be highly satisfactory. The proceeds will be used exclusively for the purpose of providing enlarged and framed photographs of the young men who went out from the Peterborough Collegiate Institute, to play their part in the conflict in Europe, and who in the performance of that duty, laid down their lives.

Three of the photographs now on the walls of the third floor of the school are those of former students who have won decorations. Two of them remain on duty; the other, Lt. Arthur Ackerman, died of wounds. There are twenty-five enlargements on the walls and as one gazes at the fine young types of manhood they represent, he is impressed with the awfulness of war and the sacrifices made.

The photographs now on the walls are:—

Lieut. Stanley Pringle, killed in action, 1916.

Major George Bennett, killed in action, 1915.

Lieut. F. W. Morris, killed in action, 1916.

Trooper Merton Adams, died while in training, 1915.

Pte. Charles A. W. (Barker) Dean killed in action, 1915.

Pte. Cecil Feeny, killed in action, 1916.

George Minorgan, killed; Heber Rogers, prisoner of war; Billy Gibson, killed; presented by P.C.I.A.A., 1914-15.

Capt. Robert McCamus Fair, killed in action, 1916.

Lieut. Stewart Laing, killed in action, 1916.

Trooper Trevor Cuffe, killed in action, 1916.

Corp. Angus McIntosh, killed in action, 1916.

Sergt. G. M. Smith, killed in action, 1916.

Trooper Sydney Smith, killed in action, 1916.

Pte. M. K. Smith, died while in training, 1915.

Sapper Stuart Anderson, killed in action, 1916.

Corp. Herb. Carpenter, killed in action, 1915.

Pte. Jas. English, killed in action, 1916.

Pte. George Read, killed in action, 1916.

Lieut. Harold S. Matthews, killed in action, 1916.

Lieut. Arthur R. Ackerman, Military Cross, died of wounds, 1916.

Capt. Garnet Greer, M.D., Military Cross, 1916.

Lieut. J. Reginald Stratton, R.E., Military Cross, 1916

Lt. G. Stanley Fife, Rhodes Scholar, killed in action, 1916.

The concert was opened by the Collegiate Orchestra under the baton of Mr. Otto Gliddon, playing the National Anthem, after which Mr. John Crane made a brief address in which he stated the purpose of the concert and commended the principal, staff and students for the work they have in hand.

Capt. J. H. Burnham, M.P., who also addressed the audience, said of the young men from the Collegiate who had made the supreme sacrifice: Ages indeed, may elapse, but their memory will never fade. It is a great and solemn honor to assist in an occassion of this kind, he said. In presenting to the Institute a piece of ruined Ypres and a cartridge shell from a gun in the Canadian lines, Capt. Burnham related some incidents from the front, eulogizing the Canadians for their great work.

Two playets, "The Obstinate Family" and "A Camp Fire Scene," given by the students, were well acted, the young ladies in the family squabbles being particularly good. Life incidental to camping out at Stoney Lake was presented in the Camp Fire Scene. The casts were:

"An Obstinate Family"

Henry Harford—Beaford Belcher

Jessie Harford, his wife — Gretchen Gladman.

Mr. Harwood, father-in-law—Halliday Crane.

Mrs. Harwood, mother-in-law — Phyllis Young.

James, Harford's butler — Harry Smith.

Lucy, maid—Clare Mason.

"Camp Fire Scene"

L. Conway, H. Austin, D. Canniff, W. Mowat, G. McClelland, C. Donoghue, C. Flowers, O. Gliddon, M. Kirn, H. Skuce, H. Carte.

Miss Dorothy Allan, Dr. Park and the orchestra contributed vocal and instrumental selections to the great enjoyment of the audience.

Sunday School Association

At a meeting of the executive of the Peterborough Sunday School Association held at the Y.M.C.A. last night, it was decided to hold the annual convention on Tuesday, March 13. Wearing Rubbers during the Spring Months of Slush and Wet Saves more than their Cost and Protects the Health as well

It is only recently that the high retail prices of most commodities are being felt. The higher cost of living as a result of the war, is now manifesting itself in EVERY walk of life.

Shoe dealers throughout Canada must get more for our rubbers than during the past few years. The cost of production has been steadily increasing and the dealer's expense of doing business is greater.

To-day crude rubber is fully one-third higher than before the war, and doubled freights, abnormal insurance and the war tax have made it more expensive laid down at our factories. Other materials, including cottons, cashmerettes, jersey, linings, dyes and chemicals cost on an average 75% more. Labor, too, is away up, and so scarce that there is difficulty in keeping up a normal production.

The increased prices of our rubbers—small indeed compared with other articles of wearing apparel and of food—have been made imperative by the steadily growing cost of manufacturing.

As the quality and reputation of our brands of rubbers must be maintained at all costs, we have been compelled to advance our prices. So when your dealer asks you a little more, it does not mean that either he or the manufacturer is taking advantage of war time, but rather that both are reluctantly yielding to necessity.

In proportion to the cost of other necessities, the prices of our brands of rubbers are reasonable—and more economical when compared with the far greater increases in shoe prices. The regular use of rubbers saves many times their slightly increased cost, and protects the health as well.

To be sure of full value and maximum service, look for the assurance of quality given by any one of these Trade Marks:

LITERARY RAMBLES

I have heard of men and women who have set themselves to the task of writing an article or an editorial without the faintest idea of what they were going to write about. It used to be a marvel to me how they managed to do it and be enabled to get their thoughts in the right train to accomplish a task which to outward seeming requires at least some preparatory labor. To be frank, at this moment I am in the same case, with absolutely nothing thought out and with no idea as to what direction my wayward wits may take me. Yet I have but to glance at the shelves as I stand at my desk, and the whole problem is solved. There, mute, yet speaking stand rows upon rows of books, embodying the thoughts of living and dead. Men and women who were once leaders in intellect and who in their own time helped to fashion politcs and to raise the standard of human life are there represented, as also are those who explored the fields of science or philosophy. Good and bad are there, but even the best of them would long ago have been forgotten had it not been for the mysterious power of the printed page. But the art of printing has become so much part and parcel of our economic life that we have ceased to think much about it, just as we have ceased to marvel over the wonders of the telephone, the telegraph or the wireless inventions of Marconi. I sometimes think that we make a mistake in living so much in the present in the whirl and rush of existence so much time is taken up in devising ways and means of bettering ourselves that we have little or none for a backward glance at the road along which we have advanced to civilization. If we did so we should find ample cause for a thankfulness that is at present foreign to most of our hearts, and would look with gratitude and pride on the books that line the shelves of our public libraries. For it is from them we learn what we owe to the generations that have gone before us. But the books that are most sought out and read in a library are not the books that are the most helpful. Fiction is good to read, but the reading that Bacon said "maketh a full man" is on the shelves that are seldom troubled with, as the flooring alongside them and the covers of the books themselves only too clearly testify.

The Past at Our Doors.

As I write this, there comes to my mind the title of a little book that has reposed on our shelves for over a year, and in that period has only been taken out once. It is entitled "The Past at Our Doors." It is written by a master of English, W. W. Skeat, and deals with the story of our food, our costume and our homes. To say that it is interesting is to put it mildly. There are many items of information in it that whilst they may cause a feeling of humility in the breasts of the haughty, carry their own antidote in thankfulness for present advantages. Take, for instance, in the matter of table manners. In Canute's time there was a law in vogue that allowed the throwing of bones at any unfortunate who sat out of his right place at table. The dinner-fork was not introduced till 1608, and the man who introduced it was held up to execration as offering "an insult to Providence. Who had given us fingers." In ancient days the table cloth was simply a skin of a wild beast spread on the ground. At Glastonbury in ancient days the lord of the manor found his men in food on Christmas Day, but he made the order that "every man shall take with him a plate, mug and napkin, if he wishes to eat off a cloth, and a faggot of brushwood to cook his food, unless he would have it raw." Ploughs at one time were drawn at the horse's tail, and this itself was an improvement on the older fashion of digging up the earth with a piece of pointed wood. If we search further through this very interesting and instructive little book we shall find much to show us how man has progressed and how much he owes to the brains and the labors of his ancestors. In some instances, sad to relate, be seems to have retrograded rather than advanced, but in the main he has made vast strides, and his intellect, not content with pursuing its researches on earth, has mounted to the heavens and explored many of the wonders there.

When we turn to the matter of food we find, even in the present high cost of living, much to be content with as compared with prices of former days, and a good deal more to be content with in the matter of the ingredients that enter into our food. Tea, in 1651, cost ten sovereigns a pound. Treacle was a vile compound made up of opium spices, licorice, red roses, aloes and the essence of vipers steeped alive in white wine. Sugar was quite as hard to get in those days in England as it is now, for the price was prohibitive to all but the very wealthy. In its place honey was used for sweetening purposes.

Queen Bess' High Heels.

In the chapters on costume there is much to interest us also It is curious to note how national characteristics come out in the costume and what changes have taken place, not so much in fashions as in the customs of peoples. Tight-lacing is an old habit and is mentioned by Chaucer. High heels are not by any means an innovation of these latter days, for we know that Queen Elizabeth wore them two and a half inches high. If she had lived two hundred years later she would have been liable to incur the deadliest animosity of her subjects, for in 1770 there was a law passed forbidding the use of scepts, paints, cosmetics, high-heeled shoes, false hair, and even artificial teeth, under the penalty of the "laws against witchcraft, sorcery and all of such-like misdemeanors," and it was provided further that if any of His Majesty's male subjects were "betrayed" into marriage by any such acts as these, the marriage, in the case of a conviction, should be void.

It will be news to many that in the good days of old, somewhere about the year 1306, a man was put to death for burning sea-coal in London, the belief being that in so doing he caused danger to others by suffocation. The general use of coal, in fact, only dates from the reign of William the Third.

Surely there is interesting matter enough in literature of this sort, not to speak of the romantic stories of travel and adventure, the descriptions of scientific discoveries, and the lives of those who have been instrumental in making them to offer a pabulum, that, in the truest sense of the term, will make a "full man."

Advises $100,000 Grant.

The civic finance committee on Thursday night unanimously decided to recommend to the city council of Quebec voting the sum of $100,000 as the city's subscription to the campaign which will be made next week in favor of the Patriotic Fund and the Red Cross Society.

EVEN CHILDREN ON CASUALTY LISTS.

To the miseries of destitution in killing and wounding by shells of Belgium are too often added actual non-combatants. To us in Canada it would hardly be conceivable that a little girl of nine, like this one in the accompanying photograph, should be suffering from the hideous wounds inflicted by a "Jack Johnson," were it not a matter of almost daily report that just such things are taking place wherever the German can make his long arm reach.

Fortunately for the Belgians, homeless, penniless and often actually wounded, there are still devoted people who are willing to give up their own personal comfort to minister to the needy in truly Christian style. Such are the nuns, shown here, who, with thousands of their sisters, have braved all the horrors of war to carry material and spiritual succor to the helpless. Theirs will be a bright chapter in the history of this war. They have lived up to the traditions of their faith in a conflict where not even religious ground is sacred to the invading German

More splendid work cannot be done and that it has been possible to accomplish it is due in large measure to the support given the cause by Canada and the other allied nations and by the neutrals. The committee is confident that this support will continue so long as the need continues, which will be until the Germans are driven from the conquered territory. So they appeal with confidence now to Canadians to remember that the need is at least as great as ever, and that only by their help can a nation be saved from starvation Contributions of any size will be received at the Belgian Relief Committee headquarters at 59 St. Peter Street, Montreal, or at the branches in all communities or districts.

MARKET PRICES

PETERBOROUGH MARKETS

Eggs are gradually coming down to a normal price. This morning the general price was 45c, with plenty to be had at 43c. Butter was in good supply, but the price was unchanged at 45c. The quality of fowl offered was very poor, and at that the prices realized were very high. Several turkeys were on sale at 30c per lb. while chickens brought 25c for choice ones and 22c for ordinary. Hens sold readily at 22c and 23c lb.

On the outside market beef was plentiful and sold at 15c for fronts and 16c to 17c for hinds.

Several loads of vegetables found a quick sale. One farmer had a load of potatoes, which he sold at 65c a peck, and they went very rapidly.

Hogs remain steady.

John Mervin bought ten lambs yesterday at $12 per hundred, market weight.

PAY DAY AT THE FRONT

Tommy Gets His Pay Once a Week Unless Actually Fighting.

The splendidly organized Pay Department of the British army enables the troops in the firing line to draw their money each week as regularly as if they were in the barracks. Each important base has its regimental pay office controlled by a chief paymaster. Under him are a number of field cashiers whose duties consist of making their way into the firing line with the troops' wages. The field cashiers are provided with a guard whilst travelling, generally by motor car, between the base and the trenches. The regimental officers take charge of the wads of French notes with which "Tommy" is paid, and when possible they arrange to issue the money every Saturday. Often a regiment continually engaged in the firing line receives its pay at odd intervals when there is a lull in the fighting, or at night time.

Every soldier carries a pay book in which is entered the amount paid to him. The authorities keep a record on what is known as the acquittance roll, which later is forwarded to the paymaster-in-chief at the base, and eventually it finds its way back to the Army Pay Department in England. "Tommy's" pay book is one of his most precious possessions. If he loses it he is not allowed to draw pay prior to the date of reporting his loss. The pay books are largely used by soldiers when making their wills.

All documents connected with the payment of soldiers at the front are returned to the "fixed centre" pay offices in England, and they are checked by the Army Pay Department. This is a magnificent organization, employing 700 officers and 7,000 clerks skilled in the intricate details of military accountancy. The pay department also handles the allowances made to soldiers' wives and dependents. The post bag of the department is enormous, for thousands of letters of inquiry are addressed to the officials every week, from puzzled members of the public.

Turkish Prison Isles

The Princess Islands, in the Sea of Marmora, now said to have been fortified for the defense of Constantinople, have been a place of exile in all ages. In Byzantine times the savage Empress Irene was shut up in a nunnery upon Prinkipo, the chief island. At the time of the young Turk revolution the worst officials of the Yildiz gang were interned there, though they were politely termed "guests of the isle." And afterward the Marmora Islands became the dumping ground of the wretched dogs of Constantinople, which the reformers did not care directly to put to death, though they had no scruples about leaving them to starve and perish of hunger tempered by cannibalism.

Cheering up the Prisoners

A newspaper sheet in English is published for the English prisoners of war in Germany. It is full of stories of German victories. The great joy of the English soldiers on receipt of this journal is to tear it into bits and shout "Deutsche kaput!" ("Germans smashed up!").

Russian Ports

Four out of the five great ports of Russia—Petrograd (formerly St. Petersburg), Reval, Libau, and Riga—are situated on the Baltic Sea. Of these, only Riga is an open port all the year round, the others being icebound for from four to five months.

Naval and Army Reserve

The Naval Reserve differs from the Army Reserve in the fact that its members need not have served in the navy. Practically every able seaman, or man with equivalent qualifications, can join the Naval Reserve, on specified conditions.

A Use For Old Warship

The old warship Britannia is to be used as a service training school for complements of 300 fatherless boys, some being sons of soldiers and sailors who have lost their lives in the present war.

The Food Limit

The German Reichstag appointed a commission to consider the food question in relation to the human body, with a view to determining the exact limit of what is absolutely necessary for the nourishment of each individual.

Recruits Wanted for Production

Just as surely as lack of food is strangling Germany day by day, so plenty of food is winning the victory for the allies. The French armies, for instance, were never better fed than now, for France cannot forget the awful lesson of 1870—the failure of her food supply. To this she attributed the loss of that war.

To feed the French soldiers around Verdun, more than 25,500,000 pounds of food a week were required. This gives a faint idea of the colossal task of feeding an army. Canada and Britain have a huge army of fighting heroes on the line; every man MUST have plenty of food, in spite of a world shortage. Upon Canada's food production all principally rely.

The Farmers of Ontario Urgently Need Help

The Department of Agriculture appeals to men and boys to enlist in the farm help campaign. The Department appeals to men unfit for military service, or who find it impossible to enlist in the army. Do your "bit" by helping to increase production of foodstuffs. This is your hour of opportunity.

The farmers of Ontario need the help of retired farmers, of men following no occupation (retired), of business men who can spare a portion of their time. We appeal to all who can so arrange their ordinary affairs to plan to help some farmer friend, particularly in seed time and harvest.

Confer with your county District Representative of the Department of Agriculture, or write, "Farm Help Campaign," care Department of Agriculture, Toronto.

BEFORE ADAM

By JACK LONDON

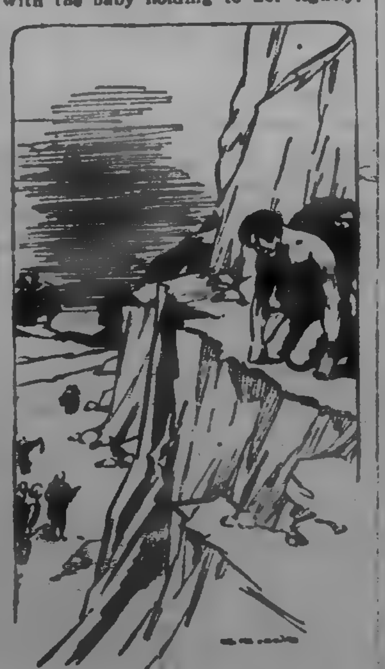
Copyright, 1907, by the MacMillan company.

Behind the Fire People I could see the little wizened old hunter directing it all. They obeyed him and went here and there at his commands. Some of them went into the forest and returned with loads of dry wood, leaves and grass. All the Fire People drew in closer. While most of them stood by with bows and arrows, ready to shoot any of the folk that exposed themselves, several of the fire men heaped the dry grass and wood at the mouths of the lower tier of caves. Out of these heaps they conjured the monster we feared—fire! At first wisps of smoke arose and curled up the cliff. Then I could see the red tongued flames darting in and out through the wood like tiny snakes. The smoke grew thicker and thicker, at times shrouding the whole face of the cliff. But I was high up, and it did not bother me much, though it stung my eyes, and I rubbed them with my knuckles.

Old Marrow Bone was the first to be smoked out. A light fan of air drifted the smoke away at the time so that I saw clearly. He broke out through the smoke, stepping on a burning coal and screaming with the sudden hurt of it, and essayed to climb up the cliff. The arrows showered about him. He came to a pause on a ledge, clutching a knob of rock for support, gasping and sneezing and shaking his head. He swayed back and forth. The feathered ends of a dozen arrows were sticking out of him. He was an old man, and he did not want to die. He swayed wider and wider, his knees giving under him, and as he swayed he wailed most plaintively. His hand released its grip, and he lurched outward to the fall. His old bones must have been sadly broken. He groaned and strove feebly to rise, but a fire man rushed in upon him and brained him with a club.

And as it happened with Marrow Bone so it happened with many of the folk. Unable to endure the smoke suffocation, they rushed out to fall beneath the arrows. Some of the women and children remained in the caves to strangle to death, but the majority met death outside.

When the fire men had in this fashion cleared the first tier of caves they began making arrangements to duplicate the operation on the second tier of caves. It was while they were climbing up with their grass and wood that Red Eye, followed by his wife, with the baby holding to her tightly, made a successful flight up the cliff. The fire men must have concluded that in the interval between the smoking out operations we would remain in our caves, so that they were unprepared, and their arrows did not begin to fly till Red Eye and his wife were well up the wall. When he reached the top he turned about and glared down at them, roaring and beating his chest. They arched their arrows at him, and, though he was untouched, he fled on.



No One of Us Knew the Extent of the Calamity That Was Befalling Us.

I watched a third tier smoked out and a fourth. A few of the folk escaped up the cliff, but most of them were shot off the face of it as they strove to climb. I remember Long Lip. He got as far as my ledge, crying piteously, an arrow clear through his chest, the feathered shaft sticking out behind, the bone head sticking out before, shot through the back as he climbed. He sank down on my ledge, bleeding profusely at the mouth.

It was about this time that the upper tiers seemed to empty themselves spontaneously. Nearly all the folk not yet smoked out stampeded up the cliff at the same time. This was the saving of many. The Fire People could not shoot arrows fast enough. They filled the air with arrows and scores of the stricken folk came tumbling down, but still there were a few who reached the top and got away.

The impulse of flight was now stronger in me than curiosity. The arrows had ceased flying. The last of the folk seemed gone, though there may have been a few still hiding in the upper caves. The Swift One and I started to make a scramble for the clifftop. At sight of us a great cry went up from the Fire People. This was not caused by me, but by the Swift One. They were chattering excitedly and pointing her out to one another. They did not try to shoot her. Not an arrow was discharged. They began calling softly and coaxingly. I stopped and looked down. She was afraid and whimpered and urged me on. So we went up over the top and plunged into the trees.

This event has often caused me to wonder and speculate. If she were really of their kind she must have been lost from them at a time when she was too young to remember, else would she not have been afraid of them. On the other hand, it may well have been that, while she was their kind, she had never been lost from them; that she had been born in the wild forest far from their haunts, her father maybe a renegade fire man, her mother may be one of my own kind, one of the folk. But who shall say? These things are beyond me, and the Swift One knew no more about them than did I.

We lived through a day of terror. Most of the survivors fled toward the blueberry swamp and took refuge in the forest in that neighborhood. And all day hunting parties of the Fire People ranged the forest, killing us wherever they found us. It must have been a deliberately executed plan. Increasing beyond the limits of their own territory, they had decided on making a conquest of ours. Sorry the conquest. We had no chance against them. It was slaughter, indiscriminate slaughter, for they spared none, killing old and young, effectively ridding the land of our presence.

It was like the end of the world to us. We fled to the trees as a last refuge, only to be surrounded and killed, family by family. We saw much of this during that day, and, besides, I wanted to see. The Swift One and I never remained long in one tree, and so escaped being surrounded. But there seemed no place to go. The fire men were everywhere, bent on their task of extermination. Every way we turned we encountered them and because of this we saw much of their handiwork.

WOMAN RUNS A HUGE FARM

Scientific Management and Hard Work Brought Merited Success.

Mrs. Clark W. Kelley is the owner and manager of a 1,000-acre farm on the Banks of Devil's Lake, North Dakota. She built "Beach Place," a beautiful country home, and farms her thousand acres scientifically and successfully.

Recently she was made vice-president of the International Farm Women's Association, and she is also the president of the section for women who manage their own farms.

She works on the theory that the only way to prove that a thing can be done is to do it, and if it is a success others will follow.

Her farm was one of the first Dakota farms to have an alfalfa field on it. Mrs. Kelley took the farm over when the fertility had all been worked out of the soil. She used up-to-date agricultural methods of scientific farmers, except in such cases as she proved some of her own experiments better.

MRS. CLARK W. KELLEY

She has won out. Her farm is a great success. Her farmhouse is one of the prettiest and most comfortable in North Dakota.

Push, pluck and perseverance, she declares, play a nice little part in any successful undertaking.

AMUSING THE LITTLE ONES

It is not very difficult to keep the children busy and happy at home during the evening if a little careful thought is given the matter by the grown ups.

Just one general thing must be observed. If the boys and girls have homework to do, this must be done before they start to spend the evening in any other way; otherwise, it probably will not get done at all.

Dolls and soldiers—those ever popular children's toys—offer endless ways of making time fly.

Start new ways of playing with them—play which has an undercurrent of usefulness. For example, you can have a doll's washing night once a week, when the children learn how to wash dolly's clothes in the right way. The latter part is important.

Instead of letting the children make a great mess with soap and water, mother should tell them how it is done—guide them in the intricacies of washing fine things; show the difference in washing flannels and cotton things; teach them how to starch and iron things, and so on. The children will love doing it, and at the same time they will be learning something that will be of the very greatest use to them in later life.

Dolly also can have a party, which will teach the children the simple laws of hospitality; while if Dolly happens to be ill there is an excellent opportunity for learning how to behave in a sick room.

With soldiers, "playing battles" rarely fails to charm and can be developed to a large extent. Even a camp may be started and the order of camp life instilled into the children—a help in the formation of endurance and reliance in their character.

It is quite a good plan to teach boys and girls cooking. Give them a weekly lesson, and let them have a weekly practice night "on their own." Make a rule that they put away all the things they use when they are finished and see that the cooking is done correctly. It is just as much fun as doing it in the wrong way, and gives far more all-round pleasure.

It seems to be always a good thing to encourage the spirit of thoughtfulness for others in children; and it is rather a nice idea to have occasional long evenings devoted to doing things for children who are worse off than themselves. All sorts of odds and ends—matchboxes, spools, and what not—can be turned into delightful toys by the children, and will give much pleasure to some poor child.

Scrapbooks, too, can be made with this idea in view. Scrapbook boxes can be kept right through the year, for the collection of suitable pictures from all sorts of sources, and then scrapbook making nights can be held during the winter—and the beauty of this employment is that all children can take a part in it. The very youngest can select the pictures, another can cut out, another paste in, another make paste, and so on.

A Final Inducement.

He—So you insist on breaking off the engagement?

She—Most decidedly. What do you take me for?

He—Oh, about forty. Better think it over. It may be your last chance.

The straight and narrow path is all to the good, but you'll find the biggest crowd on the great white boulevard.

CHILD SAVING VITAL AFTER PRESENT WAR

Statistics Show How English Birth Rate Declines While the Best Are Being Killed off.

W. C. Faulkner writes in the London Weekly Despatch, as follows: Every year the war lasts the natural increase of the population is declining by 120,000—the babies who would have been but for the war. I wonder whether the people of this country have ever realized that in the ten years before the war 400,000 fewer babies were born in this country than in the previous ten years; that out of something like 870,000 babies born each year in England and Wales, 95,000 die before they reach the age of one year, and that 20,000 die every year almost immediately after they are born?

Out of every twenty children born eleven are boys. At the end of the year the proportion is almost reversed, and as the months and years go by it is completely reversed. The boys are more difficult to rear than the girls. The war is working in a hundred ways against infant life. The expectant mother, even if she has neither son nor husband at the front, cannot escape war-wearing anxiety which affects her health. The demand for female labor, here, there, everywhere, is exacting another toll from the mother, the mother to be, and from the children themselves.

Cost of Living High

In the long-suffering, uncomplaining classes who live on salaries instead of wages, there is a bitter struggle to provide the children with sufficient and nourishing food. Where a pound a week provided all that was necessary before the war thirty shillings will not do it to-day.

The war effects of 1915 increased the death roll of children under a year old by nearly 9,000. Every week that year 1,000 babies under one year of age died in the ninety-six great towns of the kingdom. And present signs point to an increase in the death roll. There must be something wrong where one baby dies to every two persons who die after passing the age of 65. It has been said that every baby born has a potential value to the State of $500. If, therefore, 50,000 die before they reach the age of one there is a prospective loss to the State of $25,000,000.

Must Look Ahead

In 1926 the boy babies born in one war year who live till then, will be of military age. If all lived there would be 450,000 young men of military age, and 420,000 young women of marriageable age. The survival and marriage of even half this number should by 1936 increase the population by at least three-quarters of a million. The wastage of war in the field is the wastage of the flower of our manhood, physically, and spiritually, and is bound to have a bad effect on the physical and moral well-being of the next generation.

If the problem of saving the children is a great one now, it will become a greater one in the near future, not only because of a lowering of the standard of the physical fitness of the parents, but because we stand in need of more man power to make good the losses occasioned by war. We dare not, if we wish to hold our Empire, neglect the work of child-saving. We must not be misled by the huge German casualty lists. If war wastage in Germany is far greater than ours, her birth rate is also far greater.

Teething Time A Time of Worry

When baby is teething is a time of worry to most mothers. Baby's little gums become swollen and tender; he becomes cross; does not sleep well; is greatly troubled with constipation, colic or diarrhoea and sometimes even convulsions seize him. During this period nothing can equal the use of Baby's Own Tablets. They regulate the bowels and stomach and make the teething so easy that the mother scarcely realizes baby is getting his teeth. Concerning the Tablets Mrs. Arthur Archibald, New Town, N. S., writes: "I used Baby's Own Tablets when baby was getting his teeth and I found them an excellent medicine." The Tablets are sold by medicine dealers or by mail at 25 cents a box from The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

Tapioca Custard

To one quart of milk add three-quarters cup of minute tapioca. (If pearl is used, it must soak two hours in cold water then drained before adding to the milk.) Put in double boiler and cook twenty minutes. Beat three eggs with two-thirds cup sugar, even teaspoon of salt until light and creamy. Stir gradually into the hot mixture. Add one tablespoon of butter and flavoring desired. Turn into well buttered pudding pan and bake twenty-five minutes in slow oven. Serve with cream or foamy sauce.

Lamb Chops

Trim chops, dredge with flour and little salt; put in skillet or baking pan; sprinkle with roquefort cheese and bits of butter; turn once just before putting in oven. One cup of tomato for each three chops. Bake 30 minutes and serve with baked potatoes.

One ounce of Epsom salts added to a gallon of water makes an excellent rinsing mixture for colored blouses and washing dresses.

Start Tomorrow and Keep It Up Every Morning

We're not here long, so let's make our stay agreeable. Let us live well, eat well, digest well, work well sleep well and look well. what a glorious condition to attain. and yet, how very easy it is if one will only adopt the morning inside bath.

Folks who are accustomed to feel dull and heavy when they arise, splitting headache, stuffy from a cold foul tongue, nasty breath, acid stomach, can, instead, feel as fresh as a daisy by opening the sluices of the system each morning and flushing out the whole of the internal poisonous stagnant matter.

Everyone, whether ailing, sick or well, should, each morning, before breakfast, drink a glass of real hot water with a teaspoonful of limestone phosphate in it to wash from the stomach, liver and bowels the previous day's indigestible waste, sour bile, and poisonous toxins; thus cleansing, sweetening and purifying the entire alimentary canal before putting more food into the stomach. The action of hot water and limestone phosphate on an empty stomach is wonderfully invigorating. It cleans out all the sour fermentations, gases, waste, and acidity, and gives one a splendid appetite for breakfast. While you are enjoying your breakfast, the water and phosphate is quietly extracting a large volume of water from the blood and getting ready for a thorough flushing of all the inside organs.

The millions of people who are bothered with constipation, bilious spells, stomach trouble; others who have sallow skins, blood disorders and sickly complexions are urged to get a quarter pound of limestone phosphate from the drug store. This will cost very little, but is sufficient to make anyone a pronounced crank on the subject of inside-bathing before breakfast.

AMERICAN TOURISTS IN CALIFORNIA RETURN BY CANADIAN ROUTES

C. E. McJherson, assistant passenger traffic manager of the western lines of the Canadian Pacific Railway left for San Francisco and Los Angeles recently to arrange accommodation for many of the 100,000 American tourists now visiting California who will return over the Canadian Pacific Railway lines from Vancouver and Seattel. They will cross the Canadian Rockies and the western prairies to Winnipeg, thence to their homes in Chicago, New York, Boston and other eastern cities.

"Already the tide of the winter tourist traffic from the east, middle west and northwest has reached a higher point than ever before, and the maximum gauge has not been attained," said Mr. McPherson.

Twenty-five per cent. more tourists have gone to Southern California since the season opened two months ago than during the corresponding months of 1915—exposition year—according to official records, Mr. McPherson asserted.

The most illuminative record of visitors in Los Angeles and the many resort cities to the southwest is provided by reports issued by hotelmen and apartment house proprietors These men say that all hotelas and sixty per cent. of the apartment houses are filled to capacity.

All the railroads running into Los Angeles have been running extra trains for thirty days, according to Mr. McPherson. It is estimated that between $27,000,000 and $30,000,000 will be spent by tourists in California this season.

VON TIRPITZ TRIUMPHS OVER MORE HUMANE HUNS; CAUSE GROWING DESPERATE

ADMIRAL VON TIRPITZ has triumphed. His original campaign of submarine ruthlessness has been adopted in spite of the protests of the more humane Germans. The people of Canada are naturally asking what light does the policy of U-boat frightfulness throw on German opinion of the military situation in Europe. "The decision of the war is still pending," said the Prussian Minister of War recently. Here is confession from an authoritative source that the assertion of victory on which Bethmann-Hollweg's offer of December 12 was expressly based was only pretence. It is true that in Germany's official notification of ruthless sea warfare the avowed aim is to shorten the war, to bring it to an end, to demonstrate an established fact to the Allied mind. But when von Stein speaks of a decision still pending, he says plainly what the German editors have been saying, that Germany has still to win the war. The inference is plain that on land the war has not yet been won and cannot be won. It is a startling admission that Hindenburg has failed—Hindenburg, to whom the German people turned as the sole hope of victory; Hindenburg, who was to bring the war back to its true purpose, an assault upon Russia and the establishment of Berlin Bagdad; Hindenburg, who began so well with the conquest of Roumania. On the morrow of this impressive victory, with the German people aglow over the realization of the dream of Middle-Europe, comes this apparent abandonment of the high hopes of the last half-year, the apparent recognition that not in the east or the southeast is the much talked-of decision to be had, but after all, on the sea. At the height of Hindenburg's prestige Hindenburg makes way for Tirpitz.

ADMIRAL VON TIRPITZ

A swift decision—that has been the aim towards which German efforts have been directed from the first, now on this side and then on the other. To win a decision the German armies invaded Belgium. To win a decision they stormed at the British lines before Ypres on the way to Calais. Mackensen was to force a decision in the spring of 1915 when he pressed forward into Russia. Mackensen was to win a decision once more in Servia. The Crown Prince strove for a decision around Verdun And finally Hindenburg was called in. So regularly did these successive campaigns begin with the expression of confidence that at last the decision was in sight, and so regularly did they fail, that at last the outside world was forced to the belief that Berlin's confidence was only pretended. From a swift, unmistakable decision Berlin came down to academic discussion on the basis of the "war map." By means of area and population figures Germany tried to show that the Allies were beaten, and the only difficulty was that the Allies refused to admit it. Reason had to attempt the demonstration of a military truth which the armies of the Central Powers were not quite able to drive home. Bethmann-Hollweg's argument at first was that Germany having won the war, it was not for her to talk of peace. By last December his argument had become that Germany having won the war she could afford to broach the subject of peace. Now that the Allies have rejected the discussion of peace, it appears that the war is not won after all.

If Germany's latest bid for decisive victory did not carry with it such extraordinary implications, it would be natural to conclude that the German statesmen and war-leaders are at heart not much more confident of forcing a decision on the sea than they have been in their earlier undertakings. It might be said right out that they are no more confident of starving England into submission than they were of forcing France to a separate peace after taking Verdun, and certainly not as confident as they were of forcing Russia to a separate peace after overrunning Roumania. But in the present instance Germany seems prepared to take such enormous risks that inevitably the question arises whether, this time, the Kaiser really is not confident of attaining the swift decision he has been striving for these two years and a half. Yet rational opinion refuses to recognize the probability of the starving of England. Other explanations have therefore been sought. Is it desperation? Or is it an attempt to make surrender easier by bringing the whole world against Germany? Or is it an attempt to make the terms of peace easier by bringing the United States into the peace conference?

Embargo on Potatoes.

It is understood that the Government has practically decided to prohibit the export of potatoes from Canada, and that an order in council embodying this decision will be passed.

TO PROMOTE FRIENDSHIP

Believing that amity between the peoples of Quebec and Ontario will be most effectually promoted and that prejudices will be more readily removed by closer acquaintance and mutual understanding of each other's customs, viewpoint, and aspirations, fourscore prominent citizens of the sister province visited Ontario recently, stopping in Toronto, Hamilton, and Niagara Falls. They came in response to an invitation from the Ontario committee of the "Bonne Entente"—the movement to encourage friendly relations between the two provinces—to return the visit made by an Ontario delegation to Quebec last October. They were welcomed in Toronto by the local members of that organization, by the civic authorities, and by the governing bodies of the University of Toronto, which conferred upon Sir George Garneau, one of the leaders of the party, a former mayor of Quebec city, a distinguished alumnus and professor of Laval University, and the chairman of the National Battlefields Commission, the honorary degree of Doctor of Laws. Greetings to the people of Ontario from the municipal Council and people of Quebec were presented by Mayor Henri E. Lavigneur, and a message from the rector of the University of Laval to the University of Toronto was delivered by Sir George Garneau.

The visiting party included such well-known public men as Sir Lomer Gouin, Prime Minister of Quebec; Hon. Adelard Turgeon, C. M. G., Speaker of the Quebec Legislative Council; Mr. Justice L. P. Pelletier, formerly Postmaster-General of Canada; Hon. O. C. F. Delage, Senator Beaubien, Judge Dezy, of Three Rivers, President Z. Hebert, of the Montreal Board of Trade, and President L. Gravel, of the Montreal Chambre de Commerce. They were welcomed to Ontario by prominent citizens like J. M. Godfrey, A. E. Ames, W. P. Gundy, James Ryrie, S. R. Parsons, Lieut.-Colonel Mulloy, Professor John Squair, Prof. J. H. Cameron, Prof. St. Elme de Champ, Frank Wise, W. A. Dunlap, Thomas Roden, J. P. Murray, J. P. Langley, I. S. Fairty, James E. Day, T. A. Rowan.

Questionable Quality.

"Is that auto of yours a goer?"

"Not much of a goer."

"Can't be good for much, then, is it?"

"Oh, yes."

"What for?"

"It will stay right with you."

Appearances Against Him.

"Is he a square man?"

"I doubt it."

"Why?"

"He bangs round an awful lot."

Not Necessary.

"Papa?"

"Yes, daughter."

"Would I have to be an heiress to put on airs?"

KING ALBERT'S SUBJECTS ONCE PROSPEROUS AND FREE; ARE NOW VICTIMS OF CREED

GERMANY'S virtuous protestations that her deportation policy in King Albert's little country is a social necessity required by the conditions of unemployment arising from the British blockade are once more punctured, this time by the Belgian Minister at Washington, M. Havenith, who says that Germany herself is responsible for the prostrate state of Belgian industry.

The world knew this before, but it is well to have an authoritative statement from the Belgian representative at the American capital.

Not only did Germany overrun the little country in 1914, slaughter innumerable civilians and lay waste populous towns, but ever since her initial outrages she has systematically sapped the life blood of the kingdom Even now Belgium is paying a monthly war tax of eight million dollars—more than a quarter-million dollars a day. To what end? Why has Germany imposed this burden upon her?

Belgium has committed no wrong She simply endeavored, at the time of the unlawful invasion of her territory, to protect herself. But, previous to the war, she had been prosperous, and Germany had no compunctions in compelling her to pay a levy on her material well-being Whatever the explanation or subterfuge, the real reason is that Belgium has the money and Germany needs it.

As the Belgian Minister at Washington says, raw materials, machines, and tools have been "requisitioned" in Belgium and sent to German soil. The result of course is that industries have been hampered and unemployment has increased. General von Bissing, the Military Governor, has openly said that his business is to guard the interests not of Belgium but of Germany. This is the theory on which the occupation has rested from the first. It is the outworn medieval theory on which the whole German programme of conscienceless aggression is based.

Germany has deported more than 120,000 Belgian workingmen. She professes to have taken only the unemployed, but there is an abundance of testimony to the contrary. Her methods, as well as the deportation itself, have been cruel in the extreme. M. Havenith does not enlarge on this point, but he might properly have done so. All he says is that the Belgian exiles except in a very few instances have refused to work for Germany and that "nearly every one of them has chosen rather the harsh treatment, the privations, the suffering, which he knew would be his lot, rather than aid Germany in her struggle against his brothers."

KING ALBERT

The more Germany "explains" the Belgian deportation, the worse her course appears. Her treatment of her defenceless neighbor has been from the beginning of the war, and still continues to be, a heartless record of unpardonable and unforgettable greed.

Large Field.

"You can't fool all of the people all of the time."

"No, but you can fool enough of them to keep reasonably busy."

Nearly Perfect.

"Can he swim?"

"Yes. He is a fine swimmer."

"And dive?"

"Like a flying machine."

Desperate.

"Who is she going to marry?"

"The Duke De Gall."

"I didn't suppose his fortunes were so low as that."

CHURCHES GAIN IN STRENGTH

MEMBERSHIP INCREASE IN UNITED STATES IS 707,000 IN YEAR.

CHICAGO, March 3.—The churches of the United States have not suffered financially from the war, nor has their ordinary increase of membership been reduced, despite the fact that they have given freely to war relief funds, according to the Year Book of the Federal Council of the Church of Christ in America.

The book shows that the Catholic, Protestant and Eastern Orthodox church had in 1916 more than 40,000,00 communicants. The net increase for the year was 747,000, or 204,000 more than the increase for 1915. In 1890 the total religious strength was 20,618,000, so the membership has increased 94 per cent., and statistics show that the increase was faster than the population.

Of the gains in 1916 about 216,000 were of the Roman Catholic and about 500,000 of the Protestant churches.
